Sheppard acquitted, wants to practice

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) - Samuel H. Sheppard's first full day of complete freedom in 12 years was spent in seclusion with his wife, Ariane, at the suburban Bay Village home where they moved just last month.

The 42-year-old former osteopath, acquitted Wednesday night in the July 4, 1954, bludgeoning slaying of his first wife, Marilyn, wasn't talking with newsmen. But his attractive, German-born wife told newsmen by telephone that she and her husband are "greatly elated" over the acquittal and that they are having difficulty adjusting to Sheppard's freedom. Ariane said "nothing" was planned for the day.

But in the future are plans for publication of a book, a trip to Germany, possible redress for Sheppard's loss of freedom, and an attempt to return to his osteopathic practice.

Sheppard told newsmen Wednesday night that he plans to resume practice, but probably not in the Cleveland area.

The State Medical Board said in Columbus that no request has been made to restore the license that was revoked in 1957. Any request for reinstatement would have to be considered by them, a spokesman said.

Sheppard, imprisoned nine years (following a 1954 conviction of second-degree murder) until the U.S. Supreme Court ordered a retrial, is trying to finish a book which gets to the publisher in 10 days.

The trip to Germany will be a visit to Ariane's parents and her 13-year-old daughter by a previous marriage. Ariane returned to Germany Oct. 1 to aid her ailing father and came back to Cleveland before testimony started in the retrial.

There has been talk of civil suits Sheppard might file. Sheppard's chief defense counsel, F. Lee Bailey of Boston, said, "Any further legal action will be in the confines of a court. Someone owes Sam something."

U-M, draft board dispute unsettled

The University of Michigan's dispute over releasing class ranks to the Selective Service System remains, following a student referendum favoring administration silence.

U-M administrators said, "Whenever nearly 10,000 University of Michigan students express their views as they did in the Student Government Council (SGC) referendum on the compilation of class ranking, serious consideration must be given."

"Whether class ranking is a meaningful index to be used in student deferment decisions by local boards is a matter of controversy. Indeed, the whole issue of grading is under discussion at this university and elsewhere in the academic world. Such discussion is desirable and will involve student, faculty and administration groups," the administration announcement continued.

Selective Service regulations and policies are also undergoing investigation by a presidential commission, noted the U-M administration, and changes by this group could make class rank no longer relevant. In this event, the university would drop the compilation of class standing.

By a 6,389 to 3,158 vote, U-M students Wednesday passed the SGC referendum to end the university's supplying ratings to local boards.

Male students favored not supplying ratings by a 3,347 to 2,754 tally, while female students totaled 3,042 to 764.

The administration's statement Thursday afternoon said requests from 6,293 students who have asked their class ranks be released to local draft boards are on file. The university cannot disregard these requests, the statement said, as an unknown number of these male students rely totally on class rank as a criterion for deferment.

Howard R. Neville, provost, Thursday reaffirmed a decision made by the ATL Dept. advisory committee and Edward A. Carlin, dean of the University College.

"I am forwarding your recommendations along with my own, namely, that no reappointments for further service at Michigan State University be made for the instructors in question (W. Gary Groat, Kenneth Lawless and Robert S. Fogarty)," Neville wrote Carlin in a letter issued at the request of Carlin and the ATL advisory committee.

GEORGIA CASE

Court bars legislature from electing governor

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) - A federal court decision Thursday barring election of Georgia's next governor by the legislature sent the issue of a winless contest toward the U.S. Supreme Court. State attorneys prepared an immediate appeal.

No remedy was offered by the three-judge court's ruling on a major question in the deadlocked, no-majority race between Republican Howard Callaway and Democrat Lester G. Maddox.

If the decision is upheld, a runoff between the two men or a special election eventually will result. But court battles could delay the final outcome for months, forcing Gov. Carl E. Sanders to hold over past the Jan. 10 inauguration date.

"I applaud this decision," Callaway said. Maddox, who last week was glad the legislature would decide the race, remarked that he had anticipated that the matter would be handed back to the state.

The court making formal its tentative ruling a week ago—limited its order to striking down the Georgia Constitution's 1824 provision for election by the legislature when no candidate has a majority.

Neither of the nominees managed to poll a majority in the Nov. 8 general election because of write-ins for Ellis G. Arnall. It was Arnall, a former governor, who was defeated by Maddox for the Democratic nomination in a political upset.

In its decision, the court granted a 10-day suspension to give the state time to carry an appeal up to the Supreme Court.

"I have full confidence in the procedures used and in the integrity of this department, its chairman, T.B. Strandness, and Dean Edward A. Carlin," Neville said.

There were several other developments Thursday in the controversy which has built up since it was first revealed that the ATL advisory committee, Strandness and Carlin had recommended that the three men not be re-hired.

--President John A. Hannah announced that the demonstrators who have been in the Bessey Hall lobby since 9 p.m. Tuesday were allowed to stay because they were not disturbing classes and because the building is open 24 hours a day, Monday through Friday. They will be asked to leave at midnight Friday.

--President Hannah said he felt the issues had been "turned around since the beginning" of the controversy. A faculty member's position should not be discussed negatively, Hannah suggested, but positively (i.e. who to retain, rather than who to let go).

--Students conducting the vigil elected a 10-man steering committee and announced that they would call off the vigil if the ATL advisory committee would meet with the executive board of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP).

--Gary Snyder, a West Coast poet who has travelled widely in the Far East, visited the vigil at 1 a.m. Tuesday to chant Indian and Tibetan mantras and read from his own works.

Neville, who had previously declined to discuss the three cases on the grounds that they were routine personnel decisions, said that after investigation he was fully satisfied that tenure regulations and the by-laws of the department, college and University had been followed.

"Far from a mere following of the letter of the law," Carlin said, "the department has demonstrated a laudable democracy in arriving at its decisions with the counsel of an elected, broadly representative advisory committee."

NOTRE DAME GAME

National excitement soars

By ED BRILL
State News Sports Writer

From Honolulu, Hawaii to a jail deep in the heart of Texas, from the sunny beaches of Miami, Fla. to the cold northland of Bozeman, Mont., the eyes and ears of the entire nation will be focused on Spartan Stadium Saturday.

Notre Dame and Michigan State, the country's two titanic football powers, clash in a contest that has already generated more excitement than any other sports event in recent memory.

Over 700 reporters from New York to Los Angeles and all points in between have been pouring into the campus since last Monday.

ABC, setting up their network color TV coverage since midweek, finally yielded to huge public demand and switched the game broadcast from regional to national, throwing in Hawaii in the bargain.

And close to 80,000 fans who have those precious tickets are expected to start cramming into Spartan Stadium well before the scheduled 1:30 p.m. starting time, Saturday.

The game has been billed as the battle for the national championship by two of the most powerful teams in the country, both offensively and defensively.

Notre Dame, ranked number one by both wire services since October 15, has swept to eight straight, overwhelming victories this fall. Five of the last six Irish wins have been shutouts, and opponents have managed only four touchdowns all season.

Second-rated Michigan State has won nine straight this season to become the first team in a decade to repeat as Big Ten champs. In two seasons the Spartans have won nineteen straight regular season games, and dropped from the top spot in the polls only after a narrow 11-8 win over Ohio State.

Both teams appear to be in top shape for the showdown. Star Spartan fullback Bob Apisa will not start, but is expected to play alternately with his sub, Reggie Cavender.

Notre Dame's split end Jim Seymour is recovered from an ankle injury that kept him out of two games, and speedy Irish halfback Nick Eddy is apparently ready despite leg and shoulder bruises.

