Welcome Home, Spartans

Capital City airport Saturday night was the scene of the biggest welcome home the Spartans have received so far this year. Several thousand people were present as Coach Duffy Daugherty and co-captains Clint Jones and George Webster were presented with the keys to the cities of Lansing and East Lansing.

Spartans romp to 2nd title, await Notre Dame invasion

By ED BRILL
State News Sports Writer

BLOOMINGTON, IND.—The Michigan State Spartans built up an early first half lead here Saturday, and then coasted to their second straight undisputed Big Ten title with a 37-19 win over Indiana.

It was the 14th straight conference win for MSU, the most ever scored by a Big Ten team in two seasons. And the Spartans became the first team since Ohio State in 1955 to repeat as conference champion.

Now, with the first big objective of the season secured, the focus shifts to this week-end, and the season's climactic meeting of Michigan State and Notre Dame—the two top-ranked teams in the nation.

The stage for the "Poli Bowl," as some have dubbed the Nov. 19 Spartan Stadium game, has been well set. MSU stands 9-0-0 for the season, and the Fighting Irish have won eight straight.

Quarterback Jimmy Raye sparked the Spartans once again Saturday, throwing three touchdown passes, and hitting seven of nine tosses for 171 yards.

Dwight Lee, Al Brenner, and Gene Washington were on the receiving end of Raye's TD strikes, and sophomore full-back Reggie Cavender scored the other two MSU touchdowns on bursts up the middle.

Dick Kenney added a 27-yard field goal and four points after touchdown for the Spartans. One of the conversions traveled 34 yards, after a penalty nullified a two-point try. Kenney also attempted a 57-yard field goal in the third period, but the ball hit the left upright, felling his bid for a Big Ten record.

Michigan State held the Hoosiers to minus 10 yards rushing, but gave up a league record 316 yards passing on 23 of 36 passes by quarterback Frank Stavroff.

"23 pass completions certainly gives you worries," said Spartan coach Duffy Daugherty after the game. "Our pass defense obviously wasn't as good as it has been in the past."

"It's nice to win a championship," added the not-completely-pleased Daugherty. "I enjoyed the final score and that's all that goes in the record books."

The Spartans actually had a commanding 37-7 lead early in the third period, when Daugherty put in the reserves. It was partly the poor condition of the field that prompted Daugherty to pull defensive stars George Webster and Charlie Thornhill early. With injuries possible on the wet turf, he didn't want to lose anyone for the game next week.

The Spartans took time to get going in the game, but scored on a 73-yard drive late in the first quarter. Half-back Clinton Jones, who ended up with 97 yards rushing in the game, started it off with a 37-yard gain around right end.

'Need to know' policy governs the release of student records

By FAYE UNGER
State News Staff Writer

Who gets to know what from student records is governed by the fluid principle of "need to know."

Usually only the directors in the Office for Student Affairs get to see the student's permanent record and the central disciplinary file.

A person seeking information on a student, whether it is an employer or intelligence officer, must ask a member of the central staff in the office for student affairs.

That staff member, usually Eldon Nonnamaker, associate dean of students, or Ira Baccus, assistant director in charge of records, decides what information can be released.

What will they release?

"We use the 'need to know' as our guideline," Nonnamaker said. "In most instances the person asking for information doesn't need to know."

Usually all that needs to be given out is a confirmation of attendance at the University. The employer can ask the student to have a transcript of his grades sent to him.

(The transcript, sent out by the registrar's office, contains a complete grade report and other academic information. It can also contain a record of suspension or strict disciplinary probation, but the student can ask the University to delete these.)

Nonnamaker and Baccus may also give out information on grade point and on serious disciplinary problems, however, if they think the employer needs to know such information.

"I'd very, very rarely give out any suspension or disciplinary information," Nonnamaker said.

"If a student had been withdrawn from the University because of psychological problems and was applying for a counseling job, however, I might think a little longer about saying no," he said. "If the student is going to work in a lab, the answer is no information."

As for those minor disciplinary problems, Baccus said:

3 PLANES DOWN

Israeli forces attack Jordan towns; UN enforces cease-fire command

TEL AVIV, Israel—Led by tanks, Israeli forces swept more than two miles into Jordan on Sunday, attacked three towns, and engaged in heavy fighting with the veteran Jordanian Arab Legion. Both sides claimed they had inflicted heavy losses.

Overhead, Israeli and Jordanian jets clashed in dogfights. The Israelis said on Jordanian plane was shot down, Jordan asserted it had bagged two Israeli jets.

Israel announced the raid, said to have been in brigade strength, was in retaliation for sabotage forays. Only Saturday

Israeli soldiers and an army commander were killed and six wounded in the same area when their car hit a land mine.

After over three hours of severe fighting, U.N. observers obtained a cease-fire and the Israeli soldiers retired.

The fighting boiled up about 30 miles south of Jerusalem in the bulge of Jordanian territory west of the Dead Sea.

An Israeli spokesman acknowledged stiff resistance from the Arab Legion in the town of Samu, with a population of about 3,500, but claimed the legion was beaten back.

THUMBS NOSE AT CROWD

Arizona killer moved to Phoenix

Robert B. Smith

MESA, Ariz. — Deep religious feelings tempered bitterness Sunday against a high school boy who laughed as he shot five women and two children and later thumbed his nose at an anger-dotted crowd.

Feeling ran high for a time Saturday after Robert Benjamin Smith, 18, made patrons and workers in a beauty shop lie on the floor while he coldly pumped bullet after bullet into them, killing four women and a small girl.

Angry words rose from some in the crowd that gathered at the police station after Smith's arrest, and Police Chief Gall Brimhall ordered the boy whisked to the Maricopa County Jail in Phoenix, 20 miles away.

But grief and sorrow, rather than violence, prevailed in this predominantly Mormon city of 50,000 Sunday.

"We feel that he will suffer more than anybody can inflict on him," said Shirley Olsen, mother of Mary Margaret Olsen, 18, killed as she cried and prayed.

Olsen is a Sunday school superintendent of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Mesa, center of the Mormon faith in Arizona.

As Mormons went to Sunday services and heard lay speakers, without referring to the killings, tell of God's eternal power to forgive, newsmen knocked at the door of a well-kept home on a palm-lined street.

Downtown at the police station, Chief Brimhall told newsmen that during questioning Saturday young Smith was asked what he would have done if his mother and 5-year-old sister, Lisa, had walked in during the shootings in the beauty shop.

"I would have killed them too," the chief quoted Smith as saying.

Brimhall played a tape of an interview he had Saturday with Bonita Sue Harris, 18, beauty shop employee who was the only adult to survive the mass slayings.

In a voice that wavered, Miss Harris told how the boy made them lie in a circle on the floor, their heads together, like the spokes of a wheel. She said he had a long-barreled, frontier model .22-caliber pistol which he reloaded after each shot.

Newest Spacewalker Sets 'Outside' Record

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—With a call from the heavens for peace on earth, America's newest spaceman deftly explored the world of the spacewalker for two record-shattering hours Sunday, hurdling the boldest goal of Gemini 12 with the grace of a skydiver.

Amazingly calm and talkative, Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. played the role of window-wiper and simple mechanic while more than doubling the record for time spent by any human exposed to the boundless, hostile arena outside his spaceship.

And Aldrin's 35,000-mile stroll, lasting precisely 2 hours, 9 minutes, 25 seconds, became -- by one minute -- the world's longest walk. Coupled with the time he spent standing in his seat yesterday, he has logged more than 4 1/2 hours outside -- with still another "stand-up" session Monday.

Afterwards, Aldrin and his command pilot, James A. Lovell Jr., sailed on to conquer other feats in their four-day voyage, the finale in the nations' Gemini program due for splashdown Tuesday morning.

They backed away from the Agena rocket linked to their nose the past two days, then tried to fly in formation with it while tied together with a 100-foot cord. Aldrin attached the cord from the Agena to a bar on Gemini 12's nose during his walk.

However, spacecraft control difficulty, one of several pesky troubles that has plagued the flight from the start, kept them from immediately settling into a fuel-saving formation flight. With Gemini 12 rolling slightly, primarily because two of their 16 maneuvering rockets went bad earlier in the day, the pilots could not keep the line taut.

"We have a very loose tether snaking around," Lovell said at one point as the two vehicles dangled apart. "And we might get it caught up in one of the antennas."

"We'd be in great shape right now if we had a control system. We just don't have any roll control," he added. "As long as that tether doesn't wrap around us, we'll be all right -- the Agena's in perfect shape."

The experiment was designed to see if both vehicles could become captured by earth's gravity in a lazy drift around the worked. In theory, once caught by gravity while traveling at virtually the same speed, the ships would stay the same distance apart.

Coolly escaping the fatigue problem that plagued astronauts before him, the studious, former combat pilot proved that man could work effectively in space so long as he takes it easy and has the proper equipment.

Aldrin ambled over to the Agena right off the bat and placed the looped end of the cord over a docking bar protruding from the nose of Gemini 12. When Navy Cmdr. Richard R. Gordon Jr. did this on Gemini 11, he got so tired sweat poured into his eyes forcing a quick end to his walk.

But what Aldrin had that Gordon didn't was a special waist strap, similar to the strap a window washer uses to keep from falling. This kept him from floating aimlessly while at work.

EXPECTS SHORT STAY

LBJ will have surgery at Bethesda Hospital

FREDERICKSBURG, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson announced Sunday he will undergo surgery Wednesday morning at Bethesda Naval Medical Center near Washington for removal of a small throat growth and to repair a gall bladder incision hernia.

He made the announcement of the time and place of the operation himself after attending Sunday morning church services here, 15 miles from the LBJ Ranch.

Johnson said he considers the surgery relatively minor and expects to be in the hospital only "a very few days." After that, he said he will return to Texas for most of the remainder of the year.

Johnson announced that he has signed the so-called foreign investors' tax bill—described by its critics as "the Christmas tree bill"—which carries a provision for voluntary taxpayer financing of presidential campaigns.

The presidential campaign financing provides that a taxpayer, by checking a box on his income tax return, may have $1 allotted to presidential campaign funds for the two major parties—without adding anything to his tax bill.

