New 'Small College' Scheduled For 1967

By KYLE C. KERBAWY
State News Editor-in-Chief

Justin Morrill College is to have a little brother.

A second small residence college, to be patterned along the same lines as the infant JMC, is scheduled to open next fall. The college, announced Thursday by the MSU Board of Trustees, will offer a liberal program in the sciences, JMC, now in its second year, offers a liberal education in the humanities.

Frederic B. Dutton, director of the Science and Mathematics Teaching Center, was named chairman of the planning committee for the new semi-autonomous college. Dutton expects that the committee will be named within the next few weeks. Curricula offered by the college, as well as a site and name for the school, will be decided within the next few months, according to Dutton. The college will be housed in one of the dormitories, as is Justin Morrill now.

As soon as this information is determined, it will be passed on to students accepted for next year's freshman class, Dutton said. He expected the school's enrollment would not differ greatly from JMC's first freshman class, somewhere between 250 and 400.

We have a three-to-four month lead over what Justin Morrill college had in recruiting students, Dutton added.

The first step towards creating the new college was taken in June of 1965 when the Education Policy Committee (EPC) approved tentative plans for the school, provost Howard R. Neville said. Guidelines for the school were drawn up by a committee chaired by Dean Richard U. Byerum of the College of Natural Science. Final approval was granted then by EPC.

The college was created as another step towards meeting the problems of a multi-versity, Dutton said. By creating small colleges within a large institution, MSU hopes to be able to better meet the needs of students and recognize them as individuals.

"Within a small, semi-autonomous unit," he added, "educational experimentation is more feasible."

Plans for what is now Justin Morrill College were announced in early winter of 1964. The college, housed in Snyder-Phillips dormitories, opened with a class of 340 students, according to Dean Gordon Rohman. Two hundred fifty returned this year and another 325 freshmen were added.

Two surprise witnesses produced at O'Brien trial

By BOBBY SODEN
State News Staff Writer

Both prosecution and defense produced surprise witnesses Thursday as the morals trial of State Sen. Bernard F. O'Brien went into its eighth day.

A Negro coed testified that O'Brien's chief private investigator met her Wednesday evening to question her on the background of a prosecution witness, Beth Shapiro.

Yvonne Jenkins, 19, an MSU sophomore, told the court that a friend of hers took her to a restaurant Monday where she met Peter Bill, who is O'Brien's private detective, and Bill's son.

An angry Defense Attorney John D. O'Connell delayed the trial almost an hour after the noon recess when he insisted that he, O'Brien, and Bill be allowed to take statements from Miss Jenkins. Miss Jenkins, a police administration student interested in an FBI career, said Bill told her he was an investigator and she "got the impression" that he was with the State Dept.

Bill asked her several questions about who Miss Shapiro dated and what she did at parties, Miss Jenkins said.

"I told him that I did not know anything about her personal life, that I had only met her a week ago," Miss Jenkins told the court.

Bill asked Miss Jenkins to meet O'Brien at court this morning, apparently to testify as a defense witness. Instead, Miss Jenkins contacted the University police.

Constituent testifies-

The other surprise witness, Stanley E. Reeves, one of O'Brien's constituents, testified he was with the senator in the capitol from 11:15 to 12:15 the morning of May 27, a time the senator is charged with asking a coed to pose for pornographic pictures.

Reeves explained he remembered the time because he checked his watch when he put a nickel in a parking meter in front of the capitol for one hour's parking.

Prosecuting Attorney Donald L. Reisig recalled him to the stand later in the day, after checking the capitol parking meters and finding that they were nickel-half hour meters.

Reeves said he was sure he used only one nickel in the meter.

Three coeds who previously identified the senator as the man who asked them to pose for "stag" films were recalled by Reisig and denied being part of the insurance "conspiracy" that O'Brien charged them with Monday. They also identified the senator's red Chevrolet as the one from which they were propositioned.

Miss Shapiro, Brookline, Mass., junior, said she was positive the senator was the same man who approached her on Grand River Avenue June 2 because "certain expressions and obvious grammatical errors" he used when testifying were the same as when he allegedly propositioned her.

All three coeds were asked during cross-examination if they recalled seeing a small crack on the front windshield of the senator's car when they talked with him last spring, which O'Brien claims has been there since last winter. The young women all testified they could not remember the crack.

FAUST BREAKS TIE

ASMSU to get salaries

By BEV TWITCHELL
State News Staff Writer

Compensation committee chairman Ralph Faust broke a 3-3 tie in the committee to approve compensation for student government officials for this term.

The vote within the committee was brought to a tie Tuesday night when Women's Inter Residence Council (WIC) mandated its representative to vote against compensation.

The compensation proposal is a compromise "hopefully acceptable to MHA (Men's Hall Assn.), WIC and others," Faust said.

MHA, WIC and Inter-Cooperative Council (ICC) submitted the three dissenting votes.

"We tried to be fair to those who are against compensation," Faust said.

The report of the compensation committee is final and may be changed only if 10 per cent of the full-time undergraduate students petition for a referendum.

Major changes in the final report include recommendations for a public opinion poll, statistically validated, concerning the compensation reports. The results would be published and used for reference by future compensation committees.

A second recommendation asks that the dates calling for committee reports be pushed back to allow more time for student opinion to be known.

This latter recommendation is in answer to the primary complaint of WIC and MHA, Faust said.

"With the addition of these recommendations, formulated after all the groups had mandated their representatives and at the suggestion of representatives of the dissenting groups," the report says, "we feel we have a report supported by a vast majority of the student body; and consequently allot compensation in the terms and manner described within this report."

The only change in the allocation of compensation is the decrease of the secretary's compensation by $50. Faust explained that there had been confusion concerning the secretary's role.

Compensation now stands at $75 for the chairman for full term, $70 for the vice chairman and cabinet president, $65 for the comptroller, $20 to the major govern-

ON ASIAN TOUR

LBJ meets Aussies, ducks Viet protesters

CAMBERRA, Australia (AP) -- President Johnson carried his meet-the-people campaign into Australia Thursday but ducked a collision with demonstrators opposing the war in Viet Nam.

His Air Force jet swooped in from New Zealand in late afternoon after what aides said was a highly successful day in Wellington, the President's first overseas foreign stop in his six-nation Far East tour.

In a speech at the airport, he again warned against expecting miracles when the summit conference of allies in Viet Nam opens in Manila Monday.

"The hard work of securing the peace is not done by miracles," he said.

Australians lining the motorcade route whooped it up at their first glimpse of an American president in their country.

"I don't know when I've seen so many smiling faces in all my time," Johnson observed happily.

The only hostile displays came from critics of the Viet Nam policy of Johnson and of Holt, whose government faces a Nov. 26 general election. The opposition Labor party opposes Australia's use of 4,500 troops to fight the Reds in South Viet Nam.

The demonstrators were relatively few. They milled about in front of Johnson's downtown hotel in anticipation of his arrival.

While they shouted "Go home Yank!" to American newsmen, they appeared to be more in high spirits than angry.

Most of the demonstrators were students from Australian National University.

The students never got a look at Johnson. The President stopped off at Holt's mansion for an unscheduled dinner. Later he slipped into the hotel through a back entrance. Guards kept tight security.

In his speech, Johnson joined Holyoake in pledging to defend against what he termed Red aggression against South Viet Nam. Johnson departed from his prepared text to hit back at the critics.

River cleanup

The MSU Outing and Forestry clubs will hold a Red Cedar River "clean-up campaign" Sunday.

Members of the clubs will meet at the Canoe Shelter at 2 p.m. and will use canoes to pick up the floating rubbish on the river.

The Maintenance Dept. will supply the group with canoes and a truck to haul the trash away.

Anyone wishing to help from the shore will be welcomed.

HOMECOMING 1966

Judges rate Queen candidates at question and answer sessions

Homecoming Queen Lynn Heino and her court must have breathed a sigh of relief when the selection process was over.

