Demonstrators Arraigned After Night in County Jail

A Lesson For The North

Wilson Baker, director of public safety in Selma, Ala., is a law enforcement official who might be able to teach the North some lessons.

Baker, who recently attended an Institute on Police and Community Relations at Kelllogg for their handling of a student group's action in blocking Abbots position of protesting against housing discrimination in East Lansing.

We recognize that East Lansing does have a problem in this area, but we believe the situation can be solved rapidly as possible to solve the problem. But we also realize that the solution won't come over night.

The demonstrators, however, didn't seem to realize this. They seemed to think that their actions would bring about the "freedom" they are so eager about. This is simply not the case.

We are by no means opposed to all demonstrations. But demonstrations, which are openly disregarded merely create new problems and do not significantly contribute to solving old problems.

Open violation of the law, whether by demonstrators or homeowners, is in some ways we cannot condone, regardless of the motives behind it.

If they would stop thinking that those who were arrested might realize that they were doing more harm than good. Little action of a non-violent nature can result in greater exposure or demonstrations. But by getting themselves arrested, the demonstrators could be doing the future some undesirable damage.

That such demonstrations are not accomplishing their purpose is evidenced by the large numbers of hecklers, both students and non-students, that turned out to see the show. To many, the demonstration seemed to have more entertainment value than a protest for social change.

We do not advocate that those interested in opening housing in East Lansing give up the struggle. However, if the demonstrators find no more effective ways to combat the problem, there could be no open violations of existing laws and ordinances.

But Seriously...

By DON SIECKLE

He who doesn't believe in the power of the press to make a difference, never wrote one word. Last week I wrote a column with Phyllis Herbert, partnering to encourage girls give fellows to put out a fire.

I spent the better part of the morning writing this column, and then the better part of the afternoon sitting on the phone as the massive horde of girls who have had to hire eight full-time secretaries.

That's not the kind of effort I have as editor of the Michigan State News, East Lansing, Michigan.

But to the Editor:

The rise of healthy skepticism among people, or at least among those who are used to thinking for themselves, is a good sign. I would like to see a level of skepticism be encouraged that is not only a part of the standard American association.

As the risk of being killed or injured in a civil rights demonstration is minimal, I would like to see a level of skepticism be encouraged that is not only a part of the standard American association.

Rivals Want To Cut Northern Service

State Public Service Commissioner Alan H. McKee yesterday announced that the Interstate Commerce Commission had ordered an investigation into the proposed cutback in the Michigan Central's passenger service to the north. The Commission made its decision as part of a study of the operation of the railroad.

The Commission found that the service was not justified because it was not meeting the needs of the passengers. It recommended that the railroad discontinue the service.

The railroad has 30 days to appeal the decision. If it does not appeal, the service will be discontinued.