He disclosed also that he has vetoed a District of Columbia crime bill. In an accompanying statement he said he disapproved the measure because he feels that in an effort to extend police powers it would lead to complications and confusion and actually make the policeman's job harder.

Speaking of his operation, Johnson said the understanding on presidential inability which he reached with Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey two years ago will be operative during and after the surgery.

This authorizes the vice president to act in emergencies when the President is unable to do so. Presumably this would be operative while Johnson is under anesthesia or not fully recovered from its effects—a period estimated at a couple of hours. Humphrey's authority would be limited to meeting emergencies and would not apply to routine business.

The President, with Mrs. Johnson sitting alongside, told a news conference at the Fredericksburg Municipal Center, "I feel fine."

He conceded that like anyone else "I wish I didn't have to do it," but that he is pleased because he feels he has good doctors, hospital staff and people around him. He plans to fly back to Washington on Monday morning and enter the hospital Tuesday afternoon.

Last week, Johnson expressed a wish to have the surgery over with as soon as possible, partly because he is anxious to learn the nature of the small polyp in his throat near his vocal cords.

Early enrollment held this week

Early enrollment begins today at the Men's Intramural Building for those students whose last names begin with letters S-Z.

Students should take their completed Student Schedule Card and student ID to the IM Building during a free period between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. They will then be given a Registration Section Request Form, which should be completed with the schedule sequence numbers and credits of all the courses the student wishes to take winter term.

Those who participate in early enrollment will then be eligible to complete registration during the week of final exams, December 12-16, and will not have to report for the regular registration period, Jan. 3-4.

Blood drive begins today; sponsors hope for 1,776 pints

First Donor

Steve Juday has donated the first pint of blood for the fall term blood drive. Only 1,775 more pints are needed.

"It doesn't hurt a bit," said Steve Juday, quarterback of the '65 Spartan gridgers, as he gave the first pint of blood to kick-off the 1966 fall-term drive underway this week.

Today through Friday students can donate blood in Demonstration Hall. Hours are 2-8 p.m. Today through Thursday, and 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Friday.

"Christmas in November" is the theme of this year's drive and the goal is 1,776 pints of blood.

Blood donated from MSU students will be used for three open-heart surgeries to be performed in Ann Arbor in the near future. Each operation requires at least 20 pints of blood.

The Michigan Dept. of Health and the Red Cross will also use the blood donated for research purposes. An anti-hemophilic-globulin factor will be taken from the blood donated here. This factor aids in the immediate clotting of a hemophilic's bleeding.

"Giving blood hurts a lot less than stubbing your toes, and does a lot more good," said Jo Ann Newman, co-ordinator of the Mid-Michigan chapter of the Red Cross.

Persons in good health between the ages of 18 and 60 are eligible to give blood. A signed parental or guardian's permit is required for single minors.

Doctors and nurses will be in attendance to ask prospective donors about present and past health, and check hemoglobin, temperature, pulse and blood pressure.

Echoes on the Rhine

Out of the bubbling cauldron of West German politics a new chancellor has emerged. Kurt Kiesinger.

When Ludwig Erhard was forced out of office by the breakdown of his coalition in the Bundestag, his party, the Christian Democrats, were hard pressed to find a successor.

Finally they selected Kiesinger. A Gaullist with a Nazi background, he served as a liaison officer between the Goebbels propaganda ministry and the foreign ministry during the war.

Kiesinger favors a more independent course for Germany and looser ties with the United States--in short, more nationalism.

While we tend to view this skeptically, we realize that it is the result of a natural tendency.

KURT KIESINGER

Germany is attempting to regain its collective self-respect lost since World War II and get out from under the thumb (beneficent though it may be) of the occupying nations.

To expect a nation to have foreign troops stationed on its soil as occupation forces without a resurgence of nationalism is unrealistic.

But while this nationalism should be carefully watched, the same occupation forces which engender it will prevent the rise of a "Fourth Reich."

Only tradition keeps council closed

Last week the academic council met to discuss academic freedom for students. Students, however, were not free to attend. The council has a long-standing policy of excluding students and the press from its meetings.

Unless tradition is considered a reason, there seems to be no good reason for keeping this policy.

When asked about the ruling, William K. Combs, dean of University Services and secretary of the council, replied that it was an old policy which had not been questioned since he had been on the council.

The council typically discusses general matters involving student and faculty affairs.

It does not ordinarily discuss confidential or personal matters.

If it were to discuss such matters it could go into a committee of the whole.

Combs also mentioned the possibility that too many people would come to the meetings and disrupt them.

If an Academic Council meeting were to draw 20 observers who didn't have a specific reason for going it would be a landmark in the fight against apathy.

Probably the only people who would attend would be members of the press and a few interested faculty members.

There is no reason for closing the meetings except tradition, and it seems that as far as the Academic Council is concerned, tradition is more important than reason.

Vote tomorrow (the winner...)

When Soapy Williams and Zolton Fereny were confronted with the fact that the CBS Voter Profile Analysis (VPA) had declared them losers they could only react with frustrated shock.

"The polls haven't even closed yet," said Soapy. "Only 13 per cent of the vote has been counted."

There is no doubt that computers are becoming faster, more accurate and more deadly as time goes by. They are able to predict results on the basis of fewer and fewer returns.

One wonders if this might not in the future subvert the elective process.

One can realistically see in the future an announcement that "on the basis of the 500 votes counted so far, VPA has declared Senator Smoosh the victor."

But what happens after that? Certainly there will be further refining of scientific election predictions.

One can imagine an old gray-haired Walter Cronkite reporting on presidential election night, 1992.

"...and that takes care of the 1992, '96, '00, '04, '08 and 2012 contests and they certainly were exciting campaigns, weren't they Roger?"

"Yes, Walt, they certainly were. An interesting point, Walt, is that..."

"Excuse me, Roger, but our Voter Profile Analysis has just picked another winner, Governor Elliot McIntyre of Missouri has just been declared the winner of the Presidential race of the year 2044. We have been able to reach Governor McIntyre outside his kindergarten class in Indian Bend, Missouri."

"This is certainly a big day for Governor McIntyre, Walt. In addition to his projected victory, his birthday tomorrow will make him six years old."

"Yes, Roger. And in addition to that, the anniversary of his marriage to his lovely wife Sally is next week. And the anniversary is her birthday and she'll be two. Now let's switch to Eric in Indian Bend."

"Hello, Walt. I hope that you can hear me over the excitement here outside Miss Proctor's kindergarten class. It's usually a quiet town here where Governor McIntyre is growing up, but after this fantastic victory they're pulling out all stops and it's cup cakes for everyone tomorrow after play period. Walt! The Governor is coming now, Governor! Thank you, Governor. How do you feel?"

"Ha, ha, ha, ha."

"Do you feel good, Governor?"

"You come right back in this room Eliot McIntyre. I'm sorry, he gets so silly at times."

"Well, Walt, you heard Miss Proctor. I'm afraid that we won't get any more out of the Governor today."

"OK, Eric. Let's switch to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Guest, parents of Sally Guest, the President's future wife."

"Hello, Walt, I have Sally here with me. How do you feel? Excited? Proud? Are you happy? Sally? ... I'm sorry, Walt, Sally is hiding her face in her mother's skirts and evidently we won't be able to get any comment from her right now."

"OK, Ed. How about a word from the loser, Roger?"

"Well, Walter, Senator Russick lost a close race by only about 2 per cent of the popular vote. Unfortunately, Voter Profile Analysis has told us that he will be unavailable for comment."

"Why's that, Roger?"

"Well, Walt, Senator Russick is not due to be born for another 12 years. VPA goes on to say, Walt, that the primary reason for Russick's defeat is his youth. He will be only 40 years old when he runs and this was apparently a negative factor in his campaign."

"Thank you, Roger. Now, in 2048..."

THE READERS' MINDS

ASMSU traffic appointment hit

To the Editor:

Before the establishment of ASMSU, appointments to the All-University Traffic Committee were handled through the Dean of Students office, which made recommendations for appointment to President Hannah. Beginning spring 1965, the ASMSU Board undertook this responsibility. Each year it delegates one member-at-large to handle petitions and submit recommendations; the Board then approves the final list of recommendations and alternates to be sent to the President for decision and appointment.

Last spring, after two years on the traffic committee as the representative of on-campus students, and after having been recommended by the responsible member-at-large for reappointment, the Board specifically deleted my name from the list to be sent to the President. I was not at that time notified of the action, nor given any chance to defend myself. I discovered the deletion this fall when I read the State News article containing the names of those who had been recommended to the President, and found my name was not among them. Subsequently I talked with ten members of the Student Board, and exchanged correspondence with the Board Chairman, Freer, Texas, senior.

I was told that my not having a car on campus made me unable properly to understand student drivers' problems. However, when I was reappointed to the traffic committee in 1965, I did not have a car and this was not a limiting factor. Moreover, this year I do have a car; and had I been asked, I could have made known this fact last spring.

Some members felt I already was too involved to do an adequate job on the committee. I knew last spring, and told anyone who asked me, that I was dropping out of student government this year.

The necessity of turnover for maintaining vitality of representation was mentioned. This might be a valid point; but that it is not a Board policy is reflected by the statement of the vice chairman of the Board that this action of the Board was highly unusual.

The one factor mentioned most often and emphasized most was that the Board was not in agreement with my opinions on special driving and parking privileges for student government personnel. Apparently, this rather personal reason was the primary, if not the only, cause of my dismissal.

To blame the Board for their action would be ridiculous. They did precisely what any good political body would have done under similar circumstances. Had they been a bit more practiced, of course, they probably would have done their work more adequately by allowing me to speak my piece before they made their formal decision, when it would have been harmless. However, a student member of the traffic committee is chosen to represent a segment of the student body (at present the four student members represent on-campus students, off-campus students, graduate students, and students in married housing.) Supposedly, then, my responsibility was to the on-campus students, not to the ASMSU Board. At the present writing, the accusation has not yet been leveled that while on the committee I did a bad job of representing the on-campus students.