Lynn, a physical science major from Oscoda, will be attended by Margaret Benson, Port Huron junior in literature; Harriet Davidson, Lansing senior in speech; Jill Lawson, Pontiac sophomore; Cherry McGee, Benton Harbor senior in biological science; Beverly Otaskey, Detroit sophomore in romance languages. Also, Rae Petelle, Dearborn junior in nursing; Carol Sanborn, Birmingham senior; Jo-Jo Shetty, Oak Park sophomore in speech and Deborah Somes, Grosse Pointe junior in psychology.

All the girls will receive loving cups and will be seen during half-time of the MSU-Purdue football game.

The selection, which started over a week ago is a demanding process.

Few know what the final selecting process is after a candidate leaves her residence hall or organization sponsoring her.

Tuesday night, Oct. 11, 72 candidates met in the Union for what proved to be the first of three evenings of activity for them.

Five at a time, the girls faced a court of student judges, four men and two women.

They were asked questions concerning their major, social interest and dating problems.

Conductor Falcone ends 39-year career

The retirement of Leonard Falcone, professor of music and the dean of big Ten band directors, was approved Thursday by the Board of Trustees.

He will be succeeded next July 1 by Harry Began, currently conductor of hands and associate professor of music education at Wayne State University.

Falcone, who has been at MSU since 1927, will remain here as a consultant until his retirement becomes effective July 1, 1968.

A graduate of the University of Michigan's School of Music, Falcone is widely known as a band director, adjudicator, guest conductor and artist on the euphonium.

Under his tutelage, MSU's bands have gained national prominence. His marching bands have performed for three U. S. Presidents, most recently at Lyndon Johnson's 1965 inauguration; at the 1964 New York World's Fair; and at three Rose Bowl festivals.

Falcone has written numerous articles for music journals, and several orchestral transcriptions for solo instruments and the concert band.

He has been on the board of directors of the American Bandmasters Assn., divisional chairman of the National Assn. of College Band Directors and a member of two music organizations, Sinfonia and Kappa Kappa Psi.

Began holds bachelor's and master's degrees from Wayne State, and the Ed.D. degree from the University of Michigan.

He has conducted summer music staffs at Wayne, MSU, the University of Illinois and the National Music Camp at Interlochen. He recently conducted the Michigan Opera Company of Detroit and the International Symphony Orchestra at Port Huron and Sarnia.

Leonard Falcone

A charter member of the American School Band Directors Assn., Began is also an honorary member of the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Assn. and a newly elected member of the American Bandmasters Assn.

Teamwork On Display

Everyone knows it takes teamwork to win football games. Another type of teamwork took place Wednesday night when Hubbard Hall lit up with this message: Pity PU. If the Spartans are as perfect on the field this Saturday as Hubbard was in this display, Purdue will have ample reason to be pitied.

Ticket distribution improvement off to a good start, but . . .

Athletic Director Biggie Munn and ticket manager Bill Beardsley should be commended for their quick action in suggesting changes for the football ticket distribution system.

Specifically they propose that tickets be sold spring term to students, for the following year, and that passes be for specific seats. Student would sit in the same seat every game. The purpose of this is to reduce confusion.

While these are steps in the right direction, both could be improved.

Going steady?

Having the same seat at all games is fine for many people, but not for the fellow who wants to take different girls to different games. Students should be able to get seats on a game to game basis.

Even though tickets are sold in the spring, many students will wait until fall term to get tickets because they may not be sure they will return or because the "football spirit" doesn't motivate them until fall.

Tickets should be sold during registration, as they are now, but we suggest the system be improved.

One improvement would be the sale of the cards in the I.M. building. This would allow students to get the cards without making a special trip. It would also prevent long lines; people are allowed in the I.M. only in relatively small groups, so a large group would not accumulate.

Another improvement would be to have more ticket distribution points around campus. An outlet in Conrad and one in the Union would keep students from having to go too far.

Finally there should be more seats reserved for student use. This year seats were reserved for 70 per cent of the students and 76 per cent bought tickets. The ticket office accommodated them by selling non-existent seats and squeezing extra students into the room allotted.

Operations of this sort are more appropriate for a fly-by-night operation than a major university.

Sufficient seats should be allotted. If they are not taken by students, they can be sold to the general public.

If these suggestions are adopted, the confusion and frustration associated with football ticket purchases would be greatly reduced, if not eliminated.

'U' must: legal first aid

To most people a lawyer is a little like the medieval wizard—he holds a special knowledge that empowers him to perform miracles. With a wave of his law book and the chanting of a few magic incantations like habeas corpus and res ipsa loquitur, a lawyer can save his client tax dollars, keep him out of jail, and perform a myriad of other functions.

This distorted view of the lawyer stems mainly from the layman's ignorance of the law. People realize that the law cannot be figured out by common sense; hence the need and mystical regard for the lawyer and his special knowledge. Unfortunately, many people have such a scant knowledge of the law that they do not always know when they should go to a lawyer. Lawyers are quick to point out that every year many people, through ignorance of the law, miss out on saving money on obscure tax matters, or the handling of wills, etc. Other people may be taken advantage of in tenant-landlord disputes or property squabbles.

In a few years most students now in college will become citizens of suburbia. Some will be in that group that has little understanding of the law. They will have to learn about the law on their own, sometimes the hard way.

If a University purports to graduate academically well-rounded students, if it purports to prepare them for their roles as citizens of a community, it should offer the students a course in practical applications of the law.

In no way should it be thought of as a short course in legal competence.

The course should be organized with two goals in mind: 1) To teach enough about the law so that students can recognize when a lawyer's services are needed. 2) To emphasize every-day legal problems the homeowner might face.

There is no course taught at MSU that meets these goals.

If the University could teach students to recognize when a lawyer can be helpful, it would take a significant step in preparing students for their roles as citizens.

EDITORIAL DISSENT

Prof ratings should be cooperative

EDITOR'S NOTE—Executive reporter Andrew Mollison dissented Thursday from an editorial encouraging the Associated Students of MSU in their plans to issue a pamphlet for use by students in evaluating professors and courses.

The course evaluation pamphlet envisioned by ASMSU and the State News editorial board is intended to help students choose courses and professors.

In other words, if a student sees that 60 per cent of the students taking a course thought it was useless, boring, ineptly taught and too chancey "grade-wise," he'd sign up for another section, or would attempt to avoid the course completely.

So what happens? The section in question is then filled with poor slobs who registered late or didn't look at the pamphlet before pre-registering.

It might be argued that consistently bad ratings would affect a department's judgment of a non-tenured instructor's performance, and that the poor instructor would then be eased out.

I doubt it. Departments have not in the past proved over-eager to promote professors who have been named by the students after months of study, as outstanding teachers.

Evaluations of professors and of courses by students, the only ones who know what's happening in the classroom, is an excellent concept. But, such evaluation should be in a form which would weed out bad professors and encourage good ones.

Such evaluation, whether we like it or not, must be done in cooperation with the faculty.

This cooperative approach, perhaps through having elected student representatives on standing committees within departments, would then allow for improvement of the entire educational system.

OUR READERS' MIND

Zeitgeist serves definite need

To the Editor:

Why the fuss about Zeitgeist? This is 1966. This is the era in which Genet received literary consecration and the Marquis de Sade was translated for the masses. So Zeitgeist isn't as comforting as its Readers Digest. It is typical of hundreds of other literary magazines that are spawned, nourished, and, more often than not, buried annually.

They fill a legitimate need just as does experimental theater, experimental film, and so on. Ideally their success or failure should hinge upon their literary merit.

Aside from satisfying the masochistic needs of their publishers, these magazines serve as a vehicle for contributors who might otherwise not receive exposure without compromising themselves. Perhaps many of them do not deserve exposure (for reasons of talent that is, not choice of expressions).

It can be argued that a writer worth his salt will eventually be printed in one of the "accepted" publications. He may, so long as he writes in an "accepted" manner. It is much less likely to be true of writers who wish to experiment with style or subject matter. One only hopes that talent will triumph over trivia, although there is no guarantee of this. If you cannot tell the flowers from the weeds, you should leave the gardening to those who can.

The question is not whether such magazines should be allowed to exist. It seems to me that, in the case of Zeitgeist, it is a question of distribution. In some locations they are as commonplace and acceptable as newspapers.