The flashy Notre Dame passing combination of Terry Hanratty to Seymour appears to be the big threat to the Spartan defense which has been leaky against aerial attack.

A-B enrollment

at IM Bldg. today

Students whose last names begin with letters A-B are eligible to enroll for winter term classes today at the Men's Intramural Building.

In addition, any students who were unable to enroll on their regularly scheduled day earlier in the week may do so today.

Students who participate in early enrollment this week will be eligible to complete registration during the week of final exams, Dec. 12-16 and will not have to report for the regular registration period, Jan. 3-4.

Those who are enrolling today should report to the IM Building with their completed student schedule card, student ID, and the winter term schedule book during a free period between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Real estate men to resist open housing legislation

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) - The nation's real estate men listened yesterday to a Cabinet member's plea for open housing, then pledged themselves to continue an aggressive fight against it.

Robert C. Weaver, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, told the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards that the debate over equal housing rights has raged for 200 years. The time has come, he said, for an end to it.

"There is no question any more," he said, "of whether there must be equal opportunity for all persons to acquire the housing they can afford.

"It is urgent. It is legally mandatory. It is morally right. And, furthermore, it is good for business."

But soon after Weaver spoke, his arguments were rejected by delegates representing 83,000 members of the real estate business.

In a resolution, they pledged "aggressive resistance to any action which would vest in government, at any level, control over the sale or rental of privately owned property."

No valid reason for ASMSU summer tax

Last summer ASMSU taxed all full-time students the regular rate--50 cents.

But, for the most part, the 50 cents each student paid went in vain. For all practical purposes ASMSU closed down last summer. The students who paid 50 cents received no services in return.

Some ASMSU officials claimed that these students were charged the full tax so that the tax could be lowered winter term. This, in itself, was unjust since some of the students here summer term would not be in school during the winter.

Primarily, the lowering of the tax was viewed as a political move--lower the tax winter term and the students will admire ASMSU.

Last week, ASMSU set the individual student tax at 50 cents for three terms--winter, spring and next fall.

The immediate question now is: did ASMSU ever intend to lower the winter term tax? It appears they did not. It appears the some $2,000 collected went merely to the general fund to sop up some of the already existent deficit.

But the question really needs no answer. Summer is past. The damage--what little 50 cents can do--has been done.

The question is now: will ASMSU charge the tax again next summer? The amount of tax will not strain the students' budgets. But, no one likes to pay for services they don't get.

Parking ticket policy should be liberalized

Driving on campus is potentially the most expensive university activity open to students.

Costs per student of $300 per term are not unknown.

Where the money comes in is in parking violation fines. The first ticket costs $2, the second $4, the third $6 and the fourth $8. All subsequent tickets involve a consideration of $25 each.

This graduated fee system is called a deterrent to the students incurring multiple parking violations by Capt. A. John Zutaut of the University police.

The apparent reasoning is that a four-time violator is thus twice as deterred from subsequent illegal parking as a two-time violator.

Unfair system

This is obviously not true. If it were, exorbitant fines which students often pay at registration the following term, would be rare.

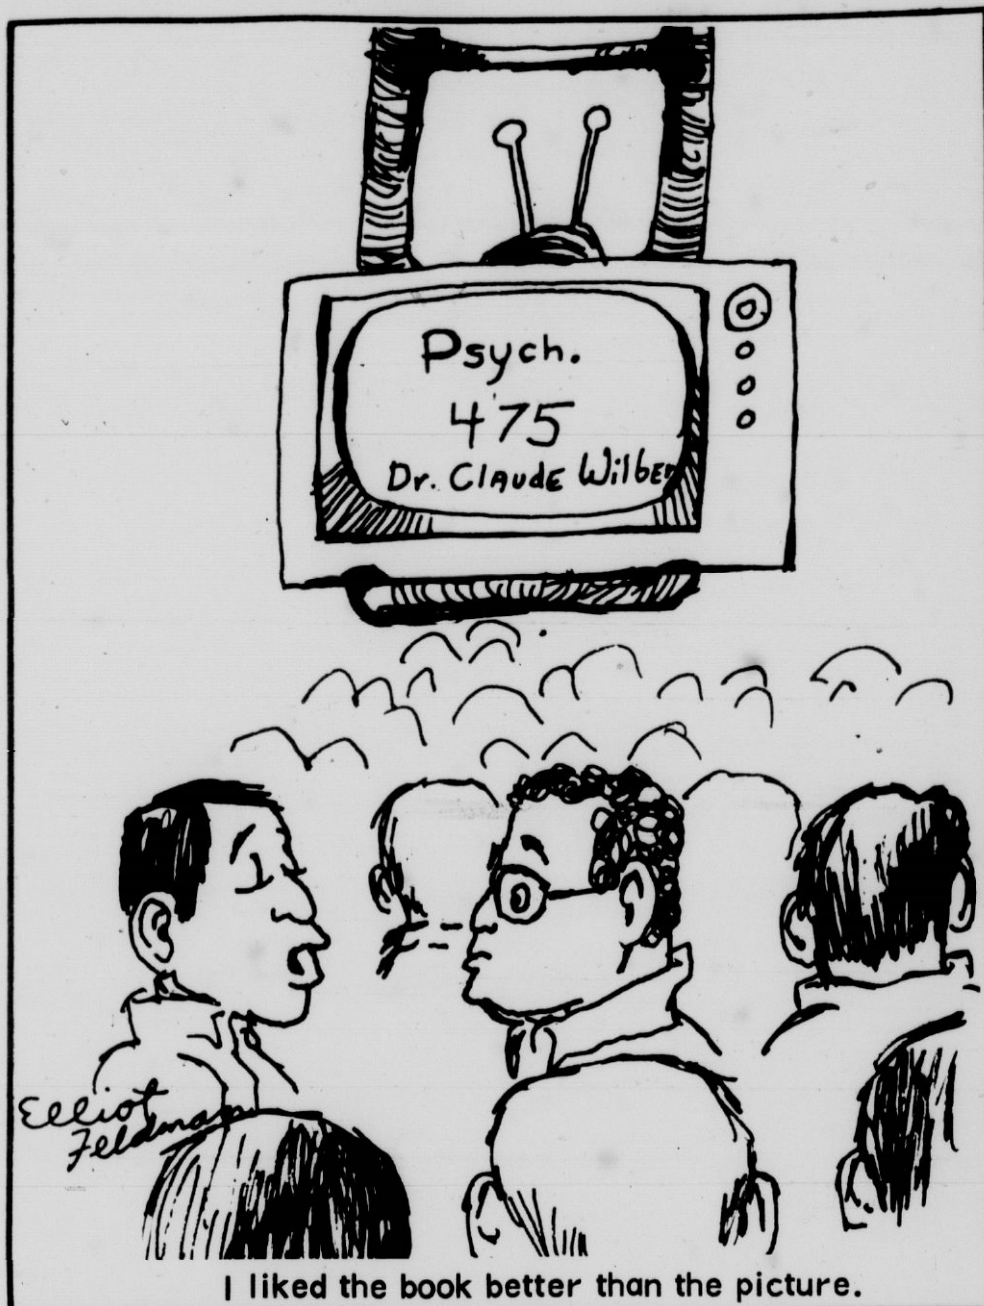

Unfair as this graduated fee system seems, it is the result of the liberalization of the 1957-58 system. Then the first violation cost $5, and the second resulted in a 30-day suspension from on-campus driving. The student's permit for the academic year was revoked after the third violation.

