Mansfield asks reduction of U.S. forces in Europe

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senator Henry M. (Mike) Mansfield, D-Mont., proposed Wednesday that the United States reduce the number of troops in Europe from 120,000 to 60,000 within four years.

Mansfield is the senior Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and is one of the leading anti-war senators. He said that if the United States continued to maintain such a large military presence in Europe, it would be perceived as a threat to the Soviet Union and other European countries.

Mansfield's proposal was met with skepticism by some military analysts who argued that a reduction in troop levels could undermine the stability of Europe.

MEDI CAL CURRICULUM

First 2 Years Made More Palatable

By Roderick Mellough

The first year of medical school often proves to be the most trying for many students. This may be due to the fact that half of the proposed curriculum plans are abandoned.

One case in point was a student who became very discouraged during his first year in medical school. He said that he had been told that he would have to study 12 hours a day, and that the material was too difficult for him. He decided to drop out of medical school and return to his previous job.

There are several factors that contribute to this phenomenon. First, medical school is a time of intense pressures. Students are expected to learn a vast amount of material in a short period of time. They are also faced with the challenge of mastering new concepts and skills.

Second, medical school is a time of great stress. Students are often under a great deal of pressure to succeed. They are expected to perform well on exams and to provide good care for their patients.

Third, medical school is a time of great anxiety. Many students are afraid of the unknown. They are not sure what to expect and they are concerned about whether they will be able to succeed.

Second, there is the matter of the cost. The allies are not likely to agree to anything that would increase their financial burden.

Third, there is the matter of the future. The allies are not likely to agree to anything that would jeopardize their ability to maintain their military power.

CIVIL RIGHTS PROGRAM

Cavanagh's Plan Big

Detroit Mayor Jerome P. Cavanagh has prepared a multi-billion dollar civil rights program to "compensate for the failure to act for 100 years."

The Democratic mayor called for government compensation, retraining, and the use of "hiring and retention guidelines" to help minority groups in the job market. Cavanagh cited the need to learn more than they have in the space age on society, or they will "stand no chance," Cavanagh said. "The time is now to undertake a special effort to overcome past discrimination and to help all Americans in their search for equality.

The proposed civil rights program includes bonding, refinancing, and a study of the causes of the Detroit riot of July 1967. It also calls for attaching additional consideration to the space-age interests and to the space-age environment. Cavanagh said the study will be a "limited study" and the government will have to "listen and learn.""