My concern now is that the situation permits my successors to be subjected to the same pressure. Whether they represent their groups will not be as important as whether their opinions find favor with the Board members. In order to minimize this problem, I propose that where one of the represented groups has a governmental structure, that structure be permitted to pick the recommendations for the position on the traffic committee. Specifically, at this time this would mean that MHA and WIC would choose recommendations for the on-campus representative; and that some combination of OCC, IFC, ICC, and the sororities' presidents' council would choose recommendations for the off-campus representative.

Certainly this suggested alteration could not eliminate all political pressure, but certainly it could spread it out more.

Pat Terry
Freer, Texas, senior

Gap

To the Editor:

How can this be? Is our president, John Hannah, misquoted in stating (in the Monday Nov. 7 edition's front page article headline) that the "U. must 'reflect spirit of own (the) time' - Hannah?"

Any Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary will attest to the fact that "Zeitgeist" bears this same meaning--and yet, Zeitgeist is officially both unsanctioned and unwanted, and, in effect, unrecognized. Could there be a gap between administrative ideology and policy?

Thank you MSU

To the Editor:

Thank you MSU for giving me a chance to be a "headpiece filled with straw." Thank you ATL Committee for making me realize that at MSU only the unexamined life is worth living. Thank you MSU for protecting me against the danger of ever questioning or penetrating below surface reality. Thank you MSU for saving me the trouble of selecting my own values and evaluating my own creative literature (Zeitgeist). Thank MSU for giving me the option to be rather than to know.

Thank you MSU for preventing other students from pushing life into a corner under Groat, Fogarty, or Lawless. Thank you MSU for denying them this - one of the greatest experiences I was fortunate to have at this university. Thank you MSU for guaranteeing that freshmen can now emerge from their ATL cocoon complacently satisfied with their instilled belief system.

Thank you MSU for preventing your own "Coming of Sage."

Take the initiative

To the Editor:

I read a letter in the (Oct. 28) issue of the State News which was a cry for help from a student named Kenneth R. Heimer. He maintained that nobody cared whether or not he remained a student at MSU. He also referred to computers, numbers, and...

MSU is big. MSU is diversified. MSU is tamasically... (over) Yes, but MSU is also human. MSU is also personal. And MSU will give help to those who ask for it. Nobody at MSU will check to see if you went to the doctor last week like mom and dad used to. But there are people who will listen and help if a student has the courage to ask. The competition at MSU is tough and this is something a lot of students aren't used to living with. Sometimes it seems that the profs are only interested in the students who are interested in them. This may be the case. Places like MSU are without doubt the only learning institutions where a prof can ask a question to a class of 100 and get not a single reply. But Mr. Heimer I will tell you this. There are vice presidents at your university who will take the time to help you. There are faculty members who will do the same. If you don't know any faculty member, which is highly possible, ask one in your major field of study. And of course the dormitory advisers and counseling center are always available.

Romney sidesteps the '68 issue

Gov. George Romney sounding very much like a candidate for President, said he hasn't decided yet whether or not he wants the office.

"There are many things which will enter into my consideration for the Presidency," Romney said Sunday on the television program, "Meet the Press."

"I will have to find out if the people want me, and if the rank and file wants me."

The man who is President of the United States must have solutions for many problems which confront the nation, he noted. A few minutes earlier he vowed to study more intensely the Viet Nam war so as to be able to offer specifics on how the war could be ended.

Romney, who answered questions which dealt mostly with national problems, cited Michigan as an example of how national problems could be solved. "Current legislation to deal with social injustices is shallow," he said. "We must get individual people and private institutions to help solve the problem."

We should have federal action to guarantee housing for all people regardless of creed or color, he said.

Romney sees the war in Viet Nam as the most far-reaching, meaningful, and complex problem facing the U.S. today.

"The war affects both our foreign and domestic problems," he said. "I think Secy. McNamara is overly optimistic about the war, and I intend to make specific proposals as soon as I have more information."

Asked about the possibility of Red China's becoming a member of the U.N., Romney said that the U.S. should help that country become a member of the world organization with an eye toward stemming the Communist trend in Red China.

The governor favors trading with communist countries when it does not affect our own security. Members of the press, who seemed intent on getting Romney to commit himself one way or the other on a presidential nomination, asked the governor several questions

Would Romney be satisfied if Goldwater gave him the same support in 1968 as he gave Goldwater in 1964.

"Who you support for president is a personal choice, and each person should be able to make the choice for himself," Romney said.

VC leader convinced U.S. will pull out

MOSCOW (AP) -- Nguyen Huu Tho, leader of the Viet Cong, was reported Sunday to be convinced that the United States will get out of Viet Nam.

"We showed during the past dry season that we can defeat the best units of the American armed forces," the Viet Cong leader said in an interview with Australian Communist newsman Wilfred S. Burchett. The interview in South Viet Nam was published in Red Star the paper of the Soviet Defense Ministry.

Japanese airliner crashes, 50 missing

MATSUYAMA, Japan (P) -- A Japanese airliner with 50 persons aboard plunged into Japan's Inland Sea on Sunday night after an unsuccessful landing attempt in a rainstorm at this southwestern Japanese city. Officials reported no signs of survivors in the nation's fourth major air disaster this year.

At least 14 persons aboard the plane were newlyweds heading for resorts on the picturesque Inland Sea for honeymoons. Sunday had been considered an auspicious day for marriages, according to the old Japanese calendar.

Indonesia names new ambassador to U.S.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) -- Indonesia has named Suwito Kusumawidagdo as its new ambassador to the United States, it was reported here Sunday. Suwito has been first assistant foreign minister for the past four years. He will succeed L.N. Palar in Washington.

Kiesinger seeks new French ties

WUERZBURG, Germany (P) -- Kurt George Kiesinger, the Christian Democratic candidate to succeed Chancellor Ludwig Erhard, said Sunday that close ties with France are a key problem of West German foreign policy.

In his first speech since his controversial nomination Thursday, Kiesinger declared that for security reasons, West Germany also cannot do without good relations with the United States.

He also announced that he wants Franz Joseph Strauss, the former defense minister, to be a member of his cabinet. Strauss heads the powerful Bavarian wing of the Christian Democrats, whose support was vital in making Kiesinger the party's top candidate. In foreign affairs, Kiesinger said, a solution should be found that is based on links with France and the United States. He spoke up against what he called the "mendacious differentiation between Gauls and Atlantists."

But he made plain that he was in favor of stepped up contacts between Bonn and Paris.

Kiesinger also urged gradual improvement of relations with Moscow.

Soviet leaders, he said, had proved they were "wise realists." Thus, he added, they should know that "there will be no lack of good will on our side if we want to begin building mutual confidence" between Bonn and Moscow.

His announcement that Strauss should be a member of the new government did not come as a surprise. Strauss' Bavarian group, in declaring Kiesinger their favorite candidate, had unanimously urged that Strauss be given a cabinet position that "influenced decisively" German policy.

But it appeared doubtful that Kiesinger's emphatic mention of Strauss would boost his chances of winning a majority in the Bundestag.

And the Free Democrats, whose resignation from the Bonn government last month started the cabinet crisis, have a long record of feuding with the bull-necked Bavarian leader.

Kiesinger also is under fire because of his association with the Nazis. He joined the party in 1933 but says he became disappointed with it a year later.

OUTER SPACE

Lovell 'keeps cool' in walk

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (P) -- The command "open her up" Sunday sent Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin Jr., a scholarly pioneer, into the weird, weightless void to become the world's foremost walker and worker in space.

"Are you still cool?" asked command pilot James A. Lovell Jr., the minute his Gemini 12 partner had left their snug orbiting capsule, and the matter-of-fact answer came: "I am still cool."

Here is the conversation, early in his two-hour walk, in which Aldrin made an unrehearsed international gesture on his own: Aldrin: Houston, Gemini 12 here. I have a couple of messages for you.

Mission control: Ready to copy.

Aldrin: Roger. In commemoration of launch day, on Nov. 11, I have an emblem here I'd like to leave in orbit. It says Nov. 11, Vets Day.

MC: Roger, copy, Nov. 11, Vets Day.

Aldrin: I'd like to extend the meaning of it to include all of the people in the world who have been and will continue to strive for peace and freedom in the world.

MC: Mighty fine. Aldrin's next message opened up joshing among Navy Capt. Lovell and Air Force Maj. Wil-

GOP in, Dems hold committees

WASHINGTON (P) -- A prominent House Democrat said Sunday the impact of Republican gains on administration programs should be eased by liberals' retention of key committees despite the changed ratio in House membership.

This recommendation came from Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., after the House majority leader, Rep. Carl Albert, D-Okla., conceded in a separate interview that Tuesday's elections will force shelving of some of President Johnson's newer plans.

I am Anders, capsule communicator, both Naval Academy graduates, and Air Force Maj. Aldrin, who was graduated from West Point before completing his doctorate at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Aldrin: This message concerns a contest coming up in the future. I'll read it out loud so you all can hear it: Go Army, beat Navy.

MC: Ah, Roger. Understand. Beat Army.

Aldrin: I knew we had the wrong camp com on that. Now take your pictures, Jim.

Lovell: What a terrible job. I hate to do that.

Later, while Aldrin was running through a rehearsed schedule of tasks at a work bench on the spacecraft's outside:

Aldrin: Now a loose bolt with a washer is being inserted into a plate.

Lovell: Okay--take it easy now.

Aldrin: Holder is just sitting there in the hole now. It is not engaged. I fumbled the bolt and the washer and they both went underneath my helmet. So I pushed them forward and moved myself away from them and put them together and that bolt is now going in. I'll give it a couple of more times.

Lovell: Oh, I see. You played a little orbital mechanics to retrieve these.

Aldrin: Yeah. I had to do a little rendezvous there.

Fans start lining up for ND game tickets

Spartan fans started lining up Friday night for tickets to the Notre Dame game. Armed with lawn chairs, sleeping bags and lots of coffee, they started their cold vigil outside Jenison Fieldhouse.

By 4 p.m., Sunday there were about 115 students in line. Philip Borkowski, Livonia senior, who was first in line, said he arrived at 6 p.m. Friday for his first shift.

The groups--living units and groups of friends--are working in shifts varying from three to 12 hours at a time.

When asked if it was worth it, a few at the head of the line said, "It's the game of the decade." "National Championship!" and "I even got fired for not going to work this weekend."

