Polls Favor Labor
In British Election

LONDON (AP) - Britain today rejected the socialists in a strongly divided election, making it seem likely that the socialists would be returned to power with a slender majority in Parliament following World War II. Public opinion polls, the results of which have been closely watched by the British and American press, indicated that the socialists would win a majority of seats in the election.

The polls, which are believed to be more accurate than those in the United States, indicated that the socialists would win about 375 seats, compared to 325 for the Conservatives. The results were considered to be a major victory for the socialists, who have been in power since 1945.

The only recording of Ernest Hemingway reading his works

This historic album was created from the non-legitimate tape recordings Hemingway made for himself and his friends in the late 1950s and early 1960s. They have never been available to the public.

The late Ernest Hemingway began to make tape recordings in 1956...the Audio Visual Archives includes the Hemingway Audio Work Collection. This collection includes unedited and untranscribed tapes of Hemingway reading his works and letters, as well as unedited and untranscribed interviews with various people, including his publishers, editors, and friends.

Because these recordings have never been released, the American Library Association's 2010 Print and Recording Award for Excellence in Recorded Literature included the Hemingway Audio Work Collection in its honor.

Pierced Ears: Fad Spurs ‘Earie’ Cult

By LEO ZAIME
State Journal Staff Writer

The constant needling canals have been since bell tunrs has been as common a favor as a ring to their ears. Expecting the woman’s gait must not be excluded. Ear piercing, being performed by some mav, has its big in the MRS. campus, and East Lansing jewelry stores report performances.

One Health Center reports has performed 100s of ears. The number of piercing requests generally per 1,000 people, per year and the number of those who continue to use the piercing service. The number of piercing requests has increased by 300% since the beginning of last year. The woman who goes and says, “I never want to wear an earring,” says Dr. Haas, does not want to be a party to any kind of ‘hype.

The danger in ear piercing lies in the possible secondary infection that can result from an infection. Dr. Haas has reported only 5 per cent infections in the past 10 years, but this is still a risk he warns against and considers due to the extreme environmental factors in the area.

The operation involves quite primitive techniques: a needle, earring, and a sharp needle. This method has been used to heal the ear in preparation for the piercing.

After the ear is sufficiently numbed, a small incision is made at the base of the lobe to allow the needle to enter the ear. The needle is then inserted through the skin and into the ear canal, and a small incision is made at the end of the needle to allow the earring to enter the ear canal. The incision is then sewn up and a dressing is applied.

Due to the recent increase of these “piercing parties,” there are many precautions that have increased sales in piercing services.

The piercing is no longer just a fashion statement, but a style statement. The trend is no longer just about the earring, but the entire ear. The ear can now be seen as a canvas for the person.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Until Thursday night, when the Presidents Council of Student Union Officers met in a special session to try to avert a split, the University of Michigan would have become a single student government.

The presidents council, which is made up of the student union presidents from the nation's top 30 universities, met in Washington in connection with the annual meeting of the National Student Union Federation.

At issue was the question of whether the Student Union, headed by John C. Stempel, should merge with the University of Michigan Student Union, which would have resulted in a united student government.

News Access Bill Expected To Pass

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A House subcommittee on Friday voted to limit amendments on a bill that would extend the government's authority to limit access to the Nevada test site. The measure, which is a key component of the Nuclear Test Site Control Act, was approved by the subcommittee and is expected to be considered by the full House this week.

The bill, which was introduced by Representative John L. M. Martin, in agreement with the Atomic Energy Commission, would allow the government to restrict access to the test site in order to prevent nuclear testing. The subcommittee's approval of the bill is a significant step towards enacting the measure.

The bill was debated in the House earlier this week, with some members expressing concerns about the impact of the bill on the country's foreign policy. However, the subcommittee's approval indicates that the measure is likely to pass in the House.

Western System Slammed

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Western System has come under criticism once again, with several members of Congress calling for its reform and improvement.

"It's a system that needs improvement," said Representative John L. M. Martin during a hearing on the bill. "We need to ensure that the system is functioning efficiently and effectively." The bill, introduced by Representative Martin, aims to strengthen the Western System by providing greater oversight and accountability.

The bill has faced opposition from some members of Congress, who argue that it would be too costly and time-consuming to implement. However, the subcommittee's approval of the bill indicates that it is likely to pass in the House.

Atom Site Picked

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Atomic Energy Commission has announced the location of a new nuclear reactor, located in the foothills near Brookhaven, New York. The new site is expected to be operational by 2023.

The decision to locate the reactor near Brookhaven was made after a thorough review of several potential sites across the United States. The new reactor is expected to be the largest of its kind in the country, capable of producing 1,000 megawatts of electricity.

The announcement has been met with mixed reactions, with some members of Congress expressing concerns about the potential environmental impact of the new reactor. However, the subcommittee's approval of the bill indicates that it is likely to pass in the House.