James Tanck, Waterford, Wisc., graduate student and member of the All University traffic committee, has said any change would have to come from the committee and be approved by the trustees, a sequence of events he thinks unlikely and does not favor. "This is a good system," he said of what is one half of a double standard.

Further liberalization is in order. Students should be subject to the same parking violation fees as are the faculty and staff. It costs them $2 per ticket under the provisions of the university traffic ordinance.

The graduated fee system is a flagrant example of the soak the student school of thought. We're against it, we hope the university is, too.

THE READERS' MINDS

ATL firings fuss inappropriate

To the Editor:

I find the activities of the "Ad Hoc" Committee most disheartening. During some twenty years at MSU I have not witnessed a more egregious case of misdirected student energy and idealism(?)

Were this an indication of student interest in good teaching, I should welcome it, but the individuals directing the present agitation have chosen a most inappropriate target for attack. What they are engineering is no longer a mere protest, but a form of pressure and persecution against a liberal-minded department and its liberal chairman.

It is indeed ironic that, in the name of intellectual freedom, this student group is acting in a manner contrary to reason. The faculty members who have lent support to these actions have displayed astonishingly poor judgment. As to the three "martyrs": their recent provocative and unethical conduct demonstrates a serious lack of professional responsibility. It corroborates, in fact, the judgment of their department in not re-appointing them.

Team spirit

To the Editor

We feel that we have as much team spirit as any other students here at MSU. Consequently, we fully realize the importance of displaying this enthusiasm at our games, by the magnificent show of catapulting rolls of toilet paper throughout the stadium. However, must we be made to sacrifice compliance with our physical frailties as human beings as a consequence of this general zealotry for our Spartan team?

We are referring, namely, to the rationing of that necessary commodity--toilet paper. Given no unusual quantitative demands such as nosebleeds, diarrhea, post nasal drip, etc., we have found the number of rolls of toilet paper allotted to one suite per week to be direly in need of elevation. We are informed by our R.A. that she is allotted a mere eight rolls of paper per week for a total of fifty-five students in our house. In some houses the number of students is even greater.

With regard to our nation's abundant resources, we find it quite unbelievable that we should be so immoderately provided for in such an important area. Reform on this issue must be taken immediately, for nature is omnipresent.

POINT OF VIEW

Feelings strong against Groat, Zeitgeist

EDITOR'S NOTE: This point of view column was written by Carol Barney, a junior from Rochester. Miss Barney interviewed 15 faculty members and students in gathering her information.

He's been called a "rebel without a pause," and "really anti-establishment." Some of his colleagues in the Department of American Thought and Language have labeled him a "malcontent," a "boat-rocker," an "unfriendly cuss" and "undignified."

His students, past and present, say he is a man "who cares--really cares," "truly dedicated," and an "inspiration in the classroom." Some say that he is "one of a half dozen instructors who saves ATL from being a farce."

He is William Gary Groat, educator, editor, and, according to some, "heretic." Groat has received the brunt of recent criticism as the founding father of a "Spirit of the Times" that has too long haunted the administrative closets.

Groat is the editorial adviser of Zeitgeist, an off-campus literary magazine whose summer issue has been labeled "pornographic," "out-and-out filth" and "the product of sick minds that can only be handled by a competent psychiatrist."

A leading protest group has been the Mothers Against Degeneracy (M.A.D.). They began a movement to remove Zeitgeist from the counters of the local merchants.

WJIM then picked up the sword and executed a verbal laceration of Zeitgeist through a television broadcast editorial conducted by Bill Dansby.

Dansby was recently asked why Zeitgeist was singled out for persecution. Dansby's reply was highly evasive and obscure.

When asked about his connection with the M.A.D., Dansby replied, "Do you mean MAD magazine?"

Sent Letters

The Rev. Jesse Pindell Pierce, D.D., minister of the Plymouth Congregational Church of Lansing, with the sanction of the Board of Deacons and Deaconesses of the church, sent letters in August to the sponsors of Zeitgeist discouraging their support of the magazine.

Dr. Pierce was also questioned about the specific attack on Zeitgeist, but offered no answer. Other "questionable" literature was mentioned to Pierce.

Pierce replied, "We'll get them all; just give us time, and we'll get them all."

Pierce declined to make any other comments without the approval of the Church Board.

Concerning Zeitgeist's literary merit, Dick Close, an editor of the Red Cedar Review, commented:

"Its achievements are good enough to merit its existence as a literary publication. It is aesthetically oriented, and has caused other publications to perform better because of it."

David Roberts, assistant professor of English, noted that "some things in the magazine have considerable literary merit; others seem to be there merely for the shock value."

Zeitgeist found its roots in an American Studies Seminar in 1964. At this time the seminars were the only things that students and faculty shared in.

New Outlet

An attempt to create some new outlet for this joint project was made in the form of a publication.

A staff of six faculty members and 10 students took on the task of creating a literary magazine in spite of a desperate lack of funds.

Groat remained in Lansing in the summer of 1965 in an attempt to publish the manuscripts he received. An intensive campaign was begun.

With $300 of deficit financing 3,000 copies were printed. Several hundred dollars were realized from the sales, yet the magazine found itself about $200 behind each printing.

Distinguished literary names such as Nelson Algren, Louis Turco and Gregory Corso have appeared in the magazine.

As the result of an advertisement in the New York Review of Books Zeitgeist has received contributions from across the country.

The growth of Zeitgeist's literary stature is inevitable.

Its supporters have stated that Zeitgeist strives to improve itself through literary experimentation. One of its major goals has been to bring writers and poets, some of the renowned literary figures of our time, in direct contact with the students.

Outside of authority

Groat says the magazine was not intended to be one of dissension. The editors attempted to follow the rules whenever it was possible.

"Zeitgeist chose to exist outside of authority rather than to bypass it," Groat explained.

Groat said he believes that his connection with Zeitgeist has not hampered his effectiveness as a teacher.

"If anything it has made me a better teacher," he said. "Students know of my part in the magazine, and as a teacher I become real for them. It gives them a chance to be a part of what is going on."

If Groat is compelled to leave the university, Zeitgeist will go with him, for he and Zeitgeist are a corporation.

A precedent will definitely have been set.

"The tragedy is if Zeitgeist leaves how can anyone follow?" Groat stated. "How can it ever be done again?"

Groat's affiliation with Zeitgeist has caused him an unending amount of hardship.

Many believe that it has been the direct cause of the loss of his job.

It also resulted in the loss of his home. Groat formerly lived in an East Lansing house with a summer lease and an option to renew. He received an eviction notice Aug. 20th.

The reason given: a magazine was published on the premises (a mimeograph machine was used).

The Zeitgeist staff attempted to rent an East Lansing office. Realtors indicated that Zeitgeist "would be better off out of town."

Within Groat's own department there seems to be a prevailing attitude of animosity in which more than half of the faculty share.

This animosity, along with his dismissal, has been attributed to his petulance and contempt toward the department rather than his criticism.

Groat commented that he was contemptuous only of certain aspects of the department.

One of Groat's major concerns was the fact that "a department of 80 with no parliamentary procedure, and no rules of order can only have chaos as an end result."

Groat also believes that the department hasn't taken advantage of the opportunity to work with students of potential writing ability.

Groat has his students keep a daily journal in order to improve their ability.

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) - A passenger train and a diesel-driven passenger coach collided head on near here Thursday night. Officials said at least six persons were killed and between 50 and 70 injured.

Many of the passengers were trapped in the wreckage of the cars hurled off the track by the collision.

The accident occurred on a single-line track at Oberliederbach, 10 miles west of Frankfurt at 5:30 p.m. The train was filled with homeward bound workers and students.