William Moehring, Flint senior, said he and his friends had been at games for three years and wanted 50-yard-line seats for a change.

Gerald Snyder, Cincinnati, Ohio senior, sitting on the cold sidewalk at the end of the line, said it was worth the trouble "if we play as well as we can."

Some people wonder if standing in line for almost three days makes any sense. Others might wonder even more about the sign displayed by one of the waiters.

Spartan week declared by Romney

Saturday night's airport reception for the winning Spartans launched Nov. 13-19 as "Spartan Week in Michigan," officially declared in a proclamation by Gov. George Romney.

City of Lansing treasurer Gerald Graves, tribute committee chairman, reports no definite plans as yet for the week but anticipates arousing State spirit through posters and activities.

Fans, the MSU pep band, and singing braved the cold Saturday night to meet the team at the airport and hear Lt. Gov. William Milliken read Romney's proclamation.

"This highly significant football feat resulted because all players and coaches played each game separately, without looking ahead to the next, and keeping their eyes on the overall target of conference title of two years in a row," read part of the proclamation.

Some people wonder if standing in line for almost three days makes any sense. Others might wonder even more about the sign displayed by one of the waiters.

Champs 'subdued' about title

Dogged Again

Charlie Wedemeyer (11) and Bill Feraco (14) gaze at the second canine in as many years to take the field at an MSU-Indiana football game. The rest of the Spartans huddle up, and get ready to capture their second straight Big Ten championship.

By ED BRILL
State News Sports Writer

The Spartans have just finished doing what a lot of people said they never could, and for the second year in a row the Big Ten football title was theirs. But the cold afternoon, the wet field, the banged-up bodies, and the thoughts of Notre Dame—somehow all this seemed to take an edge off the accomplishment. The mood on the plane back to East Lansing, a plane full of tired ballplayers, could best be described as "subdued elation." There was no outward sign of the championship win, but ask any player how he felt about it all and his answer would be the same.

"GREAT," said Bubba Smith, "I feel great. The only thing we have to look forward to now is Notre Dame, and we'll be ready for them Saturday, too." "Because I'm a senior, I think I'll remember and cherish this one even more than last year," said Dick Kenney. "But we've accomplished just one-half of what we set out to do this season. We have the Big Ten championship, now we have another championship to go." Gene Washington, a track star when he's not hauling in passes on the football field, is on his fifth Big Ten championship team in a row.

"I feel very happy about it," said Washington, "it's something unusual to play on that many champion teams."

George Webster, senior co-captain of the team, suggested that the team was perhaps a little happier this year than after the title last year.

"We just won for the sake of winning," Webster commented, "there was no Rose Bowl incentive."

Pat Gallinagh explained the reasons for the apparent calm during the long wait and plane ride home.

CLINTON JONES

"We play on pride," the senior defensive guard said. "We're happy when we win, but we're not happy when we know we haven't played our best."

"Everyone knows we're going to play Notre Dame, but there is no sense of fear," he continued.

"If we put everything together, we can be the best team in the nation," Gallinagh said, "and everyone on the team knows what we have to do."

"The pressure is on Notre Dame," Gallinagh declared, "because we've won our championship, and we've won it outright and decisively."

IOWA CHAMPS

Harriers second in Big 10

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

MADISON -- It was bridesmaid time again for the MSU cross country team here Saturday, and the Spartans finished in the runner-up position at the Big Ten Championships for the third straight year.

Iowa won, scoring 41 points to the Spartans' 61. Wisconsin was third with 68 and Minnesota, the pre-meet favorite, fourth with 73. Indiana and Michigan tied for fifth with 161, Northwestern was seventh with 181, Illinois, eighth with 200, and Ohio State, ninth with 224. Purdue did not run in the contest.

MSU annexed second, sixth, 11th, 16th, and 26th places in the meet for their point total, with the Spartans sixth and seventh men grabbing 34th and 43rd, respectively.

Dick Sharkey, MSU's captain, lead the field for the first three and one half miles of the four-mile race, before he was passed by Iowa's Larry Wiczorek, and forced to settle for second place, fifteen yards behind at the finish. Sharkey covered the first mile in 4:31, with Wiczorek eight seconds behind, and then maintained his lead at the halfway point with a 9:21 clocking for two miles. Sharkey increased his lead to 10 seconds with a 14:20 time for three miles before losing out in the final quarter of the race.

Sharkey's time of 19:10 was eight seconds slower than Wiczorek's record setting clocking. The Iowa broke the Big Ten record for the Odana Hills Course by 30 seconds and eclipsed the 19:06 clocking of MSU's Henry Kennedy (set in 1960) for an unmeasured four-mile course.

Spartan seniors George Balthrop and Eric Zemper were sixth and 11th, respectively. Balthrop crossed the finish line in 19:34 and Zemper, in 19:48 for their best efforts of the season.

Balthrop's finish was two places higher than last season, while Zemper's finish was two places lower than when he last ran in a Big Ten meet two years ago.

Sophomores Roger Merchant and Dean Rosenberg gained 16th and 26th places in their first conference meet with clockings of 19:57 and 20:16, respectively. Fellow sophomore Pat Wilson was MSU's seventh man, finishing 43rd in 21:12.

Junior Art Link, who was 11th in the conference meet last year, nose dived to 34th despite his best time ever, 20:34 for the four miles.

TD PASSES

QB Pitts paces frosh over Hoosiers, 25-13

BLOOMINGTON -- The Michigan State freshman football team, paced by the passing of Jack Pitts and the running of Kermit Smith and LaMarr Thomas, won its first game of the year here Saturday, beating Indiana 25-13.

The highly-rated Indiana frosh jumped off to the early lead in the game, on a 65-yard drive after the opening kickoff. Quarterback Harry Gonzo passed 10 yards to flanker Jake Butcher for a 6-0 Hoosier lead.

The Spartans came right back, though, as the 195-pound Thomas brought the ball up to the Indiana 49 on a series of hard runs. Then Pitts hit Smith with a screen pass, and the speedy halfback raced 51 yards for the score.

Pitts then brought the Spartans down for another score in the first period, completing three passes for 43 yards, Frank Foreman caught a seven-yard pass in the end zone, and Steve Garvey added the extra point for a 13-7 MSU lead.

The teams exchanged the ball five times in the second period, including a pass interception by Don Highsmith and a fumble recovery by Charles Cousino for the Spartans, but neither team could score.

Finally Indiana quarterback John Isenberger, chased back 21 yards, was hit by Rich Saul on the one and fumbled into the end zone. Calvin Fox recovered the ball for an MSU touchdown, and a 19-6 lead.

MSU boosted its margin to 25-6 in the fourth period, on a 34-yard scoring pass from Pitts to Foreman.

Highsmith scored a touchdown on a 61-yard return of an intercepted pass in the third quarter, but a roughing the passer penalty nullified the play.

Indiana closed the scoring on a 39-yard scamper by Gonzo around left end for a TD.

Freshman Coach Ed Rutherford was pleased with the team's performance and named Pitts and Kermit Smith as outstanding performers.

Pitts hit eight of 11 passes for 99 yards, and Smith caught four tosses for 77. Highsmith was the game's leading rusher with 42 yards, and Thomas next for the Spartans with 33.

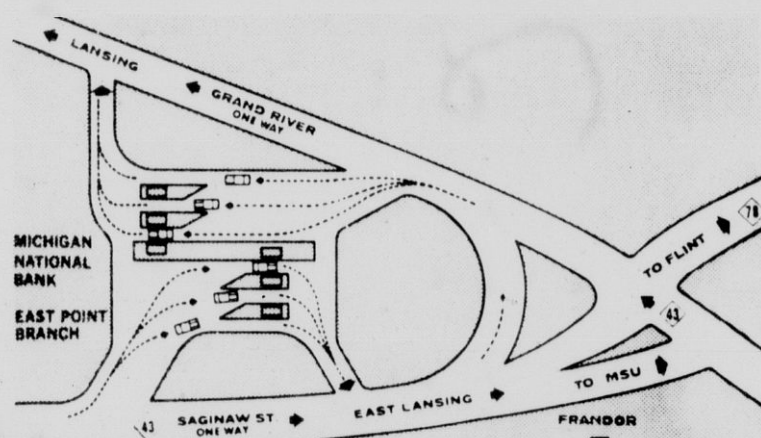

This Friday evening, the MSU frosh meet the Notre Dame's freshman team at East Lansing High School field.

Kickoff is set for 7:45. Admission will be $1 for the general public and $.50 for MSU students and students high school age or younger.

Our champs
come homeBy LARRY WERNER
State News Sports Editor

The Spartan lockerroom wasn't exactly the epitome of excitement after MSU trounced Indiana and won its second consecutive Big Ten championship, Saturday.

It was a quiet bus that crawled the southern Indiana highways from Bloomington to the Indianapolis Airport, and the plane from Indianapolis to Lansing wasn't what one would expect after such an accomplishment as the Spartans had recently enacted.

There was something missing which usually characterizes championships.

There was happiness. Although the team was nearly silent, each member would tell you how happy the title had made him.

The missing element was good-old-fashioned pat-on-the-back noise. Team members can be happy in winning, but there is something about hearing your fans screaming their approval and bellowing out the fight song.

It wasn't in Indiana or on the way home.

But it was waiting for the champions at Capitol City Airport.

And this outdated tradition called "school spirit," which it has been said—is dying in the huge multiversities, came out of hiding for a few hours Saturday night.

And this spirit transformed the tired, solemn Spartan faces into happy ones.

Doctor James Feurig, team physician, is a happy man. He tried to cheer things up on the team bus as it left the scene of victory.

"There'll be a mob at the airport tonight," Feurig said.

"I doubt it," one player said. From the back of the bus came: "It's usually between five and six girls."

The tremendous airport reception was not expected by the team. They were thinking of other returns from victory this year, when they stepped off the plane and asked, "Where are our fans?"

Saturday, the fans were there. So were some important people. But it was the unimportant people, the fans, that Clint Jones, George Webster and the rest wanted to see—and hear.

They saw. They heard. They smiled.

They smiled when the plane was nearing Lansing and the pilot announced, "We've been talking to the Lansing tower. There are hundreds of people waiting for your arrival."

