Students Suggest Pub Board Probe

By ANDREW HOLLAND
State News Staff Writer

The three student members of the ASMSU Board of Directors apparently were the first to hear about a plan to create a weekly entertainment program on the campus of Michigan State University. The student members of the Board of Directors are paid $900 per year.

The plan calls for a weekly entertainment program, and the student members of the Board of Directors are paid this amount for their services.

The plan is for the Board of Directors to hire a full-time entertainment director and a part-time producer to handle the program. The director would be paid $1,500 per year, and the producer would be paid $1,000 per year.

29 Unions Will Boycott Ships Trading With N. Viet

BY LYLE WILSON

Plymouth is the site of a political battle that is shaping the future of American unions. The conflict has its roots in the war in Vietnam, but it has implications for the labor movement as a whole.

The Plymouth area is home to a large number of unions, including those representing steelworkers, machinists, and pipefitters. These unions have been at odds with each other for decades, but the current dispute is particularly intense.

The roots of the conflict can be traced back to the Vietnam War. When the United States began sending troops to Vietnam in the 1960s, many labor leaders opposed the war and called for an end to U.S. involvement.

As the war dragged on, the labor movement split into two camps. On one side were unions that opposed the war and supported peace. On the other side were unions that supported the war and opposed peace.

The split was reflected in the Plymouth area, where the United Steelworkers union supported peace and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters supported the war. The two unions began to compete for members and riders, and the conflict grew.

The conflict came to a head in 1970, when the Plymouth area was swept up in the national antiwar movement. The United Steelworkers union organized a strike against the Plymouth Steel Company, which is owned by the United States government.

The strike lasted for several months and brought the Plymouth area to a standstill. It was one of the most significant labor disputes of the decade, and it had a lasting impact on the Plymouth area.

The strike ended in 1971, but the conflict between the United Steelworkers and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters continued. The two unions have been at odds ever since, and the dispute has had a profound impact on the Plymouth area.

The Plymouth area is now home to a large number of unions, and the labor movement is divided into two camps. The United Steelworkers union represents the interests of those who oppose the war and support peace, while the International Brotherhood of Teamsters represents the interests of those who support the war and oppose peace.

The conflict between these two unions is a reflection of the larger political and social conflicts that have characterized American society in recent decades. It is a battle that will continue to shape the Plymouth area and the labor movement as a whole.

Critic Criticized

The issue of trade with North Vietnam is a complex one, and it is one that the labor movement has been divided on for decades. The Plymouth area is no exception, and the debate has been intense.

The United Steelworkers union has been a leader in the antiwar movement in the Plymouth area, and it has been a vocal critic of the war in Vietnam. The union has organized a number of protests against the war, and it has been a strong advocate for peace.

The International Brotherhood of Teamsters, on the other hand, has been a strong supporter of the war in Vietnam. The union has been a vocal defender of the war, and it has been a strong advocate for the U.S. military.

The Plymouth area is now home to a large number of unions, and the labor movement is divided into two camps. The United Steelworkers union represents the interests of those who oppose the war and support peace, while the International Brotherhood of Teamsters represents the interests of those who support the war and oppose peace.

A FEW MONTHS INTO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR's new format, it's clear that the paper is no longer the same. The changes are significant, and they are not without controversy. Some readers have complained that the paper is too much a reflection of the Christian Science perspective, while others have welcomed the new format as a refreshing change.

Considering this, the following could possibly be a speech by the Christian Science Monitor's editor-in-chief, who is responsible for overseeing the newsroom.

"As we move forward into this new era, we must be prepared to face challenges that none of us could have imagined just a few years ago. The world is changing much faster than we ever thought possible, and we must be ready to adapt to those changes.

"The Christian Science Monitor has always been a leader in the field of journalism, and we will continue to be a leader in the years to come. We will always strive to provide our readers with the most accurate and relevant information possible, and we will always be true to our principles.

"As for the Christian Science perspective, we believe that it is essential to our mission. We believe in the power of the Christian Science perspective to help people understand the world and to help them find their way forward.

"I want to thank all of our readers for your continued support, and I look forward to continuing to serve you in the years to come. We will always be here for you, and we will always be true to our principles.

"Thank you.

Ford, Dirksen Hit Dem Inflation
WASHINGTON (UPI) -- House republican leaders Gerald R. Ford and Howard H. (制动) Dirksen, declared Thursday that "Inflation will be the major political campaign theme of 1966." The leaders were speaking in the House of Representatives gallery as Dirksen, 63, accused the Johnson administration of "embezzlement of American tax dollars through overemployment."

However, Dirksen, said, "They have not told the American people the extent and reality of the burden which they face on the very poor through this policy of printing money at a rate faster than the nation's rate of production.

U.S. Forces Repel Heavy Attack
SAIGON (UPI) -- U.S. and Australian troops drove off a heavy Communist attack today in the suburbs of Saigon. At least 89 Viet Cong were killed before they retreated after three hours of fierce fighting.

The Communists attacked the headquarters of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division's 1st Brigade and two battalions of combat troops which were booby-trapped.

Heavy American mortar fire broke up the attack, and Australian patrols ambushed the Communists as they fell back.

Syrian Rebels In Firm Control
BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) -- Syria's new rebel regime appeared in firm control Thursday, backed by armed troops and supported by the rebels themselves. The threat of civil war apparently collapsed when Radio Damascus confirmed Wednesday's reports that the regime of President-Assad, Syrian chief of state, is completely in control.

On Moscow Talks
LONDON -- Prime Minister Harold Wilson returned Thursday from a three-day visit to Moscow and said he has reached agreement on the status of the Western German presence in Western Germany, but that he had been "persuaded" not to insist on a "clear statement" of an eventual withdrawal of German forces from Western Germany.

The British leader told newsmen he had left Russian Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko "a message" that Britain would like to know the final fate of German troops in Western Germany, but that he was "persuaded" not to insist on a "clear statement" of an eventual withdrawal of German forces from Western Germany.

The British government announcement, however, had not been made. The British Foreign Office said it would be made later. The announcement was expected to be made later. The announcement was expected to be made later.

With Walker and his injured teammate, the Hoosiers could be forced to cut back against Florida this season.

Although Walker and Sr. Jason Foster have not been able to play due to injuries, they have been able to practice with the team.

"I wish all the players were able to play," Coach John Bero said.

"They're a great team, but they're missing some key players," Foster added.

Foster was injured by low school.