With the number of donors at Demonstration Hall steadily increasing, the blood drive collection reached 905 pints, 871 pints short of the 1,776 goal, at 4 p.m. Thursday. At that point the day's total was 133.

The drive began its fourth day Thursday by obtaining the 20 pints of A-positive blood needed for open-heart surgery in Ann Arbor today.

An average of about 500 pints will be needed in the last two days to reach 1,776 pints.

Shelby Robertson, general chairman of the drive, said that the goal is "not out of sight yet." It is still possible if the kids keep turning out like they are now," Robertson said.

LBJ REQUEST

Ike may make goodwill trip

WASHINGTON (AP) - An improving President Johnson conferred Thursday in his hospital quarters with former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and suggested he undertake a good-will mission to Asia and other areas of the world.

White House press secretary Bill D. Moyers said the whole idea is tentative.

But Rep. Carl Albert, D-Okla., got a firm, different impression. The House majority leader also saw Johnson and told newsmen: "The President mentioned to me by a memo how great it was that President Eisenhower is going out to Asia and other parts of the world next spring."

Moyers did say that if there were such a trip it would be at

Johnson's suggestion and "I would think good will would be a considerable part of it."

The press secretary said he understands Johnson and Eisenhower had discussed the idea of a trip previously. And apparently Johnson would like to use Eisenhower's worldwide prestige on an official mission.

On the second day after a doubleheader operation, to cut a polyp from his vocal cords and repair an old incision in his abdomen, Johnson pronounced himself "doing very well" and a White House bulletin said his doctors agreed.

In fact, the President was getting along in such apparently satisfactory shape that the surgeon who removed the growth from his throat, Dr. Wilbur J. Gould, decided to go back to New York overnight.

The President stepped up the pace of his return to work by holding a budget discussion session with four of his principal financial advisers.

The White House announced later that the discussions were exploratory only and there were no decisions reached and no commitments made on a possible tax cut or anything else.

George Christian, a Johnson aide, told reporters that the four visitors to the presidential suite did most of the talking as Johnson heeded doctors' orders to go easy on the talking while his throat heals.

Johnson was up before dawn, and a couple of hours later Eisenhower paid him the visit.

This was a sort of return favor. Johnson had visited Eisenhower last May when the general was being treated for an arthritic wrist at Walter Reed Army Hospital here. Johnson is a patient at the naval hospital in suburban Bethesda, Md.

A group of reporters was invited in for the last 20 minutes of a 45-minute Johnson-Eisenhower talkfest.

They reported that the President was talking almost non-stop, although Moyers had said Wednesday the doctors had instructed Johnson "to make no formal speeches for a period of four to five weeks and to keep the use of his voice at a minimum."

Newsman caught a word or two between the President and Eisenhower about some trip. And then Johnson told them later: "We went on a little trip around the world."

Perhaps significantly, Eisenhower told questioners as he walked out of the hospital, that he always has tried to follow the spirit of non-partisanship in foreign policy.

Court orders Powell to jail

NEW YORK (AP) - Harlem Congressman Adam Clayton Powell Jr. has been ordered by a State Supreme Court justice to surrender himself the day before Thanksgiving to begin a 30-day jail sentence for criminal contempt of court.

Justice Matthew M. Levy issued the order Thursday directing Powell to surrender to the sheriff at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 23.

Levy had found the Negro Democrat guilty of two counts of criminal contempt of court on Nov. 4 for willful failure to answer two court directives in a $164,000 libel judgment against him.

Powell, who routed three opponents in the general election last week and won a 12th term in Congress, was reported to be in the Bahamas.

The judge had earlier ordered Powell to pay a $250 fine on each of the two counts. In his order Thursday, Levy said Powell would be liable to an additional 60-day term if he defaulted in paying the $500.

Levy directed Powell to surrender the day after a scheduled hearing in the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court on a challenge by Powell's attorneys of Levy's jurisdiction.

Conceivably, the five-man panel could issue a bench decision on the challenge, but it is not expected.

Asked about the arrest order, Henry R. Williams, an attorney for Powell, said, "The matter is before the Appellate Division. I don't think the order will stand upon appeal."

Levy said his arrest order could be served personally or by registered mail on Powell at his legal voting address, 120 W. 138th St.; his Washington, D.C., Congressional office; or his "abode" in Bimini in the Bahamas.

The action stems from a court decision in 1963 finding that Powell had defamed a Harlem widow, Ester James, 68, by calling her a "bag woman" - a collector of graft for corrupt policemen - on a television program in 1960.

Powell has consistently refused to pay the judgment or even submit a financial examination to determine his ability to pay it.

On Oct. 10, a Supreme Court jury found that Powell had willfully failed to answer five court directives and orders. He was ordered arrested for civil contempt, but the order could not be served outside New York State or on Sunday.

Leaflets on ND campus

It has been reported that an "air force" will drop hundreds of leaflets on the campus of Notre Dame University this morning, the State News learned Thursday.

The leaflets will beseech the "peaceful villagers of Notre Dame" to give up their futile struggle against MSU and repudiate the leaders who have deceived them into believing that they can win.

"You have heard that the power of our Inter-Continental Ballistic Bubba is a myth. The existence of this powerful anti-blocker missile has been questioned."

"The INTERCONTINENTAL BALLISTIC BUBBA IS REAL. It can DESTROY YOU," the leaflet warns.

The time of the drop was withheld for security reasons, it was learned.

Richard O. Bernitt, director of the Dept. of Public Safety and Capt. A. John Zutaut, police commander, are responsible for keeping traffic flowing smoothly on campus.

Every car at game to get parking spot

By BOBBY SODEN
State News Staff Writer

An estimated 20,000 cars loaded with MSU and Notre Dame football fans will swarm to the campus Saturday, and what's more, they will all find a place to park.

Using a one-way traffic system, some 300 police officers and student traffic directors will guide strangers to the campus into parking spaces within easy walking or bussing distance of Spartan Stadium. Following the game, the cars will be whisked off campus in a brief 45 minutes.

The efficiency of the football traffic system recently was given a left-handed compliment when Lansing restaurant owners complained that out-of-town football fans were being ushered out of the Lansing area so rapidly that they were not eating meals in downtown establishments. The restaurant owners reasoned that visitors would stop to eat in Lansing if the traffic system didn't operate quite so smoothly.

The traffic system is coordinated from the University Police command post in the southwest corner of the stadium, over 100 feet above the ground.

Equipped with two-way radio, telephone and binoculars, Richard O. Bernitt, director of public safety, and Lt. Carl D. Renkoski are able to observe a sizable portion of the campus.

Their commands are coordinated with Capt. A. Zutaut, police commander of the department, who is aboard a small airplane and able to see incoming traffic for miles.

From their separate vantage points, the three are able to see before it is too late situations which may develop into problems and have traffic officers make adjustments accordingly.

All 34 University Police officers have various assignments during the game. Although this department is responsible for traffic on campus, they are assisted by 150 student traffic directors, as well as East Lansing, Ingham County, Lansing and Michigan State police departments.

ments and the Greater Lansing special police.

The overall objective is to get the fans parked as quickly and as close to the stadium as possible.

With the exception of cars with press passes, which park next to the stadium, the earliest arrivals coming from the west park in the IM field and south of the secret practice field, while those coming from the east park in Lots C, P and E, Later arrivals are parked farther from the stadium.

Express bus service to the stadium is provided for the 5,000 cars parked in the commuter lot. The express bus route is closed before and after the game to all traffic except busses and emergency vehicles.

The one-way traffic system goes into effect at about noon each football Saturday and continues until the game stars.