It was at that moment that it began to feel like the Spartans had won a championship. That announcement made me proud to be a Michigan Stater.

When the takeoff was delayed because a TWA jet had parked too close to the United team plane, the Spartan passengers commented that, if there was a crowd, it would certainly be significantly depleted by this misfortune.

Perhaps the Spartans should have had more confidence in their fans.

Confidence. Confidence may be one of the reasons for the somewhat lesser enthusiasm for football this year than last. The fans have too much confidence in their team. They are used to winning and get excited only for the big games.

But Saturday they were excited, and their excitement repaid a debt the fans owed to the team and was a present as well.

The screaming, the singing and the sirens. It was like Christmas morning for the team.

While the victors' buses followed their police escort down Michigan Ave., Bubba Smith looked up and wailed, "Man, I'm digging this action."

When Duffy Daugherty took the platform at the airport, he thanked the crowd. He was truly expressing the feelings of the team members.

They were indeed thankful. "We have not played our best game yet," Daugherty said. "We're saving that one for next week."

The crowd answered, "Beat Notre Dame."

The reception was a great end to a great conference season. It was also the beginning of a great week—"Spartan Victory Week," as proclaimed by Gov. George Romney.

Varsity displays defense in downing frosh cagers

By BOB HORNING

It's been eight months since MSU's last basketball game, but one thing was immediately familiar in the varsity's 92-44 pounding of the freshmen Friday night—defense.

In a game as lopsided as Anyteam vs. the Detroit Lions, the varsity showed the same kind of defense that helped it to a 17-7 record last year.

And Coach John Benington says the Spartans just started work on defense a week ago. It didn't take them long to recover their aggressiveness, blocking shots, stealing passes and suffocating their men.

Especially when needed, the defense came through. During one stretch of seven minutes, the frosh scored only two points, enabling the varsity to grab a fairly safe lead, 90-41, with 1:30 left.

The offense was a little different.

The Spartans will be able to use the two - and - one - half weeks before the first game to get the plays and patterns ironed out.

Benington didn't expect the offense to come as quickly, however, and that's why he started working on it a month ago.

With the varsity continuously cracking the freshmen for close shots, it was hard to tell whether they will have any potency from the outside, but it didn't look like there is a replacement yet for Bill Curtis' outside shot.

The guards, John Bailey (14 points), Steve Rymal (eight) and Shannon Reading (eight) did more than their share of scoring, but most of it on lay-ups off weaves and set plays.

When the older boys grabbed a 12-3 lead in the first five minutes behind Bailey's eight points, it was obvious that one team was a challenger in the Big Ten one was a group of just-assembled youngsters in their first college game.

Some potential was shown, however, especially in Lloyd Ward and Bob Gale.

Gale, a 6-5 forward from Trout Creek, led the freshmen with 14 points, many on long range shots. Ward, 5-9 from Romulus, came up with 11 points as a result of his scrambling and accounted for several more with his steals and passes.

With the varsity dominating the rebounds most of the game, they were able to test their fast break ability which Benington said might be more prevalent this year. It worked for a few quick baskets before they went back to their old style.

Art Baylor, who is supposed to have a still-mending right leg, looked like he was springing off a trampoline when he went after rebounds. The 6-6 junior had six points and seven rebounds, a game high for rebounding, while he was in.

The varsity starters only played about half the time. Heywood Edwards attracted attention when he got in, scoring nine points and rebounding well.

As Benington has said, the biggest problem for MSU will be to replace Stan Washington and Bill Curtis at the forwards. Baylor, Lee Lafayette (eight points), Ted Cray (four) and Edwards collected 27 points among them.

Junior guard John Bailey, who led the varsity with 14 points in its 92-44 victory over the freshmen, flies in on a layup for two of them. Matt Aitch looks on in the background.

Clay, Williams fight tonight

NEW YORK (UPI)—Promoters hope to attract a near-capacity crowd to the 66,000 seat Astro-dome in Houston Monday night when Cassius Clay defends his heavyweight crown against Cleveland (Big Cat) Williams.

Clay will be defending his title on United States soil for the first time since beating Floyd Patterson in Las Vegas, Nev., Nov. 22. Since then, the Louisville slugger defeated George Chuvalo in Toronto, Henry Cooper and Brian London in England and Karl Mildenberger in Germany.

Clay, Williams fight tonight

NEW YORK (UPI)—Promoters hope to attract a near-capacity crowd to the 66,000 seat Astro-dome in Houston Monday night when Cassius Clay defends his heavyweight crown against Cleveland (Big Cat) Williams.

Clay will be defending his title on United States soil for the first time since beating Floyd Patterson in Las Vegas, Nev., Nov. 22. Since then, the Louisville slugger defeated George Chuvalo in Toronto, Henry Cooper and Brian London in England and Karl Mildenberger in Germany.

Doubting Thomas Paine reawakens for ATL students

A real revolution rouser, ATL associate professor Robert Morsberger, was called a "beatnik, a drunkard, an atheist and a coward" by John Forman, ATL instructor, during an hour-long TV program attempting to make history a "now" instead of a "then."

In front of a student TV audience and a participating class in Giltner, Morsberger took the role of Tom Paine. He consistently maintained the character of the man whose pamphlet "Common Sense" voiced the demand of the American people for immediate and unconditional independence for the colonies.

Morsberger revolutionized the clichéd character of Tom Paine in front of the TV cameras with his performance. Never once losing the sense of the "I," his delivery was in full and exciting with the fiery and flamboyant echoes of the Revolution.

One student said, "His voice... his face... just the whole way he is... I think Paine would have been just like this."

Another said, "I thought it was Jimmy Stewart on screen until he began speaking."

Speaking as Paine, Morsberger attacked organized religion because of its enslaving and terrifying structure. Speaking as in the eloquent and fiery tones of the Enlightenment, he offered some little discussed views on some heroes of the revolution. He claimed that Benedict Arnold was in fact a greater general than Washington.

"Where freedom is not, there is my country..." he stormed as Paine did in his oration. Admitting to be a revolutionary instigator, he recounted his days at Valley Forge and of his part in the French Revolution. Intermittently, he asked the student audience, "Is there any rum or brandy in the house to warm a man on this cold morning?"

"Come on, Tom," patronized Forman from the sidelines. "You can't fool us. You are an atheist."

"I am not sir," he shouted. "I am a deist. I believe in the basic goodness of man. I do believe in God. It is the dead man and the flying pigeon that I deny."

"What was it you wanted to tell us in your writings, Tom?" Forman asked.

"I would teach men the truth, sir. That is all. I would tell them to use their God-given reason. I would tell them not to listen to the preachers speak of their depravity, nor of original sin. I would tell them that the way to truth is the Doubting Thomas Paine way."

"Have you any faults, Paine?" Forman asked.

"I am but a man. I am as all men. Oh, I've been drunk. Why there have been times when I have been so drunk I barely knew the week had passed. But, sir, I am no devil. I have no horns nor tail."

"Come on, Tom, we know that you are anti-everything. Maybe you are suffering from a persecution complex."

"I am not anti," sir, I am for the Age of Reason. I believe in the simple truths of a rational religion. I do not lean on the Bible, only on nature."

"But sir, I am no devil -- I have neither horns nor tail."

Buckley praised by Jeffrey Hart

THE AMERICAN DISSENT: A Decade of Modern Conservatism, by Jeffrey Hart. (Doubleday, $4.95) Don M. Hausdorff, Associate professor of ATL reviews.

This book is mistitled. It should have been called "A Hymn to William Buckley," since the author genuflects at each new issue of the ultra-rightist "National Review."

A prominent Republican remarked that the Far Right condemns itself to irrelevance by the vast range of social issues that it does not even consider.

Here, Jeffrey Hart, an English teacher at Dartmouth, admits off-handedly that Buckley, Kirk, Bozell and Burnham have paid very little attention to the problems of automation, city planning and natural resources.

He somehow fails to notice that his book, a primer of American conservatism, tends also to omit any real consideration of poverty, the causes of youthful unrest and racial tension, air pollution, population growth, or, for that matter, the implications of the hydrogen bomb.

The author's explication of ultraconservatism is imbued with the gloss of scholarship. As with Buckley's pseudo-intellectual polemics, what this amounts to is a highly selective name-dropping and casuistry, in the interest of justifying transparently elitist biases.

Stripped of pedantic paraphernalia, here, for example, is Hart's "responsible" approach to the civil rights problem:

(1) You can't change human nature, and man is naturally rotten.

(2) Free enterprise capitalism was ordained on Mt. Sinai.

(3) Civil rights legislation is therefore evil, since the property rights of some white people might be violated, and the laws won't change human nature anyway.

(4) Laws already on the books, which helped create and sustain social inequality, should be left intact because they were passed by Conservatives. Conservatives are "profound," while Liberals are "shallow."

(5) There's no race problem anyway, just the problems of individual malcontents. Why not devote our attention to more important matters, such as limiting the United Nations' jurisdiction to such questions as the stabilization of weights and measures? The U.N. is filled with foreigners anyway.

Private eye, mother-to-be head 'unlikely' double bill

By JON CLARK
State News Reviewer

This week the Campus Theater presents Paul Newman as a seedy detective and Maureen O'Sullivan as a pregnant mother, in one of the most unlikely double bills to come along in quite a while.

"Never Too Late," a play which has had commercial success in uncountable versions on the amateur and professional stage, has been brought to the screen in Panavision and Technicolor. It stars Miss O'Sullivan, Paul Ford, Connie Stevens and Jim Hutton.

The story involves repercussions of the discovery that a middle-aged woman, who has a married daughter and a miserly husband, is pregnant.

As generations change, so do tastes, and, thus, the aging comedy of "Never Too Late" seems almost anachronistic to a college audience. It is a comedy of sidelong glances, double-takes, and exasperated skyward looks, where rouge on the cheeks connotes happiness, and suggestive lines are the highest form of humor. There are many tearful scenes with violins in the background, hectic scenes, chase scenes, etc. Thus, "Never Too Late" possesses many of the things which make a comedy a success (to an older audience, at any rate). It lacks only good acting and a funny script.