Perhaps in less liberal locations distribution is better done by subscription rather than over the counter. This is not surrender, for it is not the function of such magazines to stir up resentment among people who are not interested in them (even though it may increase sales). They are meant for a limited audience who will obtain them if their existence is discreetly made known.

This audience is, hopefully, equipped to judge them in terms of their literary value. That some are not so equipped is not a valid reason for suppressing their publication.

The tragedy is that publications of merit often do not survive while the real garbage endures and multiplies just a few shelves away from Atlantic and Saturday Review and other quality publications.

There is nothing new about the fact that what often stirs up the greatest popular resentment is that which is new and unconventional or is difficult to grasp; not the simple, familiar, banal, revolting garbage that through sheer tenacity has become tolerated if not accepted.

Self proclaimed censors should (but seldom do) recognize the responsibility that goes with their "calling." "Rites of Spring" was considered obscene and vulgar in the Paris of 1913. On the other hand, an unsanctioned magazine should not be waved in the face of responsible officials who must deal with the interests of many diverse groups both on and off campus, and exercise their judgment accordingly.

More on the vote

To the Editor:

I would like to take sharp exception to Sherri Gardner's article of October 7. She states that basic to the argument about the 18-year vote "is the fact that there are some things that are learned only with experience." She goes on to say that "... maturity with which one must deal with these problems comes only with age and experience." My question is simply this: how much age, and what kind of experience is necessary to be qualified to vote? I cannot believe that it is logical for the state of Michigan to assume that 18-year-olds have enough "age and experience" to marry, which has far graver consequences for the individual than voting, but not enough intelligence to vote.

How can it be that at age 18 a man is thought to be old enough to become a member of normal society, with a wife, children, and job, yet have no maturity to have some say in how that society is directed? In the case of the military, how can it be that a man can have the power of life and death over other men, and yet not be able to choose the leaders who send him into the field to kill?

The age of 21 is no magic number of years that is going to suddenly give a person the maturity to vote, or drink or sign contracts for that matter. There exists no logical age to give a person any of these rights.

However, if a limit must be set, why not make it at the age when a man enters society. It may sound trite, but if you are old enough to marry, die, pay taxes, and make presumptuous pronouncements on the qualifications of some people to vote, then you are old enough to be given the right to have some say about the leaders of the society in which you must defend, support, and live.

Kenneth R. Heimer
Junior, Political Science

Fighting no reason

To the Editor:

When I viewed the recent ASMSU opinion poll on the 18-year-old vote issue, I was repulsed to see that one of the affirmative arguments was the inane contention that if one is old enough to die for his country and to pay taxes to support its policies, then he certainly should be allowed the privilege of voting.

While I am in favor of lowering the voting age, I cannot see where such "logic" supports the issue. Physical maturity does not imply intellectual integrity. When one dies for his country, it is usually done in military service, in which case they (the military) are interested only in your body for physical force. Everyone pays taxes, starting with the purchase of more than 25¢ worth of candy, in the form of sales tax, and therefore would "logically" be entitled to vote as to what that money should be used for.

The cause for the 18-year-old vote rests with a contention of a high interest in political affairs developing at that age. This is a result of being immediately affected by the compulsory high school government class; at the particular age of 18, when most are still in said class, their interest could very well be at the highest point of their lives. I think that in an effort to at least appear knowledgeable to their peers, they will examine the issues more thoroughly than many of the adults.

This, I think, is a much more rational argument for the 18-year-old vote than ASMSU's contention.

GUEST EDITORIAL

Students passive, apathetic

Many attempts have been made to assess the current student generation. Some observers see them as political activists, challenging the university administration, protesting the war in Viet Nam, marching for civil rights.

To others, today's students are turning their backs on society and politics in disillusionment, seeking to escape from the world and its problems, looking for refuge in psychedelic experience or narcotics. Still others view the younger generation as hopelessly obsessed with sex.

To all these views of youth today Prof. Seymour M. Lipset, Harvard sociologist, provides a much needed corrective. Examining public opinion surveys, he finds "a picture, not of campus radicalism, but a campus conservatism and passivity." Most students may be described as politically passive, socially conservative, and conventionally moral.

He sees the average student preoccupied with his own personal objectives in life, eager to get into the best universities and the best graduate schools as the most effective way of fostering his own career. The pressures of competition cause him to study harder. Only in relatively few cases do they contribute to a growing suicide and dropout rate and lead to beatnik escapism or political radicalism.

Professor Lipset cites available evidence to show that most students support the Viet Nam war, continue long-established patterns of sexual behavior, and show not less but "more concern and more involvement in religious activities on the campus."

The more radical and the more bizarre get by far the most publicity. The professor warns that undue fascination with these minorities may result in our failing to discern the needs of the more passive, conventional majority. It is a timely warning. His observations should enable us to view the younger generation in clearer perspective.

Explosion kills two miners

MILFORD, Utah (AP) -- An explosion ripped through the underground Cactus copper mine about 30 miles west of Milford yesterday, killing two miners.

Rescue crews reached the bodies of the two victims shortly after the explosion but ran out of oxygen and had to retreat. The explosion was touched off at 6:25 a.m. deep inside the mine. The cause, and extent of damage were not immediately known.

Cactus primarily produces copper, along with some gold and silver, according to the Utah Mining Association. It is located about 150 miles southwest of Salt Lake City in Utah's western desert country.

TO $120 MILLION

MSU costs take big jump in '65

MSU's operating expenses jumped $20,462,456 in the fiscal year 1965-66.

A financial report submitted to the Board of Trustees Thursday listed total expenses as $119,665,909. Costs for 1964-65 were $99,203,453.

Other increases include: State appropriations, up $7,452,182 to $44,735,248. Student fee income, up $1,472,685 to $12,738,590. Plant valuation, up $32,896,082 to $281,317,817. Total enrollment, up 4,757 to 37,804.

General operating expenses accounted for $53,951,392 (45.1 per cent) of the total expenses while research and extension costs were $26,430,781.

Auxiliary activities, including expenses for residence halls, apartments, the Union Building, bookstore and athletics, totaled $27,391,936, 22.8 per cent of the total but, they brought in revenues of $28,069,370, operating at a surplus of $657,434.

The report listed the U.S. government as accounting for $17,893,207, or 14.7 per cent of the total revenue.

Student fees accounted for 10.5 per cent of total revenues. The total amounted to $12,738,590.

Receipts and interest, including departmental receipts from sales and services and interest on invested funds, totaled $31,188,612. The figure is 2.2 per cent of the total.

Morrill-Nelson Act federal funds for land-grant institutions totaled $385,949 - only seven-tenths per cent of the general university fund.

Application of the general University funds included 54.5 per cent of the total for instruction. The figure was $29,416,128.

Plant maintenance and rehabilitation accounted for $7,128,200 of the money spent while student services cost the University $3,613,731 or 6.7 per cent of the total.

General administration cost $633,767. That amount was third lowest of the costs listed in the report.

Lowest "cost" listed was "loss of land grant interest of prior year," $74,000. This was an oblique acknowledgement of the state legislature's apparent abolition of the state's land-grant fund.

'PERENNIAL PROBLEM'

Prices underlie friction

By BILL GARBER
State News Staff Writer
The "perennial" problem arising between students and East Lansing merchants has been reconsidered by the East Lansing Chamber of Commerce.

After considerable investigation, Roger Jonas, the Chamber's executive director, presented his conclusions this week.

"Prices are the underlying cause of the friction. It is the easiest point to attack, and it affects everybody," Jonas began.

He admitted "some merchants have jacked up prices," but "that's not to say all have."

"I'm not saying it (raising prices) is right, because those who have are hurting the image of the total community," Jonas said.

He then explained that "pace-setters and style leaders are priced higher." Also, local merchants carry only the "middle 80 per cent," Jonas said, indicating that very low or high priced items aren't in demand.

Lower prices can often be found, Jonas said. "Comparison shopping is possible in East Lansing, but people don't often compare on certain items," Jonas explained.