Officers remain at their posts until shortly after the game begins, and are then designated to another assignment.

Several officers are posted in high points of the stadium and on top of buildings as well as in patrol cars to keep an eye out for thieves tempted by the vast number of unlocked cars.

Other officers are given assignments in the police information booth, in the stadium and in routine patrol.

Preparations for the vast influx of traffic actually begin Friday at midnight.

An eight-man student set up crew working from midnight to 7 a.m. does everything from

Not A Space To Spare

When 50,000 people is a "small" crowd, and 70,000 people are not uncommon at a football game, you are bound to have parking and traffic control problems. But even for the Iowa game when snow hampered operations, the new traffic control plan held traffic tieups to a minimum.

CAME IN 'SAUCERS'

Massive world change predicted by spacemen

By RICHARD PHILLIPS
State News Staff Writer

A pretty kindergarten teacher from Lancaster, England, claims to have been visited by "people from another dimension." She hasn't seen any, but has received messages telepathically from them.

Miss Mollie Thompson predicted Wednesday that on Christmas morning, 1967, the world will undergo a massive change. Her friends were told all this by a Christ-like figure. She believes it.

"You may think I'm a crackpot, but this is what I saw and heard," she said.

She described how melodies and words were suddenly transmitted to her by "spacemen." Miss Thompson recorded these melodies, and is subsequently known as the "flying saucer folk singer."

Oh yes, she saw a flying saucer too. In 1960, a pre-arranged meeting took place in England with Miss Thompson, four other earthlings and the spacemen.

"A bright pointed light descended rapidly at the meeting place," she said. "It pulsed from nearly blue-white to yellow."

She said the saucer "seemed as big as the moon," and she watched for 20 minutes while it performed "geometric maneuvers—like diving at impossible speeds to a sudden stop in mid-air."

Had pictures

Color photographs were passed around of the flying saucers. They appeared genuine, though hard to believe.

No verbal contacts were made with the spacecraft, however, and their tape-recorder didn't pick up any space-like sounds.

Eleven months later, Miss Thompson "got her inspiration from the people in outer space" to make the folk songs. She recorded them (nine in all) on a private label and sold them through an "oddballish" group called Universal Link. The record is appropriately titled "From Worlds Afar."

Miss Thompson maintains that her friends in outer space can alter the atomic composition of their bodies. They live in what might be called another dimension, and only by altering the frequency of energy emanations from their bodies can they be visible to human beings.

Is He Christ?

"And then only to certain people," she said, pointing to those earthmen gifted with ESP (extra sensory perception).

Miss Thompson said a cosmic visitor, otherwise known as The Master, is a Christ-like figure dressed in a white robe. She related some other events that may upset many religious men.

Richard Graves, a real estate agent in Worthing, England, found some old paintings of angels announcing the birth of Christ. He was taking them out to the incinerator when the cosmic visitor appeared in a flash of burning light.

"I am he," announced the spaceman, pointing to the paintings of the Christ-child. Miss Thompson said the paintings miraculously lost their faded look after the visit and became quite clear.

The cosmic visitor is to reveal himself to the world on Christmas morning of 1967.

Develop minds

The development of man's mind toward levels previously speculated only by science-fiction will result, said Miss Thompson.

"I don't think there are any other planets having such a long period of relative ignorance as us," she said.

"The spacemen have harnessed all the mind's energy," she said, which gives them powers far in excess of mere telepathy. She felt the spacemen may have controlled their saucers by means of mind force.

Miss Thompson definitely did not appear to be a "goofball" to the audience. Her ideas were somewhat unusual, but it appeared that no one completely disbelieved her.

One student, who claimed to be a handwriting analyst, asked for her autograph. She complied.

A coed, who declined to identify herself, told Miss Thompson of some recent dreams.

"I was having trouble getting to sleep a few nights ago, when a thought suddenly came to me," the coed said.

"Everything will change for the better on Christmas of 1967."

TOP TWO

Sports, children liked by seniors

Jerry West, one of the unsung heroes of Michigan State's championship football squad, and Mary Ann Carson, one of the most active vice presidents on campus, are the featured seniors this week.

West has been a regular offensive tackle for three years and is rated by Coach Duffy Daugherty as the best offensive tackle in the Big Ten.

West has overcome the handicap of being relatively small (5-11, 214) by a "tremendous desire and spirit," says Line Coach Gordie Serr.

Jerry is one of State's most aggressive players and whenever there is a scrap on the field No. 77 is likely to be in it. He was expelled from last week's game with Indiana. Jerry explains his "mean" reputation as "playing with an intensity to win and playing as hard as I can."

West is from Durand, where he was a high school wrestling champion in addition to being a standout on the gridiron. Majoring in recreation, Jerry plans to work with children and stay close to athletics. "Right now, however, I hope to continue to play football in the professional leagues for awhile," he said.

His biggest thrill at MSU was playing on two Big Ten championship teams in a row and a national championship team.

Miss Carson, a child development major from Toledo, Ohio, has served as the vice president of the Women's Inter-residence Council and vice president of her own dormitory, West Mayo.

The members of Circle Honorary, who are chosen from the most activity-minded women in the dormitory system, have also elected her vice president.

In addition, she has been a member of the student-faculty social affairs committee, and secretary of the AWS standards board.

She has a particular interest in helping young people. "Small children are very challenging to work with," she commented, and "they are often more perceptive than people realize." Miss Carson hopes to obtain a master's degree and possibly work in Operation Head Start, where she can employ her talents in child development and education.

Overseas study offered

Student summer-exchange program directors described work-travel-study opportunities to Justin Morrill College students in Phillips Hall Wednesday.

Programs that would provide opportunity for study tours, work camps, overseas summer schools, group and independent travel, and hospitality programs in a variety of countries were introduced to the students.

Although these programs are not primarily credit or degree granting, Justin Morrill students can receive academic credit through the Overseas Program Office in the college.

The Lisle Foundation offered a program which includes living with a family for a month in one of 45 countries. Emphasis is placed on close personal contact with members of a culture. The foundation grants loans and scholarships to defray the expected $700-1,700 cost for one summer.

Work-study programs are also offered by the Lisle Foundation ranging from a job in a senator's office in Washington, D.C., to living experience with migrant workers in California.

An unusual, but reportedly highly satisfying summer was offered by the Cross Roads Africa program which would include living in the bush areas of Africa.

Roland DeMars, representative of the program, described the life in primitive Africa as "risky," and said that it required an individual with strong emotional maturity to profit from the living-learning opportunities of the African work camp.

Other summer activities included life with a Japanese family on Okinawa, a MSU-Nigerian exchange program and study in various European universities.

CHUCK STODDARD

Sr. council to serve not to govern

The largest problem facing the 1967 Senior Council is the proof of its validity.

Chuck Stoddard, East Lansing senior and Senior Class president, explained the function of the group:

"Let me emphasize that Senior Council is not senior class government. It does not govern, nor does it make any laws. Through its seven committees, it seeks only to serve."

Stoddard explained that ideally, the council would like to build class unity and preserve traditions.

"We must look at our goals realistically," Stoddard said. "Senior Council would like to make the senior year more meaningful through various activities, yet, on the other hand, wants to prepare seniors for the benefits and responsibilities received as alumni."

Heading seven committees of this year's council are:

Senior of the Week -- Lenore

Wile, Princeton, N.J., and Chuck Atkin, East Lansing.

Development Fund--Bob Berglund, East Lansing.

Receptions -- Marsha Jahns of Holland.

Swing-Out -- Debbie Grant, Larchmont, N.Y.