"Harper" is a private investigator, and not all that that implies. He is also a slob, two-timer and a fink. He drives a junky old sports car, chews gum incessantly, and is being divorced by his wife (she calls him "a lingering disease").

He is trying to locate a kidnapped millionaire whom no one, not even the members of his family, hopes to find alive. He gets kicked, punched and seduced several times in the process, but good finally wins out, in a strange, twisted sort of way.

In other words, it's an old Bogart flick (complete with Lauren Bacall) set in the new affluent society. It caustically cuts many vices of Americana, from conspicuous consumption to religious cults. Meanwhile, it is in the process of following up murder with smuggling, smuggling with torture, and so on. The message is: watch out for the triple-cross and never trust your friends.

Paul Newman obviously enjoyed making "Harper," relishing his good lines ("The bottom is loaded with nice people--only cream and bastards rise,"), and his sarcastic personality.

Both William Goldman's screenplay and Johnny Mandel's musical score are excellent, as is the acting of Newman, Julie Harris, Lauren Bacall and Janet Leigh, and the body of Pamela Tiffin.

'BAREFOOT IN ATHENS'

Socrates: boat-rocker for truth

Editor's Note: Maxwell Anderson's "Barefoot in Athens" presented Friday, Nov. 10 on Hallmark's Hall of Fame is here commented upon briefly for its dramatization and then focused upon as a representative situation.

By JANE ADAMS
State News Staff Writer

"Barefoot in Athens" did not step into the pitfall of many plays which attempt to present philosophical dramatizations. It was a living drama, moving with believable characterizations and not merely as a carrier of metaphysical dilemmas.

Geraldine Page's portrayal of Xantippe was believably witty. She was realized as a character through her ambivalent behavior. She lashed out sharply against her husband, Socrates, who spoke in lofty terms about the plight of the poor while she knew, "who is more poor than we, Socrates?" But she was not the constantly nagging wife stereotyped behind all long-suffering philosophers. She herself suffered long, because she loved the man. "You escape me now as always," she says to the man, who in his death for truth's sake, says that "anyone can have me now who wants me... who remembers."

Socrates via Peter Ustinov's memorable interpretation came to life as that incorrigible spiritual enigma in search of truth. He is that comic-tragic figure who believes in life's seriousness so deeply that he laughs at the high-minded seriousness of men who blindly cling to what they have been told is good. He laughs at himself, realizing that he appears as the flea-bitten scamp of a truth seeker, comically daring to walk into the bare face of truth. Part of the buffoonery, part of the dignity, Socrates came across as the living proof of life's paradoxical structure.

He is a blessing and he is a threat. He embodies the hope of mankind in his selfless quest for truth, inspired by an insatiable curiosity to know. But in his search for the sublime and absurd principles of truth, virtue, and beauty, the man of ideas' self-mission ironically seems to uncover the fear and evilness in others who only see him as an unnecessary unsettlement of things.

Inevitably, this curiosity to know leads this hope of mankind to ask the questions which cannot be answered. He questions the worth of belief without service and of service without belief. He becomes an unsettlement of the ship of state by his insistent knocking into the masses' appetites. He makes other people question too. And soon they are not content to mindlessly push their carts through the streets, scarcely making a mark in proof of their existence, just pushing that which they have been told to push. Hand-to-mouth existence turns into a question for the head. And soon there is an epidemic of "why-ness" infecting the safety of the society.

And the officials busily sailing in the traditional systems do not have time to play questions and answers. Nor do they want to be degraded as sailors of an old fashioned ship of fools.

Those who profess that love is blind see those who dissect and probe into the nature of a thing as destroyers. How can you injure what you say you love, they wonder. They are told that evidence is not injury, but support. To really love something is to understand, says the searcher who believes that with each new insight, he is a little closer to the meaning of existence.

The hope is now a threat. Oscar Wilde once said that "most people are other people," Bertrand Russell said, "most people would die rather than think--and infact do." The fact remains that when a civilization comes to recognize and label its achievements, it is ironically asserting a reversing principle--room for little or no more. With achievement also grows a simultaneous desire to maintain, to protect, to keep what has been achieved. And, when the time comes when the man comes into focus who in his attempt to offer what he can, challenges the status quo, he is seen by the guardians of the existing order in the Melvilian terms describing Captain Ahab... "as the ungodly, godlike man." He poses such an awful threat because he has the quality of inspiring the awe of his followers. And, in the creation of the two camps, a society becomes divided.

A man dedicated to the phantom truth is not easily fought against. Like faith, he is quite impossible to pin down. His manner of operation is not war-like, so he outdates force. His weapons are ideas and even when a physical removal is sentenced to such a man, he is still not defeated since he was not fought against on his own terms. It is even less than a stalemate since he at least believes that he has won. And in the defeat, he stands to conquer. A man who kills another on the grounds of a physical ending can never be assured of his victory since the weapons were unequal.

In any age, the emergence of a man with a mind distinctly his own because he moves in the timeless world of truth seekers seems untimely. It is easy to look back. It is easy enough to have the proper perspective on history from the present. Great men--the heretics, saints, sinners, martyrs and fools, switch labels from time to time. A fool is transformed into a great thinker when separated by time. Yesterday's sinner is today's truth seeker.

The time is never right, never the right time, for the man who unsettles the already settled order. It is never the right time--until it is past.

LBJ meets Shakespeare

By BOB ZESCHIN
State News Staff Writer

Act one, scene one. The lights dim. Three witches skulk in. The first in unkempt and bedraggled, a student demonstrator. The second is an impeccably groomed Black Power advocate, and the third is wearing a worker's cap and overalls and carries a lunch pail and an old movie projector. Shhh--they begin to speak.

"When shall we meet again?" "In riot, strike, or stopping train?"

"When the hurly burly's done, when the race is lost or won."

"Out on the convention floor or in some hotel corridor."

"Where cheering throngs can be heard, there to meet with...MacBird?"

MacWho?

This is the opening scene of "MacBird," a satirical adaptation of the Shakespearean tragedy with LBJ and Lady Bird as the principals, and assorted other political characters taking part (Ken O'Dune, the Wayne of Morse, Stevenson, the Egg of Head, etc.).

"MacBird" was written by Barbara Garson, a former Berkeley coed now studying drama at Yale on a grant given on the strength of "MacBird." She origiinally intended the play to be performed for the International Day of Protest in October, 1965, and has since had three editions published.

The play itself is a farce. It would probably have to be seen in performance to be really appreciated, but Mrs. Garson's adaptation of verse (not only from "Macbeth" but from other Shakespearean plays as well) into tropical humor make it excellent and highly enjoyable reading.

But all doth not go well once MacBird is on the throne. Lady MacBird goes insane and goes on a binge of planting flowers and bushes to "sweeten this accursed land". And MacBird's latest action (annexation of Australia) is highly unpopular with the people.

MacBird returns to the "three weird critters" who prophesied his fate. Over a mixture of "Taylor's tongue and Goldberg's slime, MacNamara's bloody crime, sizzling skin of napalmed child, roasted eyeballs sweet and mild," an image of General Ky intones that no man with beating heart of human blood will ever harm MacBird.

Thus, on the convention floor, MacBird is done in by Robert, younger brother of Ken O'Dune, whose heart was cut away and blood was drained by his father to "free his sons from paralyzing scruples" as preparation for roles of world authority.

MacBird has had a far from placid literary history. No major U.S. publisher would touch the play (something about seditious libel), although two of London's top publishing houses are bidding for the British rights. So Mrs. Garson and her husband set up Grassy Knoll Press, with offices in New York and Berkeley, to handle printing and distribution.

The first edition sold 5,000 copies in six weeks at Berkeley. A second run of 5,000 also sold out, and a third printing of 20,000 is already half spoken for.

"MacBird" is scheduled for off-Broadway production in December. A special company, A.Y. Productions, was formed expressly to produce "MacBird." The money has been raised, casting and auditions are being held, and a definite date of premiere will be given as soon as a theater is found.

ATL reader offers 'guide' for student essay writers

Students in my ATL classes have complained to me that the reason they do not write well is that they are not given a firm set of rules or guidelines to follow in writing their themes. The old high school adages, "the paragraph always has a topic sentence," "generalizations should always be supported by examples," "a noun is the name of a person, place, or thing," just don't seem to work. Comments on themes from college teachers don't offer much more assistance; they often seem to rise out of some kind of twilight zone: "you have confused illusion with reality," "you have not achieved a dissociation of sensibility," "your Weltanschauung is distorted." What is needed, I think, is a compact, quick handy reference guide to effective writing.

May I propose then the following "Ten Commandments of Good Expository Writing," to which one may turn when he needs a sound set of values:

I. Always begin your essay with a definition from Webster. Since he is the universally acknowledged authority on words, you can't go wrong quoting him. Don't use Thordike or other inferior lexicographer.

II. In your introduction, take a while before you come to the point; this will build the suspense.

For example, if the topic is characterization in "The Crucible," discuss in your opening paragraph such things as the original cast of the play, and Arthur Miller's marriage to Marilyn Monroe.

III. Apologize a lot. This will prove that you are humble (you will remember that Benjamin Franklin listed humility among the top 13 virtues). Phrases like "Although this is a difficult topic for me to write on..." and "I hope I have shown that..." will convince the instructor that you are aware of your limitations.

IV. Offer plenty of personal opinions. Too often in this competitive, mechanized world we shy away from our real feelings; let your hair down. If you think the Puritans were a bunch of nuts, say so.

V. Be colloquial; this will show your reader that you are a regular fella. This kind of language will also help you drive your points home: "Roger Williams sure had a lot of guts," "Franklin always kept his cool," "Jonathan Edwards came out of a Calvinist bag."

VI. Include as many sentence fragments as possible. This will demonstrate that you are striving for simplicity of style.

VII. Provide many clichés which have been drilled into your mind in your previous home environment. Truisms like "freedom means responsibility," "you get out of life exactly what you put into it," and "some of my best friends are..." will assure the instructor that your upbringing has been respectable.

VIII. Be confident in assigning responsibility to its proper source. Statements like "Franklin started the Enlightenment," "Thomas Paine instituted deism," and "Thoreau thought up transcendentalism," will prove that you are truly conscious of cause and effect.