"Many students are new to shopping on a budget and are just getting acquainted with prices. Under these circumstances, often a fair price will appear to be higher," Jonas added.

He said that the chain stores do not mark their prices up over what is charged by their other branches.

"If customers are unhappy, they should stop in and see us or write to us," Jonas said.

"I want specific complaints so I can get down to the problem immediately," he added.

When asked what happens to complaints to the Chamber of Commerce, Jonas said, "I go directly to the other party and listen to both sides, and in 99 per cent of the cases a resolution can be made."

After offering the student's view point (Jonas is a 1965 MSU graduate), he then spoke of the "peculiar nature of student business" from a merchant's point of view.

One merchant, Jonas said, told him that "students don't want to be stereotyped as radicals wearing beards and sandals; then why should they stereotype us as all having high prices?"

Jonas emphasized that he was not stereotyping all students, but he did list some general differences between East Lansing and other non-college retailers:

1. There are more articles returned than in other towns, especially dresses. "At least 40 per cent of dresses sold just before a big social function on campus are returned--after the event," Jonas said.

Instead of causing ill will by refusing to take returned merchandise, it is "taken in stride" by stores, Jonas said.

2. Some students don't understand proper clothes care, Jonas said. "Single students are not always expected to know this; I didn't when I was in school," one clothing merchant told Jonas. But clothing is still returned as "faulty merchandise" when it was probably faulty care, Jonas said.

3. Shoplifting is "very definitely" higher than in non-college towns, Jonas said. "During registration week about a year ago, 45 students were apprehended for shoplifting in one bookstore alone, Jonas explained.

"We wouldn't stereotype the student as a shoplifter, but it still goes on," Jonas added.

4. "While many merchants in other places do 25 per cent of their business during Christmas, here the major market goes home during Christmas," Jonas said of student mobility. Easter and back-to-school times are much the same problem, he added.

Despite such difficulties, Jonas is quick to say that in the Chamber of Commerce, "We like student business. There is no doubt about that."

"Each year 60 per cent of total retail sales, or about $9 million, is spent by students in East Lansing," Jonas said.

Supervised housing may soon disappear

By FAYE UNGER
State News Staff Writer

Just what function does off-campus supervised housing serve? Should it be revised or even eliminated?

A student committee to study off-campus housing begins gathering student opinion on supervised off-campus housing within the next two weeks in an attempt to answer these questions.

After examining the student opinion survey, the committee will hold hearings and discuss the problem with faculty members. They will send their report and suggestions to the Off-Campus Council the end of fall term. The report will go to ASMSU and the faculty committee on student affairs winter term.

The number of students living in supervised housing and the number of residences available for supervised housing has been plunging in the last ten years.

If student opinion and other studies of the dwindling housing so indicates, the committee may suggest dropping the supervised housing category off campus altogether.

The number of men living in supervised housing fell from 1,755 in 1955 to 462 in 1965, said Pat Smith, assistant director in charge of off-campus housing.

For women students supervised housing is all but nonexistent. The number of women living in supervised housing has dropped from 70 to 54 in the last ten years.

Most students off campus live in luxury apartments or unsupervised rooms in houses. While the number of students living in unsupervised housing dropped from 1,845 to 507 in the last ten years, the number in unsupervised rose from 903 to 5,000.

"The off-campus housing office is now experimenting with supervised luxury apartments as a possible answer to the problem of the dwindling number of residences on the supervised list," said Peggy Hill, chairman of the committee to study off campus housing.

Much of the supervised housing in the past has been far from the luxury apartment concept.

The University has itself dropped 54 per cent of the residences from the supervised list for failure to meet the University's housing standards.

What housing remains does meet state and East Lansing housing codes, a University requirement that housing contain one dresser and one bed per student, and the Ingham County health code standards, however.

Smith speculated that some students and homeowners shy away from supervised housing because of the requirement that University rules, like the no-girls-in-room rules, be enforced there.

Under present University regulations, eliminating the supervised housing category entirely could cut down the chances for students under 21 years of age to live off campus, however, Miss Hill said.

A student under 21 or a student who is not a senior must live in a fraternity, or sorority house, a co-op or supervised housing if he moves off campus.

Why Are You Ignored When You Talk?

A noted publisher in Chicago reports a simple technique of everyday conversation which can pay you real dividends in social and business advancement and works like magic to give you poise, self confidence and greater popularity.

According to this publisher, many people do not realize how much they could influence others simply by what they say and how they say it. Whether in business, at social functions, or even in casual conversations with new acquaintances there are ways to make a good impression every time you talk.

To acquaint the readers of this paper with the easy-to-follow rules for developing skill in everyday conversation, the publishers have printed full details of their interesting self-training method in a new book, "Adventures in Conversation," which will be mailed free to anyone who requests it. ## Prof says 'no interaction'

A University of Wisconsin professor of journalism and psychology said Tuesday that there is really no interaction between sender and receiver in communication.

Percy H. Tannenbaum, director of the Mass Communication Research at University of Wisconsin, said, "I'm not sure communication is operationally any more than a selection process, rather than an interaction between two organisms."

To validate his theory Tannenbaum, speaking before 100 people including several Communication Dept. faculty members on "Communication as Vicarious Social Experience," cited two experiments in which he recently participated.

Tannenbaum said that human social learning, especially in films, can occur without direct contact with the object being learned about.

"Much of this depends on a person's identification with the protagonist in a film," he said. If a person doesn't identify with a character, Tannenbaum said, he won't vicariously experience the character's varying emotions.

To illustrate, Tannenbaum cited an experiment that he helped conduct in which an audience was given an opportunity to identify with the protagonist in a movie. Various endings to the movie were shown to them.

"Those that had vicariously identified with the protagonist exhibited great stress when he was hung at the movie's conclusion," Tannenbaum said.

However, little stress was shown when the antagonist was hung. In fact, those identifying with the protagonist showed relief that he was spared while his enemy was hung.

Tannenbaum said that those not identifying with the protagonist reacted indifferently to both endings.

To conclude the experiment, the people that saw the movie later heard a talk on vigilante justice. Those objecting most strongly to it were those that identified with the protagonist.

"From this data," Tannenbaum said, "it is possible to hypothesize that the conditions and ideas one gets from films will influence his opinion of a subsequent thematic oration that he hears later on the subject."

Sen. Byrd, 79, dies in Virginia

BERRYVILLE, Va. (AP) -- Former U.S. Sen. Harry F. Byrd Sr., the Virginia aristocrat who became a legend in his time in the politics of the state and nation, died quietly today at his estate, "Rosemont". He was 79.

The former Virginia governor and guiding power of the state political organization which bore his name for 40 years, died at 8:25 a.m. without having emerged from the deep coma into which he slipped last July.

His physicians said then Byrd was suffering from a malignant brain tumor and offered no hope for his recovery. He retired from his seat in the United States Senate—a post he had held since 1933—last November because of flagging health. His son, Harry F. Byrd Jr., was appointed to succeed him.

Byrd's death marked an end of an era in Democratic politics of Virginia which already have shown signs of moving away from the old line brand of Byrd conservatism.

Finishing Touches

Peggy Morningstar, Hillsdale sophomore, put the finishing touches on part of Case Hall's Homecoming Float. Much is yet to be done, though, before the whole float is complete.

Homecoming weekend is upon us.

Tonight's your last chance to watch the floats being built—by Saturday morning they'll be completed and will remain up until Sunday.

Some weekend entertainment suggestions follow.

*Tonight*

There will be a pep rally at 7 p.m. behind Jenison Fieldhouse. That'll be over around 7:45. Just in time for you to go to the second of the ASMUS popular entertainment series.

The Beach Boys will make the music at Jenison at 8 p.m. If you don't already have a ticket, you're out of luck. The program has been sold out since the middle of the week.

But there's always the reliable Shaw mixer to go to—if you think that's any better than working on a homecoming float.

Saturday is sports day.

Wells Hall reborn after 2 deaths

Two new buildings under construction on campus will be named after two prominent 19th century citizens -- one a judge, the other an author. The names were approved Thursday by the Board of Trustees.