'67 Club -- Nancy Anger, Southfield, and Jerry Neuman, Bethlehem, Pa.

Commencement -- Mary Stealey, Marshall.

Publicity -- Dianne Swartz, Bloomfield Hills, and Phyllis

Helper, University Hts., Ohio.

"Senior Night at the Gables" is not being sponsored by Senior Council because in the past we have done all the work with no profit," Stoddard said.

"If seniors want to have a special night, that's fine, but the council will not sponsor it."

Stoddard explained that the council's work is presently in the planning stages, but the results will be seen winter and spring term.

Police, children need to relate

Police and juveniles should be able to get together on some major problems confronting them both, Wayne Buddenmeier said Wednesday at a Juvenile Problems Conference.

Buddenmeier, administrative director of the Michigan Constables Association, spoke before law enforcement officers, school administrators and juvenile court officials at Kellogg Center.

He sought support for several proposals he felt would improve the relationship between police and the children.

"There should be an expanded educational opportunity for law enforcement people," he said. "They should be able to move into other fields that would be of advantage to them, such as social science."

He said that police need to better understand the problems that confront today's children.

Police officers are qualified to participate on consultation teams in schools, he said. These teams, composed of school administrators, advisers and teachers, discuss problems that concern groups of children or a particular child.

Buddenmeier said that police must get together with children and establish broader understanding.

He called for give-and-take situation where police could point out limitations of each side.

Police should be more active in defining their position he said. Children simply do not understand the meaning of police, courts and laws. Police and children must learn what each expects of the other.

Buddenmeier proposed a high school course that would aid in understanding the law enforcement system. "This is intended to create a new and better image of law enforcement officials," he said.

College Bowl continues here

ASMSU's College Bowl is continuing into the second week as on- and off-campus living units compete for top honors in the student sponsored program. "More representatives" are needed at the matches," said Dennis Smith, College Bowl chairman.

Each living unit is asked to send two representatives. Matched with another unit, each team of four competes with another team. Matches are scheduled by a computer.

The winners of last Sunday's competition include Abbot-Mason and Phillips-Snyder for on-campus; and Montie House-Howland, Bower House-Phi Gamma Delta and Sigma Delta Tau-Delta Gamma for off-campus.

Sunday on-campus matches include N. Hubbard-S. Hubbard vs. N. Case - S. Case at 2 p.m. in Erickson Kiva; E. Wilson - W. Wilson vs. E. Holmes-W. Holmes at 2:30 p.m. in the Erickson Kiva. Sunday's off-campus competition includes: Alpha Xi Delta-Alfa Phi vs. Delta Theta Psi-Upsilon at 2 p.m. in 31 Union; Farmhouse - Alpha Epsilon Pi vs. Alpha Gamma Rho-Asher Men at 2 p.m. in 35 Union; Alpha Chi Omega-Kappa Kappa Gamma vs. Phi Sigma Delta-Delta Sigma Phi at 2:30 p.m. in 31 Union; and Ellsworth House - Triangle vs. Alpha Delta Pi - Zeta Tau Alpha at 2:30 p.m. in 35 Union.

Scalpers to be prosecuted

Ticket scalpers attempting to beat the law by selling Notre Dame game tickets with another object for a high price will be prosecuted, the Ingham County Prosecutor announced Thursday.

Donald L. Reiss said that scalpers could be prosecuted not only on ticket scalping charges, but also statutes prohibiting fraud, avoiding payment of sales tax and a University Ordinance prohibiting soliciting on campus. "The ultimate purpose is to protect the public," Reiss explained. "The problem in past years has been those persons who would do this solely for profit and cheat the general public."

Reiss added that it was equally a crime to purchase tickets at a cost over the general admission price.

Plain-clothes University Police officers will be looking for ticket scalpers prior to the Notre Dame game, Capt. A. John Zuta, police commander, announced last week.

'Isenberg lecture set tonight

C. West Churchman of the University of California, Berkeley, will present the third lecture of the Isenberg Memorial Lecture Series at 8 p.m. Friday in Conrad Auditorium.

Churchman, professor of business administration, will speak on the nature and design of inquiring systems.

The professor is the editor of the Management Science Journal and the former editor of the Philosophy of Science Journal. During World War II, Churchman served as the head of the mathematical section at Frankfort Arsenal.

The series is sponsored by the Philosophy Dept. and is open to the public.

ologist, the Rev. J.V. Casserley, in his recent discussion on linguistic analysis in the Union. Many people cannot understand church creed and terminology and this is why groups such as the Beatles are more popular than Jesus, he explained. Casserley cited that Barabbas was also more popular than Jesus at one time and set free in place of Jesus because the people couldn't understand the importance of Jesus and his teachings.

The greatest danger is that the church is becoming a thing for the elite only and not for the common man, he said. The educated elite are capable of grasping creeds and terminology of the church which easily possible are not of most people.

Casserley explained that there is a great mass of uneducated people that are not in the church because they cannot communicate with it. They are simply incapable of being in touch with it.

The church should endeavor to gain closer contact with all men by modifying its language so that everyone can grasp it, he continued.

Contemporary speech is difficult to express because it is a mood language.

"Our modern language is riddled with ambiguity and can't be precise like clear cut sentences," he said.

Rev. Casserley is a professor of philosophy at Seabury-Western Theological Seminary at Evanston, Ill. He has written many books on Christian faith and life, including "No Faith of My Own" and "The Bent World."

No-church church?

The ecumenical movement, to make the church "worldwide in its inclusiveness," presents challenges that could end modern Christianity with its multi churches and beliefs.

If modern trends persist, it seems inevitable that Christianity will return to the Dark Ages.

Today the ecumenical movement finds churches merging like businesses. The problems are likewise often administrative difficulties.

The merger talks two weeks ago between the Methodist Church and the Evangelical United Brethren (EUB) Church are a typical example of business -- like juggling and compromise.

Paul A. Washburn, executive director of the EUB commission on church union, was quoted as saying the real problem was "how to assign and balance out power."

"We will be one person in 15 because of this union and this causes fear and anxiety. Methodists just can't understand," Washburn said.

A specific problem was the appointment of church officials. The EUB Church elects their officials.

As must be, the larger Methodist Church (with 10.3 million members) will retain their Bishop system. The little EUB Church (with only 750,000 members) had to compromise to combine.

Charles C. Parlin, a New York lawyer and chairman of the Methodist ad hoc committee for the merger, said in a Detroit Free Press story that the only Methodist concession was the new name "United Methodist Church."

The "mutual compromising" exhibited by the EUB Church will spell the end of many other churches if it persists.

Such merger methods can end only with the "United Roman Catholic Church."

Christians must also face the problem of compromising their dogma. What kind of church will evolve from this?

Two possibilities are obvious. Perhaps Christianity will move back to something resembling pre-Luther Roman Catholicism. It is doubtful that Protestants are ready for this--yet.

Or maybe church mergers will reverse this trend and expand their dogma with each merger to include, not exclude, all new beliefs.

Eventually the ecumenical road will lead to a no-church where the individual is sole judge of church requirements.

If this can be hurried, the no-church church will be in fashion with today's no lipstick lipstick or the no-bra bra.

This, however, may reduce the Christian church to an open social organization for Hindu, Moslem or atheist.

If the no-church church comes, the clergy might just as well pack up their Bibles and get a degree in sociology, psychology or, better yet, agriculture -- with a major emphasis in herd management!

Without thinking of such inevitabilities, the ecumenical movement drives churches blindly on, like the lemmings of Scandinavia, in a mad rush to the Sea of Unity where many, if not all, will drown in mergers.