IX. See to it that your conclusions are dramatic, that is, "full of sound and fury," and if possible, tangential. Impress upon your reader that what you have discussed in your theme is the key to truth, love, God, beauty, and The American Way.

X. Be sure that your completed theme is physically attractive. It should be typewritten (script type or italics may count for bonuses), preferably on onion skin paper, and should include several extra blank pages before and after the actual theme, one of which might boast an appropriate quotation from an obscure author. A transparent plastic folder is also suggested.

BATTLE OF SEXES

Custodians eye students

BY DONNA CUMMINGS
State News Staff Writer

The habits of the student body came under the scrutiny of a very partial group recently. . . the MSU custodial staff.

Dormitory custodians and housekeepers disagree on which sex is a neater housekeeper, but agree that "in general, most students are pretty clean."

Mrs. Annie Davis, an Abbot Hall housekeeper for the past 13 years, argues that "women are neater than men," while Edward Hannan, a Wonders Hall custodian and better known to Wonders residents as "Mr. Ed," says he "would put the boys' housekeeping up against that of the girls, any day of the week."

"Oh, yes, about nine years ago, a group of boys pushed a sports car into the dining room to disprove the belief that it 'couldn't be done,'" exclaimed Mrs. Davis when asked to recall an unusual student stunt.

Mrs. Florence King, a Landon Hall housekeeper for the past 19 years, is "surprised at the number of college students who don't know how to wash or iron." She said she has helped "troubled students" several times.

From his observations, Emilio Castillo, a Landon Hall custodian for the past two years, feels "most MSU students are serious about their education." "Some students, however," he said, "are not."

"Mr. Ed" agrees with Castillo and realizes that students must release their "tensions and youthfulness through crazy stunts and exercises."

Miss Elfriede Eastman, an Akers Hall housekeeper for the past two years, finds "most students appreciate the work of the custodians and housekeepers. Several students compliment me on the cleanliness of the building," she said.

Most students are "very congenial," according to Mrs. King. "If they don't exchange greetings with the custodians and housekeepers, they at least smile," she said. "Of course we reply or smile back."

More than 250 custodians and housekeepers keep the public areas of the university's 26 dormitories "spic and span" for over 19,000 student residents. "Despite this seemingly large number of employees, the residence halls' custodian housekeeper staff is understaffed and needs nearly 100 more people to fill the full-time vacancies," noted Lyle Thorburn, manager of residence halls.

"Male students perform some custodial chores in areas where we are extremely short-handed or during periods of extra demand as in February when the University entertains Alumni Distinguished Scholarship students," he said.

Attired in gray uniforms furnished by the University, most dormitory custodians and housekeepers work five eight hour days. Some housekeepers who are mothers work fall through spring terms and spend the summer months at home with their families, said Thorburn. But most of them work every month of the year.

Custodian duties include those of minor repairs, equipment maintenance and heavy cleaning chores, according to the manager.

Peace Corps week starts with film of Kenya project

Peace Corps week activities will begin today with the presentation of programs by returned volunteers. Peace Corps representatives will also be administering the Modern Language Aptitude tests and visiting classes throughout the week.

The first of three general programs, presenting a 15-minute film of a land resettlement project in Kenya, West Africa, and discussion led by a volunteer who returned from there will be at 4-5 p.m. today in 32 Union. Others will be held 4-5 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday in 31 Union.

Similar presentations will also be given in the residence hall "All Brody Group residents are invited to attend the program at 7:30 Tuesday in Brody Auditorium. A program will be given for campus men at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Windsor House Lounge of Wilson Hall. Complex residents are also invited to the Wonders Kiva at 8 p.m. Thursday. ## MHA HAS DOUBTS

Leary forum questioned

Men's Hall Assn. (MHA) passed a motion Thursday night requesting ASMSU to provide a speaker on the program with Timothy Leary to present opposing views to those of Leary on LSD.

Leary, a known user and advocate of LSD, is scheduled to appear on campus Thursday afternoon to discuss the drug. He stipulated in his agreement with MSU that he would not participate in a debate on the subject but would only present a lecture based on his knowledge of and experiments with LSD.

Some MHA members agreed that it was beneficial to the student body to present lectures on subjects of a controversial nature, but expressed concern about the possible adverse effect that Leary's statements might have on the student body. They felt that since Leary has declined debate, two views on the subject, one affirmative and one negative, should be presented. The speeches would be given consecutively, with students given the prerogative of attending either or both of them.

MHA also voted to establish a new movie committee to organize the movie program for residence halls on campus. This group will have the responsibility of meeting within a week and organizing the best possible movie program in the least possible time.

A motion was made to be considered later by MHA that they support the constitutional amendment revisions for the ASMSU constitution as prescribed by Jim Graham, president of ASMSU, with one exception. The exception pertains to a section of revision that proposes an increase in members-at-large in the ASMSU General Assembly.

MHA members who opposed the proposal felt that if membership of the General Assembly is to be increased, individuals representing some group should be added rather than members-at-large who represent no constituency.

In other action, MHA approved the appointment of Ralph Cooper, president of E. Holmes Hall, as executive assistant to the president of MHA, Roger Williams. Cooper succeeds Dave Davis who resigned when John Mongeon, former president of MHA, resigned. Davis felt his personal obligations were to Mongeon who appointed him.

'Mr. Ed'

Ed Hannan has been a custodian in Wonders Hall since the dorm opened. "Mr. Ed" as Wonders students know him, believes men are neater than women and are better housekeepers.

Teenage killer of seven just wanted the publicity

MESA, Ariz. (AP) -- He was "a kid that nobody knew." Until Saturday.

But people in this close-knit Mormon community know him now: Robert Benjamin Smith, "a loner," "an introvert," "a strange and different boy" who walked into a small beauty college and methodically shot seven women and children, killing five.

The massacre set a numbed city to searching its memory for all the information it could scrape together about this 18-year-old to whom few paid much mind until Saturday.

What tips, what warnings, people asked, had they failed to notice about this quiet youth who burst out laughing as police took him away, who smiled brightly for the cameras and then, in a swift change of mood, thumbed his nose at them.

It was a tough question. Virtually all of Smith's acquaintances, while giving strikingly similar impressions of the youth, admit they never got to know him very well.

"It's a funny thing," said Carl Heath, Mesa High School basketball coach and Smith's counselor. "If Robert Smith had been a bad boy or a problem youngster I could have told you everything about him. But he wasn't. He was no mixer, but there was never any evidence of hostility on his part toward others."

"He was the type of person who stayed in his own shell," said a classmate. "He was kind of a strange boy. Sometimes he seemed kind of nervous in a way. He never talked much—he mostly listened and observed. I don't think he allowed anybody to get really close to him."

Smith was born in Houston, Mo. His father, Robert L. Smith, had retired as an Air Force major. The boy went through the fifth grade in Houston.

The elder Smith re-enlisted when the boy was about 10 and the family moved several times after that. Their other child, Lisa, was born five years ago, and two years ago, once again retired from the military, Smith brought his family to Mesa.

They apparently did not become well known in the Mormon city, where most of the 50,000 residents are members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and lead busy lives geared to the activities of the local Mormon temple.

Even neighbors, though they liked the Smiths, didn't know much about them. Two close neighbors said they hadn't even known the Smiths had a son. Mrs. Louis Burnham said Robert invariably got up and walked out of the room whenever she and her husband visited the Smiths.

"The boy wasn't the least bit sociable," she said. "He would never talk to us and always seemed strange and different."

"No one seems to recall his running about with anyone," said one school acquaintance.

Though a good-looking youth, he wasn't known to date.

He was elected to the Senior Council, a classmate said, "because we knew he was very smart and we thought someone like that should be on it. But he was a loner even though he was a Senior Council representative."

Said another: "He's not the kind to participate."

Saturday, Smith himself told police he had been planning a mass murder ever since his parents gave him a target pistol three months ago. He said he got the idea from recent mass killings in Chicago and Austin, Tex. And why? "I wanted to get known — get myself a name," police quoted him as saying.

A survivor of the mass shooting, Bonita Sue Harris, also quoted Smith. As she lay wounded and playing dead, she later told police, she heard him say nobody cared for him.

VIENNA STRAUSS ORCHESTRA

It was some horse race

By FRED HIMMELEIN
Eduard Strauss II, the Vienna Strauss Orchestra, and the music of Johann Strauss left the starting gate at the MSU Fair Grounds at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday. The results of the race were upsetting; Eduard Strauss won, the Strauss Orchestra barely placed, and the music of Johann Strauss didn't even finish.

From out of the Strauss stables and onto the stage of the MSU livestock arena the orchestra and its leader brought a group of elderly warhorses which by the time of the daily double had cast their vapid ghosts across the auditorium floor. Everyone in the hall knew that Johann Strauss had written much livelier and more imaginative music than that which was heard; the question was what had happened to it.

This question remained unanswered through the first portion of the evening's card, which began with an extraordinarily hammy prelude and ended with a flaccid reading of the usually delightful "Emperor Waltz." In between were one interesting polka, "Feuerfest", which is strikingly similar to the "Anvil Chorus", and an appearance apiece by the two guest riders.

The first up was Walter Krautler, a self-styled tenor who produced one emaciated high C and spent the rest of the evening apologizing for it. The second was soprano Dagmar Koller, who had an enchanting stage appearance and spent the rest of the evening capitalizing on it.

The second half of the card opened with an interesting piece of nonsense, Strauss's "Egyptian March," climaxed by an un-Strauss-like coda, "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

This rather pointed up the tragedy of the performance; Strauss did write clever and witty scores which Michigan audiences never hear. The Vienna Strauss Orchestra didn't see fit to provide them. Perhaps that's what makes a horse race.

But the race wasn't over; Herr Strauss II dug into his bag of oats for one more hand-out of importance, the "Radetzky March," climaxed by an un-Strauss-like coda, "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

This rather pointed up the tragedy of the performance; Strauss did write clever and witty scores which Michigan audiences never hear. The Vienna Strauss Orchestra didn't see fit to provide them. Perhaps that's what makes a horse race.

