U.S. RESUMES VIET NAM BOMBING
Farmers’ Week Here. No Need To Run And Hide

For many of the 35,000 MSU students and the campus community as a whole, it is a time to reflect on the extensive activities of the 35th Annual Farmers’ Week. While the event does create some inconvenience because of the shifting of classes to accommodate an area of national interest, the festival has all but vanished from the school’s social calendar.

MSU STUDENTS seen have been intimidated by the “weird.” The continually flood from the social sciences to the arts. The only reaction to this phenomenon is that we seem to be driven away from discussing our heritage and our part in society, and that the situation is a lot worse than we thought. It is true that perhaps 20 years ago MSU began to show an interest in the social sciences, but this interest has greatly diminished. The situation is becoming more serious as more and more students are concerned with the future of the university and society at large.

MSU has also continued and expanded its endeavors in agriculture and farming. This year, for the first time in its history, MSU is involved in all aspects of agriculture, including farming, scientific research, and education. The institute has also been involved in the development of new techniques and equipment for the benefit of farmers and farm families.

The importance of agriculture to the state is recognized, and MSU has been working hard to improve its programs. The institute has been working to develop new techniques to improve the quality and productivity of farms, and to reduce the costs of production. These efforts have been successful, and the institute’s programs have been well received by farmers and farm families.

Please: Open Sesame!

To the Editor:

It is most interesting to me that there was a hot potato, as the term is used, in my recent letter to the editor on the subject of the “Free Speech” movement. In my letter, I referred to the fact that we should be very careful in what we say, and that we must be careful to respect the rights of others.

In the recent issue of the magazine, I referred to the fact that we should be very careful in what we say, and that we must be careful to respect the rights of others. In my letter, I referred to the fact that we should be very careful in what we say, and that we must be careful to respect the rights of others.

The main reason I referred to the fact that we should be very careful in what we say, and that we must be careful to respect the rights of others, is that we should be careful to respect the rights of others. In my letter, I referred to the fact that we should be very careful in what we say, and that we must be careful to respect the rights of others.

I believe that all of our thoughts and actions should be guided by a principle of respect for others. We should not only be mindful of our own rights, but also of the rights of others. In my letter, I referred to the fact that we should be very careful in what we say, and that we must be careful to respect the rights of others.

U.S.-China Talks Urged

By JOHN HERRON

With the Chinese Communist regime's own factionalism, it is obvious that the issues at hand, according to a state department source, are complex. China and the United States have yet to move in the same direction on most of the issues. The Chinese have indicated that they are ready to talk, but there is no assurance that the talks will go anywhere.