Next week Faye Unger will deal with another aspect of ecumenism.

Hindu Hymn

Then there was neither being nor non-being:

There was no air, nor firmament beyond it.

Was there a stirring? Where? Beneath what cover?

Was there a great abyss of unplumbed water? ****

The void still held unformed what was potential.

Until the power of Warmth produced the sole One. ****

Then, in That One, Desire stirred into being.

Desire that was the earliest seed of Spirit. ****

Who truly knows, and who can here declare it?

Whence it was born, and how this world was fashioned? ****

He knows -- with full assurance, he alone,

Who in the highest heaven guards and watches:

He knows indeed, but then, perhaps, he knows not.

Students veto communism

By FAYE UNGER
State News Staff Writer

It was a neck-and-neck race down to the finish line, but by a majority of one MSU student answering a questionnaire said a Christian could not be a Communist.

Out of 18 students replying to a questionnaire sent out to humanities classes, eight said a Christian could not be a Communist, but seven said a Christian could. Three gave "undecided" answers.

Those saying "yes" stressed the communal, sharing aspect of communism. Those saying "no" stressed the atheistic, dictatorial methods, and the submergence of the individual.

The 18 were the only ones who replied out of 230 students receiving the questionnaire.

The students defined communism in terms of strong government control, often referring to it as "dictatorial," in terms of public or communal ownership of property and of materialism.

The majority of the definitions carried negative connotations. "Communism is public ownership of everything, humans included," "Under communism a person is the tool of the state."

Such replies seemed to refer to the Communist countries of the Soviet Union and Red China. Several students specified this is what was meant.

But many put positive connotations into their view of communism. "Under communism one works for a utopia in material and economic matters. Each person is to have equal opportunity to maintain his physical well-being."

"One works for the good of the society in which he lives rather than for personal gain."

A Christian, as the students defined it, is a person who believes in one God, and in Christ as his son, and who strives to follow Christ's teachings. Those expanding on Christ's teachings summed them up as "love for one's fellow man."

"Love for fellow man" became the tying factor for those students saying a Christian could be a Communist.

"Brotherly love and do unto others fits into a truly communist community (idea of common ownership)."

One student came out against the capitalist economic system as opposed to the communistic economic system.

"Christianity with its brotherhood of man is more in agreement with communism, with its concern for society as a whole, than with capitalism, in which society is viewed as a collection of individuals fighting for existence. No one having Christian good will for his brethren wages economic war on them."

"The question is how can a Christian not be a Communist and not be a hypocrite."

"A Christian can adapt to change. A Christian is called whatever his present environment is called."

Those who said a Christian could not be a Communist equated Christianity with concern for each individual, belief in a supreme Being and "democratic freedoms."

They equated communism with atheism, materialism, dictatorship and lack of freedom. They could not see how a person could owe his prime allegiance to God.

Reporter-go-round via long distance

In which the author decides to forget bureaucratic procedures and attempts to go right to the top to obtain a Christmas job only to find that bureaucratic procedures cannot be forgotten.

By PATRICK MORRISON

I wonder if readers know what reporters go through sometimes just to get a story.

I even have doubts (journalism instructors please stop here) if it's all worth the few words that may get printed.

My weekly news magazine said there was a chance that the mail service would break down under the weight of the Christmas landslide of cards and packages, so I decided to look into the situation for a possible story on job opportunities for students.

Lansing and East Lansing post offices could give me a little information but not enough for a story.

Then the fatal idea struck: go big—call Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien in Washington.

That brain wave cost me $2.20 and a frustrating half-hour on the phone to Washington D.C. and the LBJ Ranch near Johnson City, Texas.

A sweet-sounding operator placed my person-to-person call to the U.S. Post Office Dept. in Washington. That was the last time we got through to somebody we wanted.

Operator: "Long distance calling for Mr. Lawrence F. O'Brien."

Post office operator: "I'll connect you with Mr. O'Brien's office."

Click, click .... hmmm .... Receptionist: "Mr. O'Brien's office."

Operator: "Long distance calling for Lawrence F. O'Brien."

Receptionist: "Who's calling please?"

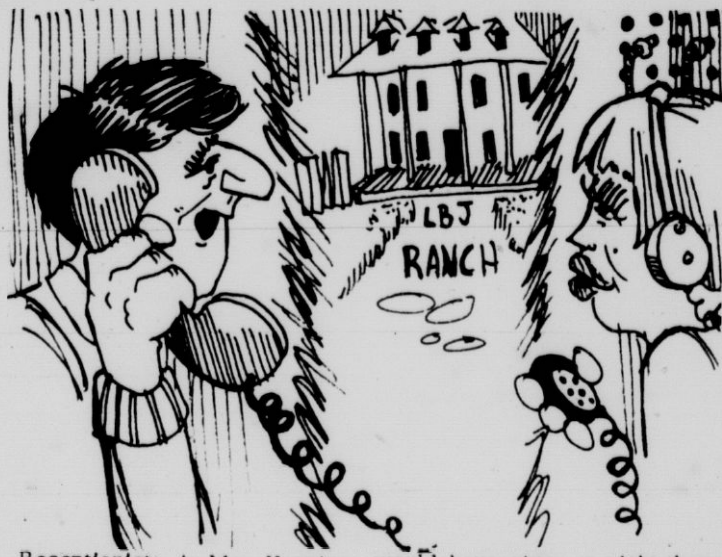

Operator: "Mr. Morrison from Michigan State University in Lansing, Michigan."

Receptionist: "Mr. O'Brien is in Texas with the President. What does Mr. Morrison want?"

Me: "I'd like some information on job possibilities for students during the Christmas rush."

Receptionist: "I'll switch you to Mr. O'Brien's assistant, Mr. Kappenstein. He would know about that."

Click, click .... buzzzzzz ... buzzzzzz ....

Receptionist: A Mr. Kappenstein's office."

Operator: "Long distance calling for Mr. Kappenstein."

Receptionist: "Who's calling please?"

Operator: "Mr. Morrison, a reporter from Michigan State University in Lansing, Michigan."

Receptionist: "Mr. Kappenstein isn't in right now. What does the gentleman want?"

This bureaucratic run-around continued through three more assistants' offices without a word with any of them. Some reporters would have given up right there, but I was determined to beat this silly game.

Me (to operator): "Wanna call the ranch in Johnson City, Texas?"

Operator: "That would have to go through heavy security. We'd never get through to the ranch."

Me: "Let's try anyway."

Operator: "Okay, one moment please."

Click, click, click .... Awwwoooooonnnn ....

Operator: "Hello ... hello, Johnson City Information?"

Information operator:

"Yaayass."

Operator: "Long distance calling for Mr. Lawrence F. O'Brien, the Postmaster General, on the LBJ Ranch. Do you know where we can reach him there?"

Information operator: "I don't have a listing for the ranch. Would you like to try the post office here to see if they might know where he can be reached?"

Operator: "What is that number, please?"

The postmaster general, of course, is not the guest of the local post office and this, too, led nowhere.

Operator: "One moment please."

About a two minute pause here had me convinced that my sweet little operator had given up. But not yet!

Operator: "I just talked with my supervisor and she says we should try for a special routing for this call. I'll try that."

Brrrrr ... Brrrrr ...

Operator: "A routing please for the 'LBJ Ranch'."

Special operator: "I have several listings—none for 'LBJ Ranch'. I have one for Johnson, L.B. Ranch."

Operator: "Could I have that please?"

Special operator: "Yes, that's 512 plus F as in Frank, L as in Larry, -----"

The special operator hangs up chuckling to herself.