Series depends on Leary

ASMSU's vice-president of academic affairs predicted that the success of the Great Issues series will depend on student reactions to Timothy Leary's Thursday presentation on LSD. "If no problems arise," said Gary Posner, "it is hoped that other speakers who originally turned us down will reconsider and come to our campus to speak.

"Definite interest in the program has been expressed by many prominent individuals," said Posner, "but many couldn't accept due to previous engagements, illness and time problems."

Hugh Hefner, Barry Goldwater, Robert Kennedy and Everett Dirksen were unable to accept. The series has been created to inform students on contemporary issues and people involved in those issues.

"ASMSU neither condones nor condemns the issues brought to campus," said Posner, "but is merely attempting to present the issues to the student and allow him to make his own evaluation as to what the speaker says."

Due to the limited seating capacity in the Auditorium, students will be admitted on the first-come, first-serve basis.

READERS THEATER:

'Night of the Hunter'

A Readers Theater presentation, "The Night of the Hunter" will replace the scheduled performances of the MSU Jazz Band and the Performing Arts Company regular series this week.

The performances will be in Wonders Kiva, Tuesday; Brody Arena, Wednesday; McDonell Kiva, Thursday; and the Arena Theater, Friday. All performances begin at 7:15 p.m. Tickets cost 50¢ or one Jazz Band coupon and can be purchased at the door.

The Readers Theater format is a unique combination of narrative and drama in which several speakers relate a story in a series of dialogues separated by narration.

Davis Grubb's novel, "The Night of the Hunter," is the story of a man with a prison record who calls himself a preacher and tries to become a part of a family.

The father of the family has been put to death for a bank hold-up and murder. The preacher is looking for hidden money.

The novel shows the different feelings each member of the family has toward the preacher and their fear as his true identity is revealed.

The readers will be Cliff Gabriel and Performing Arts Company members, Bill Stock, Raleigh Miller, Neana Davidoff and Judith Gordon. The novel was adapted for Readers Theater by director Peter Landry.

'Saint Joan' shown by Performing Arts

George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," the second production of the MSU Performing Arts Company, will be presented Nov. 29 - Dec. 4 in Fairchild Theater.

Shaw presents the Maid of Orleans as a peasant girl with a great vision and the determination to do what she knows is right.

Her naive ideas of how a woman can bring on political change and her ignorance of proper political methods lead eventually to her trial and execution. She is too innocent to understand why the men whom she humiliates want to burn her at the stake.

Karen Grossman, Midland junior, plays the title role. Other major roles are played by: John Baily, Northville senior; Bernard Taro, Niagara Falls, N.Y., senior; John Gooch, Green-castle, Ind., graduate student; R. Mack Miller, Grand Forks, N.D., graduate student; Dean Kyburz, Lansing graduate student; Louis Bauer Jr., Bay City sophomore; Marshall Rosenblum, Far Rockaway, N.Y., senior; and Anthony Heald, Massapequa Peak, N.Y., junior.

Tickets cost one season coupon or may be ordered by mail after Monday, from Performing Arts Company. The Fairchild Theater box office will open Nov. 21.

Sort mail during Christmas

Students looking for work during the Christmas break might find it by helping their uncle--Sam--sort and deliver mail.

Post offices across the nation will be hiring 150,000 seasonal assistants to beef up the delivery system for the annual deluge of Christmas mail. Applications for the jobs will be accepted until Dec. 10.

Students interested in a job with the post office should contact the postmaster of the city where the work is desired, giving name, address and dates available for work.

If that post office is hiring more people for the holiday rush, they will be notified almost immediately. A time and place in or near the area of work will be given where he will take a two-to-three hour civil service examination.

The test, known as a seasonal assistant exam, is an objective test of general information. There is no charge for taking the test.

The jobs pay $2.44 per hour in second class post offices and $1.26 in third class. Pay scales do not vary with different duties within any given post office.

DEFENSE STUDY PUBLICIZED

U-M only for 'rich and white'

The University of Michigan was described as a school "basically for rich, white students" in a confidential Defense Department report revealed Friday.

The report contains 25 recommendations for "broadening equal educational opportunities for Negroes, both as students and as faculty members."

The report was prepared by the Detroit branch of the Defense Department's Contracts Compliance Office, undertaken to investigate the University's compliance with Title IV of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. A Pentagon spokesman described the report as "routine."

The general tone of the report was that the U-M does not, as such, discriminate against Negroes, but that it doesn't do as much as it could or should to effect a better "racial balance." Of the school's 29,000 students, only about 450 are Negroes and fewer than 25 Negroes are on the 2,200-member faculty.

The report recommends that the U-M conduct "special recruitment efforts" for undergraduate and graduate Negro students. It should inform "minority communities" about the opportunities at the school and the availability of financial assistance. It should include "one or more Negroes as voting advisory members or both" of all policy making groups, and recruit "experienced Negro lawyers for the school faculty" as well as increase the number of Negroes on the faculties of the College of Engineering and the School of Business Administration.

The report also asserted that Negroes living on campus are concentrated only in certain dormitories. It said that interviews with students revealed that "Negro females are assigned primarily to Alice Lloyd Hall," and further stated that "Negro males are assigned mostly to the South Quad." U-M administrators expressed surprise at the revelation of the report by the Michigan Daily, the university's student newspaper.

Commenting on the report executive Marvin L. Niehuss, vice-president said: "The document in The Michigan Daily is a set of confidential suggestions made to U-M at its request. It is not a report to the Defense Department and its release was not authorized by the department nor by the U-M."

Director of Admissions Clyde Vroman claimed the report "gave the university no credit for what it has done about racial relations." He cited a 1963 special recruitment program among Negroes and, as a result, 70 Negroes were enrolled under a special program in 1964.

The university also has an exchange program for students with Tuskegee (Ala.) Institute, a predominantly Negro college.

Robert Marion, the first Negro to serve as a U-M admissions officer and counselor, now heads the special Negro student recruitment program, Marion said he was "not aware of discrimination in student housing on campus."

The law, engineering and business administration programs were apparently singled out for emphasis on Negro faculty recruitment in the report because they have no Negro teachers. A U-M spokesman noted that "concentrated recruitment efforts" had resulted in the enrollment of eight Negroes as freshmen in the law school.

Another spokesman said U-M medical school has "long sought to attract qualified Negroes" as students and noted that the 1965 class president was a Negro, Dr. Arthur Fleming.

TO OUTNUMBER WORKERS

Student growth estimated

In 20 years, America's student population may be larger than the working force, Wilbur J. Cohen, told Michigan educators in Lansing Thursday.

Cohen, undersecretary of the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare spoke before several hundred participants in a fourth annual Conference on Higher Education.

The conference was sponsored by the Michigan Assn. of Colleges and Universities which includes 57 Michigan community and junior colleges, four-year colleges and universities.

Cohen predicted that the current 12-year public education program will be extended to 15 and that increased educational opportunities will cause a decline in the number of welfare cases.

He traced the development of federal aid to education programs saying he believed Congress had to examine race, religion and responsibility before it could deal effectively with federal aid. He said that progress in the federal aid area began in 1963, has gained speed since and will continue.

"In spite of the results of Tuesday's election."

At the college level, Cohen called for more federal funds to help smaller colleges and assist in the development of better libraries.

A former University of Michigan professor, Cohen believes in equal opportunity to receive a good education. "The universities today must face the problems of the city as they once met the problems of the farm," Cohen said.

Soviet writer Valery Tarsis scheduled to speak tonight

A Russian writer who was placed in a "mental institution" for his anti-government publication will speak at 8:15 tonight in the Auditorium as part of the Lecture-Concert series.

Valery Tarsis, whose novel "Bluebottle" was smuggled to England for publication, was a Communist Party member in his early career as an author, critic and war correspondent. He became increasingly disillusioned with Communism in the 1950's.

By the time he wrote his book, he had completely broken with the Party. It was published in England in 1962.

Tarsis was committed to a Soviet "mental hospital" after publication of the book.

Of the 6,000 inmates in the "hospital," only one was insane and the rest were alleged political dissenters.

Following seven months of embarrassment by protesting authors from all over the world, the USSR gave up and released him.

He then wrote another book, "Ward 7" telling of Soviet mental institutions.

... there is no career that can match business in diversity of intellectual interest ... A vigorous, free society calls for the highest type of business leadership ...

Leader says MSU spurs innovation

MSU exemplifies the growing areas of innovation in large universities, a federal education official said here Thursday.

Paul L. Miller, former MSU provost and now assistant secretary for education in the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare, said that higher education will become more daring and "exhibit more zest" due to the growing interest in innovation.

Miller, in a speech to a conference on large colleges and universities, said that he hoped innovation would not become a fad, however. New ideas must be in constant ferment within the faculty if they are to have any meaning.

He urged administrators to find more time for their respective schools, and private foundations and government agencies to assist universities without great demands on time, talent and energy of the schools.

Miller outlined four areas of innovation that "loom upon the horizon of higher education." Interinstitutional coordination and cooperation must be emphasized.

"It is time that we all become more familiar with the entire system of higher education in the country," he said.

Curriculum change and innovation must be central to university planning with the "faculty as a whole a vigorous participant."

"We need an atmosphere which encourages students and teachers to rediscover each other," Miller said.

Student records

"We never did tell the employer about the shaving cream fight in the sophomore year."

If the student has been out of college for several years, the University is even more reluctant to give an inquirer, especially an employer, information on organizations and discipline.

The University is not as inclined as it used to be to give information to security agencies and employers from those agencies, Nonnamaker said.

"But we have given information to civil service, Internal Revenue and Naval Intelligence employers before," Baccus said.

"We can't afford to cover everything," Baccus said. "If someone wants information that is already a matter of public record, like a court case, we tell him to check with the proper authorities."

Some universities will not supply any information to inquirers without the student's written release, Nonnamaker said. That system forces the student to "make his own peace" with employers and investigators.

The academic freedom report has not yet challenged the validity of the ambiguous "need to know" guideline.

In its revised form, the report requires an inquirer to show the "right" as well as the "need to know."

As of now, the employers usually don't need to know, Nonnamaker said.

But only when the new guidelines came out can the boundaries of "the right and the need to know" become better defined in application and discussion.
