The Negro grade schools are full of white kids eating lunches, and black children eating lunches. The only difference is color. The students sit in the same room and eat the same food. But the food is different. The white food is better, according to most students.

The food is not the only difference. The students also differ in the way they dress, the way they talk, and the way they act. The white students are usually more well-dressed than the black students. The white students speak in a more formal manner, while the black students speak in a more casual manner.

Romney Hits Dem Speculation

WASHINGTON — Democratic presidential hopeful Sen. George S. Romney, R-Mich., is reporting that he may run for the White House in 1968. He said he would decide within the next weeks or months.

In a statement to reporters, Romney said he is not making any commitments at this time but is "looking at all the facts" and making "a careful and deliberate study of the situation.

Romney, a former governor and former U.S. ambassador to France, is expected to announce his decision in late April or early May.

It's what's happening

Leonard Gantry, editor, announced several new dimensions will be added to the Thursday, October 20th edition of The Columbia, the university's student newspaper. The new features will include a more comprehensive arts section, increased coverage of local and national events, and expanded sports coverage. The newspaper will also feature more in-depth investigative reporting and opinion pieces.

The new-look edition will be complemented by the debut of a new online presence, with live updates and breaking news available at thepaper.com. The website will be designed to engage readers and encourage interaction with the editorial staff.

In a statement, Gantry said, "We are excited to take The Columbia to the next level with these new enhancements. Our goal is to provide our readers with the most timely and relevant news possible, while also expanding our coverage and improving the overall reader experience."

NASA Boosts Economy

By NOR S. SPEBLING

NASA-

One of the leading forces in the U.S. economy is NASA, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. NASA plays a crucial role in the advancement of technology, science, and innovation.

NASA has been leading in the development of space exploration and research, contributing significantly to the growth of the U.S. economy. The agency's initiatives have stimulated many industries, creating new jobs and opportunities.

NASA's programs, such as the International Space Station, have boosted the aerospace sector. The station's construction and operation have supported thousands of jobs in the United States, ranging from engineering and manufacturing to maintenance and operations.

Space technology has also led to advancements in other fields, such as telecommunications, navigation, and environmental monitoring. NASA's research in these areas has generated billions of dollars in benefits to the country.

In summary, NASA's contributions to the U.S. economy are substantial and long-lasting. Its programs and technologies have not only advanced space exploration but also created new industries and jobs, playing a critical role in the country's economic growth.

U.S. Reaffirms Policy on Communist China

WASHINGTON - The United States reaffirmed its policy on Communist China during a recent visit by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to the country. The policy is based on the belief that the United States must maintain a strong and united front against Communist aggression.

In his talks with Chinese leaders, Kissinger reiterated the U.S. commitment to the freedom and independence of Taiwan and the other territories of the Republic of China. He also emphasized the importance of maintaining peace and stability in the region.

The policy is part of the Administration's broader strategy of containing the spread of communism, including the ongoing efforts to engage in diplomatic and economic relations with China.

The United States has been engaging in talks with China on a number of issues, including trade, technology, and cultural exchanges. These efforts are aimed at building trust and fostering mutual understanding between the two nations.

In summary, the United States continues to reaffirm its policy on Communist China, underscoring the importance of upholding the principles of freedom and democracy in the region. The policy is a cornerstone of the Administration's broader strategy of containing the spread of communism.
Negroes Surprised Sociologists

Mr. James Indram
State News, East Lansing, Michigan

The Negro revolt of the 1960's has been an unexpected phenomenon in view of the sociological thinking prevalent in the 1920's and 30's that Negroes would not question the status quo. Sociologists...