The new language and mathematics building will be known as Wells Hall. This will be the third structure to bear the name. The first, a dormitory, burned in 1905 and the second was razed this year to make way for an addition to the library.

Wells Hall is an office and classroom complex that varies from three to seven stories. A $5 million structure, it is scheduled for completion in March, 1967.

Baker Hall, a $1.9 million structure, is being built west of the Psychology Research Center. The building will have offices for faculty, grad assistants and 12 seminar-type classrooms. There will also be space for four departmental offices.

Hezekiah G. Wells, a lawyer and county judge of Kalamazoo, helped found MSU, and as a member of the State Board of Agriculture from 1861-1883 helped keep the college alive and prospering.

Ray Stannard Baker Hall will be the name of the new six-story office building. Baker, an early alumnus of Michigan State, became founder of the American Magazine, the official biographer of Woodrow Wilson and a benefactor of the University.

Clyde Campbell is named head of Mott Institute

Clyde M. Campbell, professor of administration and higher education, was appointed director of MSU's Mott Institute for Community Improvement by the MSU Board of Trustees Thursday.

The Mott Institute, established in 1965 through a 10-year, $3 million grant from the C.S. Mott Foundation in Flint, creates and encourages projects to aid the disadvantaged in inner cities.

Campbell is currently a consultant to the Southwest Cooperative Development Research Center in Albuquerque, N.M., and an educational consultant to the Navajo Indians. He is also editor of the journal, "The Community School and Its Administration," and has written a book, "Prac-

Before joining the MSU faculty, where he has been for the past 20 years, he was a high school principal at Westfield and Fisher, Ill., schools, and a "visitor of schools" for the University of Illinois.

He has also been a visiting professor at the Universities of Florida, Texas, Wisconsin and California.

Campbell is a past president of the National Conference of Professors of Educational Administration and former executive secretary of the Michigan Association of School Administrators.

He succeeds William B. Hawley, who will now devote his time as professor and assistant dean for special projects in the College of Education.

Lansing observes U.N. day Sunday

Several MSU students and faculty will participate in the Greater Lansing area observance of United Nations Day between 2 and 5 p.m. Sunday at Gabriels High School.

Co-chairmen Nicholas V. Olds, Lansing representative, and August G. Benson, selected for East Lansing, have requested displays by various university groups, local high school U.N. organizations, grade schools and area service clubs.

Justin Morrill students who toured Spain and Russia last summer will set up a display for the program "United Nations -- The Record and the Dream."

Campus U.N. is expected to take part throughout the afternoon. International Extension of office, the foreign student office, International Club, other campus nationality groups and a representative of the Nigerian program are scheduled to honor the United Nations' 21 years of existence.

Wichit Charernbhak, Thailand student, designed the symbol used on the program and posters.

Films on the U.N. will be shown during the early part of the afternoon. Activities are planned for children attending. Later, Harold Johnson, political science department and adviser to Campus U.N., will talk on "The Record," followed by John Taylor, philosophy department, speaking on "The Dream."

The afternoon will close with an "International Stage Show" by students in national dress.

Last year approximately 700 people visited the displays and panel discussion. In earlier years observance of U.N. Day took the form of a luncheon.

Christian, Marxists seeking mutuality

EDITOR'S NOTE: The religion page is running a series of articles on Christianity and Communism. This story looks into the background of Marxism.

By FAYE UNGER
State News Staff Writer

Christ and Marx might agree on basic humanitarian principles, a teacher of international communism says. And some Christians and Marxists today are searching for their areas of agreement.

"If I'm asked if a Christian could be a Marxist, I'd say that is not difficult," James Ozinga, graduate student and instructor for a Communism course, said. "But it would be much more difficult for a Christian to be a Communist, if you think of Communism as the ideology taught in Red China or even the USSR today."

In Western Europe today Christians and Marxists, within and outside the Communist parties, are holding conferences and dialogues to re-examine the beliefs of Marx and Christ and how they relate.

In South America today priests working with the people occasionally adopt revolutionary thought. One Brazilian priest now in exile in Mexico, the Rev. Francisco Lage, openly declares himself to be a revolutionary and a socialist.

"At least one thousand Brazilian priests who are living and suffering with the masses hold the same views," Fr. Lage said in the left-wing Paris weekly, Le Nouvel Observateur.

Those who talk of a Communist-Christian dialogue usually refer to a discussion of Marxist humanist thought rather than to the political Communist derivations in the Eastern countries, Ozinga said.

What then did Marx teach? What evolution did his teachings undergo?

Original Marxism

The communal utopia Marx envisioned as the inevitable end of the whole process of world history would let man fully realize his potential.

A man would work not because it is necessary to keep him alive but primarily because work would be the way a man expressed and realized himself, Ozinga said. Science would have overcome all physical obstacles, eliminated all dehumanizing jobs. There would be no conflict, for there would be no classes. There would be no conflict, for the means of production would be socially owned.

From each man according to his ability, to each man according to his need. The communal utopia would rely on an economy of abundance that could produce enough for everyone.

Marx was a materialist, but his materialism had metaphysical overtones. Materialism in Marxism meant first that a man must be sure of enough food, clothing and shelter to be free to create, to think, and to pursue science, religion and the arts.

Materialism meant something akin to philosophical realism. It meant that the world is made of one substance called "matter," and that mind or spirit were either products of or a part of "matter."

For Marx materialism fit in with a high regard for the worth of man and an almost naive faith in the goodness of man.

"The world was an objective reality to be grasped and mastered by the cognitive minds and the purposeful hands of men," Alfred Meyer, a former political science professor, said.

History was the product of men's actions even while men were the products of history. Yet at the same time it was inevitable that man would found the communist society. At the same time the economic structure was the prime determinant of social relations.

Man was at the present alienated from himself, from his means of production and from others. Class struggled against class. The proletariat was the most alienated and oppressed of all under an industrial slavery.

The capitalists, becoming fewer in number, would continue to concentrate industry in their hands and continue to exploit the proletariat, until the proletariat, finally realizing man has become a commodity, would revolt.

The proletariat would expropriate the means of production and a socialist society would be set up. It is inevitable.

"Marx's attitude toward religion is a confused issue other than his outspokenness against orthodoxy that stood in the way of progress," Ozinga said. "He objects to using religion to dull the senses to bad social conditions with pie-in-the-sky promises."

Today some Western European Communists are saying that the Communist utopia does not preclude religion.

They also stress that the common elements of brotherhood, altruism, concern for humanity, contempt for worldly goods, and faith in the power of justice and the triumph of the good form a ground for discussion.

Evolution of Marxism

In the Western democratic nations after trade unionism became effective and suffrage was extended, many Marxists revised the original revolutionary Marxist theory to emphasize working for social reform through the established democratic process instead.

"We might never have known anything of Marxist socialism today other than through the social democratic parties if it weren't for Lenin," Ozinga said.

To meet the problems of an autocratic, underdeveloped Russian society, the Russian Communists altered Marxist theory. To reach the level of modern economic development that is the prerequisite for the communist revolution, the state acted as the "capitalist."

The USSR regards herself as still working toward Communism.

"The need for a totalitarian system in the USSR is disappearing as the country progresses and no longer needs as much drive," Ozinga said. "Russia can relax a little now."

As Communism spread to other nations it slowly took on a differing character in each one. "Communism today is a hodge-podge," Ozinga said.

The totalitarianism of Communism today is similar to the "totalitarianism" of orthodox Christianity in that neither ideology can brook any other faith in theory, Ozinga said.

Yet as each "side" recognizes the valid points in the other's ideology and as the absolute commitment to either "only faith" lessens, the two may yet find they can not only live together but also at times work together.

The typical Russian today is as committed to the traditional Communist ideology as the Sunday Christian is to his ideology, Ozinga said.

MARRIED CLERGY?

2 Lansing priests back celibacy

By NOEL HORNBECK
State News Religion Writer

Two Lansing priests, when asked their views on married priesthood said that the division of dedication between a man's wife and his God would be virtually impossible.

The two priests asked to remain anonymous. Both said they felt a few priests were creating quite a disturbance over a relatively unimportant issue.

