Pol Sci Resignations Halt Department Expansion

Staff Losses Offset

By ANDREW W. LOLLISON

A flurry of resignations has forced the Dept. of Political Science into a hiring spree. Because of recent budgetary restrictions, the tenured faculty has been restricted to the hiring of 10 new faculty members in the next academic year.

The new hires will bring the total faculty to 20, the same as in previous years. The assistant professor positions will be filled by new hires in the next academic year, but the number of assistant professors will be reduced to 10, the same as in previous years.

STEP NEEDS HELP—your help. (STEP) has run into some difficulties. It has serious problems, and, like Michigan State, it needs your help to get through the summer. This summer, STEP planned to build 100 student houses. So far, STEP has only built 10, and 17 more are needed. 90 student houses must be completed by August 15th to keep this year's project to work. The reason for this is lack of money. There is no way to reduce the amount of money needed to build a house, and many houses have already been stopped. Is there any chance that this summer's project will be completed? This is where the students and faculty can help. Your help is needed to raise the money to fund this project. $1000 a 25 donation would sponsor a floor of the student house. It is my belief that any student who is interested in the completion of STEP must contribute to the project. The STEP has had some problems, but only small enough because of the students' help.

WASHINGTON, CURTIS DRAFTED BY NBA

BY LARRY WERNER

Washington, D.C. -- The Detroit Pistons of the National Basketball Association (NBA) announced yesterday that they had drafted Curtis, a junior from Michigan State University, with the number 10 pick in the first round of the NBA draft.

This is the fourth straight year that the Pistons have selected a guard in the first round of the NBA draft. In 1961 they picked Al Cervino from the University of Oregon; in 1962 they selected Don Zimmerman from Duke and last year they took Ken Williams from Arizona State.

Curtis, a 6-foot-3-inch guard, is expected to bring a more versatile and aggressive style of play to the Pistons than the team has seen in its previous guard selections. He is known for his ability to shoot from the outside and his quickness on defense.

The Pistons are looking for a player who can contribute immediately to the team's lineup and Curtis is expected to be that type of player. He has shown a strong work ethic and a desire to improve his game, which should make him a valuable asset to the Pistons.

The Detroit Pistons will use Curtis in a role similar to the one he had at Michigan State, where he was a two-time All-American and a three-time All-Big Ten selection. He was the team's leading scorer for three consecutive years and was named the Big Ten player of the year in 1964.

The Pistons have a strong nucleus of young players and are looking to build a team that can contend for the NBA title. Curtis fits well into this plan and is expected to make an immediate impact on the team.

The Detroit Pistons will have the option to match any offer sheet that Curtis signs with another team and they are confident that they can keep him in Detroit for the long term.

Curtis is expected to sign a contract with the Pistons in the near future and will begin his NBA career with the team's summer league team in Canada. He will then join the Pistons for training camp in September.

The LSD is predominantly an American problem, and because of the high volume and morale of the drug, its use is considered a significant threat to the well-being of Michigan and the United States. In France, this problem does not exist, and French police do not receive high numbers of drug-related calls.

Here in Michigan, however, concerns abound. A study conducted by the Michigan State University found that the drug use among students was increasing. This study was conducted in the spring of 1966.

The LSD is a drug that causes a temporary alteration in perception and thought processes. It is a hallucinogenic drug that is used to produce an altered state of consciousness.

The LSD has been legally available to doctors for research purposes, and it has been used to produce a temporary state of altered consciousness. However, the use of LSD has been restricted to doctors and is illegal for general use.

Red Chinese Are Learning Self-Care, Journalist Says

By JANE KODEK

The big news of the week was not in China, but rather the fact that China is stepping up its efforts to break out of the Maoist political mold. The Chinese government has announced new measures to promote economic growth and modernization, including the establishment of new special economic zones and the introduction of market-oriented policies. This move suggests that China is moving away from the cultural revolution of the 1960s and 1970s, and is seeking to establish a more stable and sustainable economic model. This is significant because the Chinese economy plays a crucial role in the global economy, and any changes in its direction could have far-reaching implications for the world as a whole.

The new measures include the establishment of new special economic zones, which will be given greater autonomy to attract foreign investment and promote innovation. The government has also announced plans to gradually reduce state ownership of the economy and increase the role of the private sector. These changes are expected to create more job opportunities and improve the living standards of Chinese citizens.

The new economic policy is expected to boost the country's growth rate, which has been slowing down in recent years. The government has set a target of a 7% growth rate for the year, which is higher than the 6% growth rate achieved in 2015.

The move towards market-oriented policies is also expected to improve the country's international standing, as it shows that China is willing to adopt more open and liberal policies.

In conclusion, the Chinese government's new measures are a significant step towards economic modernization and a move away from the cultural revolution of the past. These changes are expected to have a positive impact on the country's growth rate and international standing. It remains to be seen how these measures will be implemented and whether they will succeed in achieving their goals.

Is East Lansing Housing Discriminatory?

By BOBBY ZODER
State News Staff Writer

How does East Lansing treat Negroes? The demonstrators may not know to a man of discrimination. The residents may not know, but the Negroes do. Negroes have been living in East Lansing for many years and the results of the demonstrators' efforts are not what they expected. Although the city has made some improvements, the Negroes do not feel that they are being treated fairly.

The demonstrators are not new to this city. East Lansing has been a target of their efforts for many years. They have been trying to force the city to make some changes in housing practices and to provide better facilities for the Negroes. The city has been slow to respond to their demands, and as a result, the demonstrators have staged several protests to draw attention to their cause.

The city of East Lansing has been trying to improve the situation for Negroes. They have made some changes in the past, but the demonstrators believe that more needs to be done. They want the city to provide better housing opportunities and to ensure that Negroes are treated equally in all aspects of life.

The demonstrators' efforts have had some success. The city has made some changes in housing practices and has provided better facilities for the Negroes. However, the demonstrators believe that more needs to be done, and they will continue to fight for their cause.
ASMSU OK's Center Plan

ASMSU Student Board approved Tuesday a tentative proposal for a new center on the MSU campus.

The board stated that the proposed center would cost $1,500,000, or $250 per student, and would be designed to serve the needs of the student body. The center would be located in the Student Union and would include classrooms, a library, and a student center.

The proposal includes the construction of a new building on the site of the old Student Union, which will be demolished. The new building will be financed through a combination of state and federal funds, as well as private donations.

The Student Union, which has been in use for over 50 years, is in need of renovation and expansion. The center will provide additional space for student activities and will improve the student experience on campus.

The project is expected to be completed by the fall of 1975.

United Nations and China had been immediately.

The talks are expected to continue for several weeks, and are expected to result in a sta-
