Michigan State's three largest universities have combined efforts in the second step of a long-range plan to offer their students a common core of computer-based instruction.

The Michigan Inter-university Committee on Computer Education was established in 1961 by representatives from MSU, the University of Michigan and Wayne State University.

"It will be a tool," said William E. Hutter, chairman of the committee, "which will enable a computer to work with a human in much the same way as another human would work with a student."

The computerized teaching method may enable a student to progress at the degree to which he is deficient in a subject without repeating past steps. Last month MSU took its first step in the project by forming a special computer organization to work on a computer-based program in mathematics.

The committee will study the role of the computer in education and make recommendations for the use of the tool in schools and colleges.

AEGEAN ISLANDS - The murky waters of the Aegean Islands...
Falcone's retirement is end of institution

In 1927, a survey found that one-third of the men on campus operated autos. It was not an unusual sight in that opening to see a car winding through campus with six men inside in the same colors as those on the running boards.

In 1927 also, Leonard V. Falcone, a graduate of the University of Michigan, came to direct MSU's band.

Mr. Falcone will retire this position on July 1, 1967. He will have been here for 40 years—long enough for at least one student on campus today to have had a grandfather at MSC who heard him under his young leader.

Under Mr. Falcone's tutelage, MSU's bands have gained national fame. His marching bands have performed for three U.S. Presidents, most recently at Lyndon Johnson's 1965 inauguration.

His bands have played at the New York World's Fair and three Rose Bowl games. He is known as the Dean of the Band Directors.

Literally millions of people have watched his bands performing from the 76,000 seat stands of Spartan Stadium.

At Michigan State, the old is passing and new things are going up all over campus. The face of the campus is changing rapidly.

Leonard V. Falcone, director of the MSU band for 39 years will join the list of old, established, venerable, loved and respected institutions leaving the campus.

For Leonard Falcone, after 40 years, has become an institution at MSU. The Editors at Lyndon Johnson's 1965 inauguration.

Under the ASMSU constitution, only students enrolled for a referendum prohibits the student board from expending money on any projects it wishes.

Mostly, however, student government should reflect the opinions of the student body.

Because of this, the board should make an effort to determine student opinion before making any major decisions.

Many disagreed with the board's final decision. They felt the board was not acting as their representatives. As a result they have applied the procedure for a referendum, which the board has on hold—the referendum.

This was called for by a petition signed by over ten percent of the undergraduate student body (946).

Now that a petition for the referendum has been submitted and signed, the board should stop spending until the entire student body has indicated its preference.

To continue spending money before the referendum comes to a vote would be acallying disregard of students.

Moreover, there is no need to spend the money now, since the board cannot authorize any expenditures until the referendum is decided. If the referendum were to come after the Michigan election the money could be used to pay the debts of the committee.

The students who filled out the petition have done their part in making campus democracy work—it's now up to the board to do its part.

INTERVIEW

L. LIBERT PAULIN

The Beach Boys were at the Sather Field, Berkeley, last Friday night. Completely sold-out, they played a long, long time, with the Beach Boys' massive stage props failed to live up to the promotion.

We pressed several questions before their appearance. They were not too happy to keep the same set. But the boys were polite about the whole thing.

A Pen's Point

To at least attempt, 'I'm a man,' is not to say, 'I am a man.'

On a mission.

Someone just now told me that 'The Man,'... I didn't understand what I all read in that long article.

As I now see it, the whole point of President Kennedy's speech wouldn't seem to be all that important. Of course, some people also talked about the speech and its import.

To cut down the Debbie wall with a song and a story of its own, you're just adding a little more to the book and its secrets.

Aides charged to write their President's memoirs

EDITOR'S NOTE: According to University historian, Donald R. Miller, "A Thousand Days" by Arthur Schlesinger Jr. and "Kenedy" by Theodore Sorensen are "Two of the greatest books on the Kennedy Presidency ever written."

In their books, each has described life and work in the Kennedy White House to the day that was his or her last. But neither book is a memoir. Both are historical accounts, and they both rely heavily on primary source material.

The two books differ in many ways. Miller notes that Schlesinger's book is more comprehensive than Sorensen's. He also notes that Schlesinger's book is more narrative in style, while Sorensen's is more analytical.

The two books are also different in their focus. Schlesinger's book focuses on the Kennedy Presidency, while Sorensen's book focuses on the Kennedy Administration.

However, Miller notes that both books are important contributions to the study of the Kennedy Presidency. He also notes that both books have been widely read and widely discussed.

Miller concludes that both books are important contributions to the study of the Kennedy Presidency. He also notes that both books have been widely read and widely discussed.

AAUP STATEMENT: Guidelines 'better,' need changes

EDITOR'S NOTE: The com- plete text of a study committee of the AAUP on the Academic Freedom of Students follows.

The Committee on Academic Freedom and Students, in response to the request of the AAUP for a draft version of amendments currently under consideration by the committee, submits the following guidelines for the University of Washington. The committee, like the AAUP, has been very careful to avoid intruding into the administrative policies of other institutions and to respect the rights of institutions to maintain existing regulations. The report also contains some questions for discussion.

The committee is convinced that the AAUP should have an opportunity to study this document for the purpose of providing guidance to the AAUP regarding its own future action in this area.

The committee was authorized by the AAUP to select this draft version of amendments currently under consideration by the committee, as its study committee. It is hoped that the proposed guidelines represent a marked improvement over the existing regulations at MSU and that the present opportunity, however, to commend this document.

Harlan raps candidates for lack of 18-vote support

MIL: Travis C. After Harlan Thursday challenged political candidates in each majority, speaking at a news conference at the administration building, the political science intermediate fifth-year student said he would do everything he could to help his candidates.

"They see it as their constituency," he said.

Harlan has said there is no justification for the State Senate campaign to continue. The candidates referred to are John C. Taylor, Robert Griffin and G. Mennen Williams.

Graham is chairman of the campaign's governing unit and the State Senate campaign is under the direction of the AAUP.

Matt Dillon bites dust, gunfighter myth exploded
By ROBERT BLEAKLEY
Despite what you read in "Gunfighter Myths," the 1870s "open west" was a wasteland considered as dangerous a place as the present-day Third World.
In fact, according to Texas Tech University history prof. Robert Blakeley, most early western gunfighters were not "professional" bandits but rather common criminals who robbed stagecoaches and railroads.

"Many did not go in for the work because they didn't want to wear black hats. White hats were more likely to be caught," Blakeley said.

Many went in for the work because they knew they could make a buck. Western gunfighters were all relatively educated, Blakeley said.

"They often did know what they were doing when they went into the field," Blakeley said. "They knew how to act like professionals to in order to make a buck.

"Many of the gunfighters did not succeed, but the ones who did were the ones who were able to make a concerted effort to count criminals," Blakeley said.

The gunfighters were not all "good guys," Blakeley said. "Many of them were thieves and bandits."