In reacting to the report a poll showing two-thirds of priests against celibacy, one said he felt the poll to be invalid since only 125 of the 500 priests polled replied.

As one of the priests noted, a woman married to a priest would find herself second in importance to her husband because of the demands made upon his time.

The law of celibacy in the Roman Catholic Church did not become law until the sixth or seventh century. Though it was often violated in early times, it has been a tradition held in high esteem in the West.

One priest said that he feels much of the dissent over a married priesthood is really just dissent over priests being given freedom of individual choice in the matter.

The Church maintains that a man may not be ordained a priest until his twenty-fourth year without a special dispensation.

They were asked if they felt the changes in the service from Latin to English, the changes in style of nun's clothing, and the marriage of some of the priesthood might tend to water down the church. One denied that marriage of the priesthood is a trend and both said that the other changes will simply make the Church more relevant to the modern world.

As to the caliber of men that might be attracted to the priesthood if marriage were allowed, one said the number of applicants would diminish because of trying to support a family on a priest's salary.

The other said that the caliber would not significantly change. He added that there are many laymen devoted to the church, but the devotion required for the priesthood would be all but impossible for them.

Diocese to query parishoners

The Roman Catholic Diocese of Lansing plans to count its members this month and find out what they think about the present and future of the church.

Catholics will be asked whether they favor giving financial aid to poorer parishes, either within the diocese or in other countries; abandoning Friday abstinence and tithing.

Other questions: "Do you believe that Catholic taxpayers and their students should benefit through public tax support?"

"Do you think priests should speak out on social problems?" "Do you feel that Vatican Council II accomplished a great deal of good?"

Poet, novelist share Prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Poet Nelly Sachs, a German-born Jew, and novelist Samuel Joseph Agnon of Israel were jointly awarded the 1966 Nobel Prize for Literature Thursday.

The Swedish Academy of Letters cited Miss Sachs — who fled from Hitler's Reich to find refuge in Sweden — for "her outstanding lyrical and dramatic writing." The academy awarded Agnon his share of the prize "for his profoundly characteristic narrative art with motifs of the Jewish people."

The academy secretary, Dr. Anders Osterling, praised them in a television address as "two outstanding Jewish authors, each of whom represents the message of Israel in our time, who complement each other in a splendid striving to present the cultural heritage of the Jewish people by the written word."

To Miss Sachs, the award and her half of the $60,000 prize in the glittering ceremonies in Stockholm Dec. 10 will mark as an extra special occasion, her 75th birthday. Agnon, who lives in Jerusalem, is 78.

This is only the second time since the literature prize was first awarded in 1901 that it had been shared. The other time was in 1917.

Agnon had been reported to be a winner two days ago, and at that time, when told of the report, he said, "My life won't change." He is noted for two novels "The Bridal Canopy" and "A Guest for the Night," both mixtures of humor and prophecy.

Miss Sachs has published collections of poems including "Quarters of the Dead," "And Nobody Knows Anything More," and "Escape and Transition." She also wrote a mystery play called "Eli."

She told reporters she did not yet know how she would spend the money.

The Nobel prizes were set up under the will of Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite. The prize for medicine and physiology was awarded jointly Oct. 10 to two U.S. cancer researchers, Dr. Charles Huggins of Chicago, and Dr. Peyton Rous of New York City.

The Norwegian Nobel Committee announced Tuesday no peace prize will be given this year. Under the terms of Nobel's will, the peace prize is awarded in Oslo, Norway.

Still to come from Stockholm are the selections for prizes in physics and chemistry.

Roetman appointed

The appointment of John Roetman Jr. as manager of the University's married housing was announced Thursday by the Board of Trustees.

Roetman has been serving in the capacity since Aug. 1 with his appointment becoming effective Oct. 1.

After being the assistant manager since 1954, he succeeds Ray D. Lamphear, who is now married housing's maintenance and development coordinator.

Roetman feels that the married housing program is a good one and hopes it will continue with help from married housing residents.

"We are always open for ideas," said Roetman, "and are continuing to experiment with new and better ways of handling old maintenance problems."

After a period in the service, Roetman graduated from here in 1950. He received his M.A. in 1951 and then began work for MSU.

So make her cry a little...

HERE, SATURDAY

2nd Thailand group to study schools

A second group of Thailand educators will arrive here Saturday for a three-month stay as part of their international study of educational planning. The first group has been on campus since last Saturday.

Both groups are searching for ideas to incorporate into Thailand's expanding educational program.

The second group—a seven-man, secondary—education team—will use Michigan State as home base for visiting schools in Battle Creek, Okemos, Flint, Lansing and Detroit.

The secondary group will observe "comprehensive" high schools that offer academic and vocational innovations for Thailand.

MSU Band to reverse its 'patterns'

MSU's Marching Band will be going off in all directions at Saturday's MSU - Purdue homecoming game.

One of its featured numbers during the half-time performance will be the unique "Reverse Fight Song." In this number, the band marches backward while playing the "Fight Song" in reverse, concluding with the "Spinning S" formation.

Bandman will be going forward, however, during Assistant Band Director William Moffitt's new "Spartan Drums," which features the band's 16 drummers.

Another first is the band's latest "patterns in motion" formation, set to Henry Mancini's "Not From Dixie."

The 175-man band, directed by Leonard Falcone, will round out the performance with the George Gershwin standard, "Swanee," and "By the Light of the Silvery Moon."

The Purdue University Marching Band will also be in the half-time show at the televised homecoming game. Al G. Wright directs this 300-man unit.

Oakland Riots in third day

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Two fire bombings Thursday extended Oakland's racial disorders into a third straight day while an argument raged over whether a school boycott was to blame for them.

The district attorney said it was, that the boycott promoters were "professional agitators" and that they placed themselves open to prosecution.

A leader of the boycott called this intimidation.

The superintendent of schools also blamed the boycott, called Wednesday for three days to protest the quality of Negro education.

But City Manager Jerome Keithley and Police Chief Robert Preston both said Thursday they saw no connection between the vandalism and the boycott.

School officials said absenteeism Thursday shot up to 5,000 above normal, double the rate for Wednesday.

The fire bombings were a follow-up to an arson-suspected fire Wednesday night which caused damage to Fremont High School estimated at more than $80,000.

Three Negroes were arrested on a school playground and police said they confiscated enough gasoline and glass bottles to make more than 100 "Molotov cocktails" — bottled gasoline.

Dist. Atty. J. Frank Coakley said the leaders behind a movement, set in motion Wednesday, to have students stay out of school in protest of the quality of Negro education were engaged in a "deliberately planned boycott." This, he added, makes them liable to prosecution for "felony conspiracy."

"Blatant intimidation," retorted John George, a Negro attorney who heads the Ad Hoc Committee for Quality Education.

He denied the boycott was responsible for the window-smashing, bottle-throwing and looting which broke out Tuesday night and has resulted in nearly 50 arrests.

George estimated that around 700 students went to special "freedom schools" Wednesday. There are 30,000 students in Oakland's junior and senior high schools, the targets of the boycott.

George said 18 teachers had promised to join the boycott and instruct the freedom classes but backed off when Coakley's office warned they could be prosecuted.

George said his committee, formed last April, represents nearly 30 organizations, including ministers, neighborhood groups, a Spanish-speaking advisory committee and the Congress of Racial Equality.

Asked to state briefly just what his committee wants done, George said his group had placed 17 demands before the Oakland Board of Education.

He listed as highlights among those demands: changes of boundary lines to eliminate de facto segregation; setting up an "education park" — a cluster of elementary, junior and high schools to draw pupils from a broader area and break up low-grade neighborhood schools in low-income sectors.

British jobless rate grows

LONDON (AP) — Unemployment in Britain jumped nearly 100,000 in the past month—the biggest increase in almost four years—the Ministry of Labor announced today.

It was the fourth successive month of increasing unemployment as the Labor government's program of belt-tightening austerity cut more deeply into the economy.

Today's jobless figures will undoubtedly bring an angry storm in Parliament from the Conservative opposition and left-wing Laborites.

