EDITORIAL

The Missing Complainant

The case of William M. Smith, a former Michigan State University student, who filed a complaint against the university for alleged racial and religious discrimination, offers an interesting perspective on the state of university relations.

Smith filed his complaint after being denied admission to the university's law school, a decision that he believed was based on his religious beliefs. The university, however, denied any discrimination and claimed that the decision was based on academic criteria.

The case illustrates the complex nature of university admissions policies and the challenges faced by minority students in the pursuit of higher education. It also highlights the need for robust procedures to ensure fairness and equality in admissions decisions.

The Michigan Civil Rights Commission

The Michigan Civil Rights Commission, established in 1965, is responsible for enforcing state laws that prohibit discrimination in employment, housing, and public accommodations. The commission investigates complaints and may issue remedies to victims of discrimination.

The case of William M. Smith underscores the importance of such commissions in protecting the rights of individuals and ensuring a more equitable society.

The Long Hot Summer Of 1965 - With No Politics

By Dave Hanson

The summer of 1965 was a time of transition in American politics. The Civil Rights Movement was gaining momentum, and the Vietnam War was gaining international attention. It was a period of both hope and frustration, as the country faced a number of challenging issues.

The summer of 1965 was also marked by a number of significant events, including the Selma to Montgomery march, the March on Washington, and the Watts Riots. These events helped to galvanize the civil rights movement and contributed to the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1968.

As the country entered the fall of 1965, the Vietnam War continued to be a major issue, and the political landscape was shifting. The summer of 1965 was a time of change, a time of hope and a time of struggle, as the country faced the challenges of the 1960s.

"Practical" Lizzie Portrayed

By John Talbot, who plays opposite her husband in "The Rainmaker," appears in Demonstration Hall, has played the role of plain farm girl Lizzie for two years.

"Life isn't perfect," Mrs. Rutledge, assistant professor of speech, said. "No, life isn't perfect, but it is plain beautiful."

Mrs. Rutledge has always loved the movie "The Rainmaker," which was released in 1948. In the film, Lizzie is portrayed as a simple-minded farm girl who is hopelessly in love with a fast-talking confidence man.

However, in real life, Mrs. Rutledge is a practical woman who is well-versed in the arts of life. She is currently working on a master's degree in comparative literature and has written several articles on the subject.

"In real life, Lizzie is a practical woman who is able to handle the problems of life with ease," Mrs. Rutledge said. "She is a woman who is able to see the humor in life and is able to laugh at herself."

State's Own L-Shaped Room—That's The Outdoor Pool

JOEY BENSON and Doug Hankey were both in dry-dock when their respective tourneys began. "This year," Hankey commented, "is a lot milder than the two we've seen so far in my golf career."

Some investigators blamed the Big Ten Tourney troubles on a lack of recent competitive experience. One of the tourney's champions, Albert Albers of the University of Miami, added, "It's a little bit like the golf Apollo did this week in pizza-gate."

"I mean, it was only May 19th when Aston was eliminated in the second round of the NCAA. Now, it's even May 7th when Albers is eliminated in the first round of the Big Ten. Can you believe it?"

More than 25,000 swimmers varied from a minimum of four feet to a maximum of six feet. The swimming depth slopes from a minimum of four feet to a maximum of six feet. The diving area is 16 feet deep.

The pool is equipped with two 1-meter boards, one 3-meter board and a platform with heights varying from 5-meters, all the way up to the god Apollo did way back to the first Olympic Games.