The Labor Ministry announcement said unemployment rose 97,027 since Sept. 22, to 437,229. This was 1.9 per cent of the nation's work force.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson said in July when he announced his tough deflationary program unemployment might reach 2 or 2.5 per cent. This would mean 500,000 to 600,000 jobless.

Today's announcement came as Wilson was discussing economic policy with his Cabinet. The ministers were preparing for next week's full dress debate of economic policy in the Commons.

The Conservatives are launching an attack on the government Monday for introducing its austerity program without what they called adequate preparation to retrain the resulting unemployed for new jobs.

Wednesday, the government will ask Parliament to endorse the compulsory freeze of wages and prices. A voluntary freeze instituted in July was made compulsory Oct. 5 by an order which must be approved by Parliament within a month. The government is sure of approval, but its majority probably will be reduced to the lowest level since this government took office last April.

In expectation of increasing unemployment and a report to be released shortly by the Confederation of British Industry on the state of business confidence in the future, the London Stock Exchange was hesitant and trendless throughout the morning.

Price declines were general but minor. By noon the financial Times index of 30 industrial stocks had sagged below the 300 level for the first time since Aug. 24, and was nearly 49 points below its level a year ago.

New forestry head named by Trustees

Lee M. James, professor of forestry, was named chairman of the Dept. of Forestry Thursday by the MSU Board of Trustees. James has been serving as acting chairman since April, 1965 and succeeds the late Terrill D. Stevens. His appointment becomes effective Nov. 1.

A graduate of Pennsylvania

State University and the University of Michigan, James is the author of "Opportunities for Economic Development in Michigan's Upper Peninsula," prepared in 1962 for the Committee on Public Works, U.S. Senate. He has also written more than 60 articles for professional journals.

James came to MSU as an assistant professor in 1951 from the U.S. Forest Service. In 1952 he became an associate professor, and in 1958, a full professor.

He has served as a consultant to the Dept. of the Interior and to the Forest Industries Council. James is also a member of the Society of American Foresters, serving on the committees for planning and international relations. He has served as chairman of the society's Division of Forest Economics.

Compensation

ing group representatives, $20 for the members-at-large, and $15 for the secretary and cabinet vice presidents.

Compensation is based upon 2 per cent of the previous year's student taxes, as set in the constitutional amendment which established the committee spring term.

Major dissent to the primary report, Faust said, was not caused by a lack of support for compensation but by a lack of information which could have been properly evaluated by students.

Students lacked information in the areas of the functions of various ASMSU officials, the time put in and the functions and services of the ASMSU branches, the report said.

The constitutional amendment calls for the establishment of another compensation committee during the eighth week of the term to decide upon compensation for winter term.

Faust explained that the present committee would not be dissolved until a new committee

Homecoming FOR MIXERS

A few contestants complained that the judges didn't have enough time to evaluate their personalities in the short - seven minutes - amount of time they had for questioning.

But as one judge put it, "It's not what comes out of their mouths that counts, it's how it comes out."

Of the 72 candidates, 25 were asked back Wednesday night for further questioning.

The all-male committee put the girls in hypothetical situations. What would you do if your date forgot his wallet? Would you break a date? What one office would you create to promote the interests of the University?

From this group of 25, the queen and her court was chosen. The ten finalists met with the judges informally in the Student Services lounge.

Shaw sets charges

There will be an admission charge for Shaw Hall Mixers starting tonight.

Foreign students need English aid

Many foreign students need help in English. American students are needed by the English Language Center to tutor these students.

Those who are interested in helping are asked to call the English Language Center 8 a.m.-noon or 1-5 p.m. at 353-0802.

This charge will vary from dance to dance, but there will always be a charge. However, Shaw residents will be admitted free upon showing proof of residence.

These charges are being made to cover only costs of the dance. The Shaw Mixer at 9 tonight will feature "The Sounds and The Soundettes." Admission will be 25 cents.

As only on-campus residents will be admitted, students must show ID cards before entering. However, any student from another university participating in an MSU function will be considered as an on-campus resident.

Each Shaw resident may bring two guests, if he registers their names at the reception desks before 6 p.m.

The supervisors of the dance may refuse admission to any persons potentially injurious to others or to Shaw property. They also have the authority to expel any unruly person.

Any band wishing to audition for a Shaw dance should contact Paul Fichtner or Vic Maskey.

MSU Defends HOMECOMING GAME

In five games this season, the Michigan State secondary has been hit for 57 completed passes, for 741 yards, and four touchdowns.

Saturday, they face what may be the biggest test of the year, the lightning fast arm of Purdue quarterback, Bob Griese.

George Webster, defensive rover and co-captain of the Spartans, rates Griese as one of the top quarterbacks in the country. "He's one of the best I've seen anywhere," said the All-American senior.

"Of course, any passer is good if you give him time," Webster insisted. He animosity to Griesse intended.

"We won't make any drastic changes in our defense," Webster insisted. He said they would play their usual game, despite the great passing threat.

Drake Garrett, a newcomer to the defense who last week won the game ball for his two game-saving interceptions, saw a possible change in his duties.

"If anything, we will probably be playing looser as a whole," said the junior safety. This would be to shut off the threat of the long ball, which has hurt the Spartans three times already this season.

Garrett also believes Griese will be tough, although he has not played defense against him before. "He's an experienced, three year player," Garrett said, "and I believe he is one of the better quarterbacks."

Jess Phillips, defensive halfback, sees a change for his coverage in Saturday's game. "We'll play them a little tighter than in the past," Phillips said.

“We want to stop the short pass,” Phillips explained, “and we will be using basically a man to man coverage.”

"We will utilize our main defenses," Phillips emphasized, insisting that nothing drastically new was being devised to stop the Boilermakers.

"I've played against quite a few good quarterbacks," Phillips said. "On a given day, any one quarterback can be good."

As for receivers, the backs were in agreement as to who was the best they had ever faced.

Webster named Bob Hadrick, who played end for the Boilermakers last season, Jack Clancy of Michigan, and John Wright of Illinois.

Garrett named Clancy as one of the best, and Phillips nominated Wright.

Block 'S' in trouble; needs more students

Organized cheering and card waving may become extinct at Michigan State if several conditions are not resolved soon.

Block "S," the synchronized card section at football games, has only half the number of students it needs to operate. Added to this, Block "S" is faced with a serious seating problem at the stadium.

"We have only 450 students in the group," said Hal Salisbury, director of Block "S." "We need 1,000 members in order to perform perfectly."

Salisbury adds that 80 per cent of the present membership are women.

Dor Martin, director of Spartan Spirit, said Block "S" had a table set up at registration, but it was not effective. Anticipating a larger turnout, not much of a campaign was mounted to inform new students about the group.

Both leaders also complained that the end-zone seating arrangement is not desirable.

"We would like to see," Salisbury said, "two or three thousand students in the block section situated on about the 40 yard line. Seats on the 40-50 yard line would insure a large turnout for the group."

Other schools employ large blocks in this seating arrangement.

"I like to see it, but I would rather see no block at all than to have one here that is poorly done," said Martin.

Goovert small, but stubborn

By LARRY WERNER
State News Sports Editor

Ron Goovert has a chip on his shoulder. People keep telling him the former MSU All-American linebacker that he is too small to be a great football player, and he stubbornly tries to prove the skeptics wrong.

Goovert came to Michigan State as a 180 pound freshman, not unusually large for a Big Ten player, but he was expected to become an All-American on the defensive team in MSU history, at 205 pounds.

After earning a tryout with the Houston Oilers, of the American Football League, the Ferndale native was dropped for lack of punting.

Oakland was the next team to show interest.

Then it was to Charleston, W. Va., where Goovert is now trying to prove himself with the Charleston Rockets of the Continental League.

"I didn't like the idea of playing here at first, but I'm beginning to enjoy it now," Goovert said. He was on his lunch hour at the call to Charleston and, at the time, was on his lunch hour at the Charleston Kroger store, his weekday place of employment.

Goovert's performance for the Rockets' most recent game was reminiscent of the Goovert that MSU fans remember.

He recovered a fumble, intercepted a pass and scored a safety. Goovert was named "player of the game," but considers the performance just a part of his ascent to the "big time."

"I thought that I played well in the All-American game at Atlanta," Goovert said. "Houston thought so too, and I had a pretty good chance of making it, but they told me that I needed a few more pounds."

"They wanted to put me on the taxi squad, but I felt that I should be playing instead of sitting around. I probably should have stayed with them, because a couple of their guys have gotten hurt."

The Oakland Raiders expressed interest, but Goovert was released from Houston too late for Raiders to activate him.

Oakland suggested that he play for Charleston for a year and try again next year.

With the Purdue game excitement in the air, Goovert wanted to talk about the great 14-10 Spartan comeback of '65, in which he played a major part.

"We knew that the Purdue game was the one which would probably decide the Big Ten championship, and we were ready," Goovert said. "Purdue and Notre Dame of last year were the greatest games I've ever played in."

Size didn't prevent Goovert from being the scourge of enemy Big Ten ballcarriers last fall, and he is determined that he will not fail in his pro attempt because he is not big enough.

"I'm 210 now, and I should be 225 to play pro," Goovert said. Goovert predicts that he'll "make it by next year."

Ron Goovert has a chip on his shoulder from people telling him that he is too small. He is small, but he's stubborn too, and that's why he'll make it.

Ruggers are hurt

By NORM SAARI
State News Sports Writer

MSU's Rugby Club coach Neville Doherty is forced to find a new backfield man after an injury suffered in the 8-6 victory over Windsor last Saturday.

Diarmuid Costello, a wiry Irishman doing graduate work here, was injured in the MSU victory last Saturday. He will be a doubtful starter for the rest of the year.

Doherty started two men last week: Curt Conrad at wing and Brian McGillie at fullback, and was pleased with both.

"McGillie is extremely fast in getting the ball in play and is big enough to get into the scrum itself," Doherty said.

"A lot of the boys have never played together before, but the teamwork last Saturday showed they are developing into a team." He noted some of the scrum forwards had played last year for MSU and most of the others have played rugby at other schools.

Kirk Louis, a hooker, has played three years and has been used effectively in getting the scrum advantage.

Andy McEnte, another club veteran, played his first game of the year against Windsor and will be relied on heavily at a prop position.

Ian Donald and Mike Auer have been alternating between playing the other prop and the number eight man. Neither has played for MSU before, but Donald played for clubs in New Zealand and England and Auer played for Harvard's club. Both are doing grad work at MSU.

The team is not as stable in the backfield, however, and Costello's absence will make a large difference in setting up plays.

Rick Allen, John Harris and Bob McGillicuddy are all experienced men in the backfield, but McGillicuddy will be leaving soon for the armed forces.

"The club is interested in anybody who has played rugby before or who would like to learn the sport to come to practice on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at 4:30 on Case field," Doherty said. The field is located behind the soccer and practice football fields.

The ruggers meet Blackrock after the football game on Old College Field, behind Jenison.

Harriers in tri-meet here

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

The MSU cross country team, this season, will put their perfect record on the line against Notre Dame and Eastern Michigan in a triangular meet today at 4 p.m. at Forest Akers Golf Course.

Notre Dame placed second to Eastern Michigan in a nine-team invitational at South Bend last week while Eastern finished fourth.

Top Irish runners are Ken Howard and Chuck Dehorn. Both juniors. In its only other action of the year, Notre Dame finished second to Minnesota in a triangular meet at Indiana.

Eastern Michigan is unbeaten in five dual meets, routing past Wheaton, Chicago, Central Michigan, Toledo and Baldwin Wallace.

Senior Tony Mifsud, who was runner up in the invitational at South Bend, has won individual honors in all five meets. Supporting Huron runners include Terry Norman, Glenn Duke and Ken Head.

Notre Dame handed the Spartans their worst defeat of the season last year, and have nine returning letterman, but Spartan cross country captain Dick Sharkey expects that "Eastern will be just as tough as Notre Dame."

An interesting personal dual is liable to take place between Sharkey and Mifsud in the meet. Sharkey has taken individual honors in each dual meet also, and is being billed as a potential All-American. Sharkey and Mifsud are close friends, having run against each other in both high school and college.

Coach Fran Dittrich will be starting the same unit that he started against Wisconsin two weeks ago with two exceptions.

Sophomore Pat Wilson, who was injured and sat out the Wisconsin meet, will be running in place of sophomore Mike Rummell, who quit the team.

Besides Sharkey and Wilson, seniors George Balthrop, Eric Ziemer and Claudell James, Junior Art Link and sophomores Roger Merchant, Dean Rosenberg and Dale Stanley will be running for the Spartans.

Booters face small field, injuries

By DENNIS CHASE
Associate Sports Editor

The Spartan soccer team takes on Marquette in Wisconsin tomorrow, but they'll also be battling the field and injuries. "The narrow field—we lose at least 18 yards of the width—will force us to revamp our strategy somewhat," Coach Gene Kennedy said. "We usually plan four men up, two in the middle and four back. This time we'll only plan two men up, Tony Keyes and Guy Busch. If he is healthy, and drop two of our forwards back. "It's a 2-3-2-3 defense, to accommodate for the narrow field."

The booters have other problems. Busch still doesn't look 100 per cent with a strained left leg, Kevin O'Connell is in a similar state with an injured foot. Both are doubtful starters, although Kennedy indicates that he might take a chance. Gary McFarady is also a question mark. He has a charley horse which is still giving him trouble.

Marquette's record is 1-1-2. The men who should give the Spartans the most trouble are Helmut Vold on offense and Jim Ward on defense.

The Spartan defense has been a bright spot this year. Goalie Kevin O'Connell is on his way to a record season. He has allowed two goals in five games. The record is six in a season. But Bert Jacobsen, Peter Hens, Tom Bellodi, and Nick Wirs haven't let the opposition get too close.

"They work well together," said Kennedy. "They haven't had to meet a real good forward line yet, but they've been snuffing them off pretty well at midfield."

Does the coach worry about overconfidence stemming from MSU's 5-0 record? "They've got a long way to go," said Kennedy. "They're not overconfident."

Terry And The Pirates

Captain Terry Bidak watches the play of his teammates in a game against Pittsburgh earlier this season. That's Guy Busch going after the ball. Busch injured his leg but will start in the game against Marquette this weekend. Don't worry Terry, the team is 5-0 and shows no signs of letting up.

They say the small of ruses can do many things for Big Ten football players. So can pride.

The Boilermakers of Purdue invade Spartan Stadium Saturday, and a lot of theories are going to put on the line before a lot of people. A nation-wide television audience will view the game in addition to an assured capacity-plus crowd of over 76,000.

One theory has it that defending Big Ten champions don't have the incentive to repeat. They say that undefeated Michigan State (5-0) doesn't have as much to win from this game as Purdue (4-1), a team that would like to go to the Rose Bowl as the conference champions.

"They have a lot of incentive and momentum," said Spartan head coach Duffy Daugherty. "They have all the incentive that we had last year."

"But our team has a lot of incentive too. Our players have an ambition, a good ambition—they like to have people think they are the best."

That translates as pride. It means that the Spartans, humped from the first spot in the national polls for the first time in a year, aren't too happy about it.

A few other theories will be tried down on the field. Some coaches believe in passing their like air, and 264 on the ground. Full-way to victory while others like air, and 264 on the ground. Full-way to grind it out of the ground, back Bob Apisa is the leading Saturday one of the best passing teams in the nation will face one of the best running teams, Purdue.

Boasts All-America quarterback Bob Griese and a host of fleet-footed receivers. The Spartans counter with an offensive backfield that just might be the best in the nation.

"Griese is the best passer we've faced in recent years," said Daugherty. "It's his quickness in releasing the ball that makes him so tough to rush."

This is the 21st game in the series. The Spartans are ahead, 10-9 with one tie. Last year, MSU

Can Spartans Stop Him?

The Spartans hope they can equal last year's performance when they meet Purdue Saturday. They scored the winning touchdown in the last quarter to upset the Boilermakers, 14-10. Here they are busy upsetting Bob Griese, Purdue All-America quarterback.