Operator: "Sounds like she's getting a big kick out of this."

Me: "Aren't you?"

Operator: "I'm not so sure anymore."

Me: "I don't believe all this."

AUSJ calls for changes

The All-University Student Judiciary (AUSJ) has reviewed and made recommendations for the Faculty-Committee on Student Affairs' Academic Freedom Report.

The AUSJ recommendations were presented to the ASMSU Student Board and incorporated into its recommendations to the faculty committee and the Academic Senate.

Judiciary

The recommendations that AUSJ feels most strongly about concerns action which a living unit judiciary may take upon hearing a case.

As the report stands, if a student is found guilty the living unit judiciary has two choices: it may submit a warning, or official written reprimand, or it may put the student on social probation, not to exceed 10 days.

AUSJ would like to add a third course of action, stating that "the judiciary may take other action that may seem appropriate for any given case."

"Warning and social probation are just not wide enough," Steve Goodman, chief justice of AUSJ, said.

Goodman explained that this is an "elastic clause" to avoid stifling the lower level judiciaries.

"Not giving it the responsibility to act responsibly will kill it," he said.

The recommendation also states that the judiciary "may request restitution for damages or stolen articles," or it "may suggest any kind of individually constructive action such as post-hearing interviews and/or action specifically related to the original incident."

Subject to check

Goodman also pointed out that action of a living unit judiciary is subject to check by an administrative body, such as a head resident adviser, or appeal to a higher body.

Another point AUSJ justices feels is important is the method of determining the composition of the judiciaries. Living unit judiciaries, the justices feel, should be selected on the basis of the individual student's qualification, and thus should not necessarily be elected popularly.

Selection for the proposed Student-Faculty Judiciary would be by the ASMSU Student Board, upon recommendation of AUSJ.

"We feel that the experience gained by serving on AUSJ is invaluable in serving on a committee to interview students who are interested in becoming a member of the Student-Faculty Judiciary," Goodman said.

"Thus, the selection committee will have had one to three years' experience in the judicial area."

Other recommendations were made to avoid ambiguity in the report as it now stands. There was also clarification on the major governing groups judiciaries, which will not act as appellate bodies for living unit judiciaries.

Shaw to sponsor 'Parade of Roses'

Since MSU can't go to the Rose Bowl this year, Shaw Hall is bringing a bit of the Rose Bowl to MSU.

Shaw is sponsoring a miniature Rose Bowl parade, aimed at Notre Dame, for Saturday morning. Chuck Demery, president of West Shaw Hall, said the parade is to display spirit.

"How many times are we going to be Big Ten Champs two years in a row?" Demery asked.

The parade is limited to 12 floats by University regulations. Participants will be chosen, Demery said, on a first-come-first-serve basis. Residence halls wishing to enter should call Dave Guillaume, president of East Shaw.

Following the Rose Bowl theme, entrants may build their floats Friday night in the Shaw Hall parking ramp. Floats are to assemble on Shaw Lane; as yet a map route has not been established.

Floats don't have to be built in the parking ramp, Demery explained, but the planners of the parade thought it might create more spirit for the parade and game.

The parade is scheduled for 8:45 to 10:15 a.m. Saturday.

ASMSU proposes to rename lounge

For the first time in MSU history, a memorial dedication may be made for a student.

The ASMSU Student Board Tuesday night unanimously agreed to back the proposal of renaming the Student Services lounge after Jim Stefanoff.

Stefanoff, former president of Inter-Fraternity Council and Excalibur, was killed in an auto accident in the spring of 1965. Jeff Marcus, vice-president of IFC and one of Stefanoff's former fraternity brothers, is head of the committee to honor Stefanoff.

The committee is composed of representatives of all groups with which Stefanoff had been affiliated.

Marcus explained that the purpose of the dedication was not to remember a name but the principle.

"He gave all he had to MSU," Marcus said.

Stefanoff was also president of Sigma Alpha Mu and a member of Blue Key.

Dec. 5-10 has been designated Human Rights Week and it is hoped to have an all-day open house to honor Stefanoff by placing his picture and a trophy in the lounge after its renaming.

Student leaders discuss possible game problems

Student leaders from Notre Dame and MSU met Wednesday night to discuss Saturday's game and possible problems with students.

About 500 students will be traveling from Notre Dame, plus some 300 alumni. Officials expect that non-ticket holders will also come.

Jim Graham, chairman of ASMSU, Jim Carbine, vice chairman of ASMSU and Hank Plante, secretary of ASMSU, met with the Notre Dame student body president, vice president, rally director and editor of the weekly magazine.

No one expects any trouble after the game, regardless of the outcome, Carbine said. Notre Dame did express some concern about students running onto the field after the game and are writing to all student ticket-holders in an effort to prevent this.

ASMSU is sending information to Notre Dame students concerning organized activities for them to attend Saturday evening.

The meeting was arranged through the vice presidents of Student Affairs from both schools and was paid for by Notre Dame.

A similar meeting was held prior to last year's Notre Dame-MSU game.

Carbine said the meeting was "very worthwhile," and that a "great deal of rapport" was established between the two groups.

W. Circle gets grill: 'The Pub'

"The Pub," the new West Circle grill, will have a grand opening Saturday from 4:30 p.m. - midnight, the West Circle Coordinating Council announced.

"The Pub" is housed in Gilchrist Hall and has its entrance at the rear of the dorm.

A live band, "The Plain Brown Wrappers," will play from 4:30 - 7:30 p.m. in the grill. Informal folk singing will follow. Pizza will be the featured item.

"The Pub" will be decorated in Old English. The color scheme is amber, red, blue and green. Stained glass windows, Old English gas lights, cross beams, round tables and captain's chairs will enhance this theme.

The winners of the "name the grill" contest, Sandy Fubini of East Landon, Alice Schmidt of West Landon and Charlotte Fischhaber of Williams, will be presented a plaque with their names and "The Pub" engraved on it which will be hung in the grill.

Juvenile books: index of culture

By WILLIAM F. AST
State News Staff Writer

Juvenile literature has served as an index to the culture of the times, said Russell B. Nye, distinguished Professor of English, addressing the Sociology Club Wednesday.

Books for youth are a reflection of the standards which adults wish to impress upon their children, he stated. It naturally followed that the nature of the books changes with the changing of the society.

The first large segment of literature aimed at youth were the "dime novels," Nye said, which rose and fell with the frontier. They were sensational and exciting, full of Indians, blood and thunder and intrepid heroes. Though the heroes were resolutely virtuous, he said, many adults objected to them because of their sensationalism and violence, and the dime novels gradually disappeared.

Society was becoming industrialized, and fortunes were being made overnight. Little-known men like Andrew Carnegie became financial giants, Nye said; society was enchanted with the self-made man, and these values were reflected in the novels of Horatio Alger.

Alger's novels, while of questionable literary value, presented youth with its first views of opportunities in a booming economy, Nye said. Alger was realistic about urban conditions, and attempted to show youth how to cope with these problems, Nye said, but he ran into some criticism when considerable amounts of boys began deserting their homes for the cities.

He did advise boys with good homes to stay there.

But fortunes became very difficult to make, and money stayed with those who already had it. The early 1900's introduced Teddy Roosevelt, the rugged outdoors, the Boy Scouts, and big time intercollegiate athletics. Here Gilbert Patten created Frank Merriwell, one of Yale's most famous students (and one of the few to take nine years to graduate), Nye said.

Frank Merriwell was the personification of athletic discipline and virtue, Nye related, refusing to drink, smoke or swear, and graduating with honors. He was a master of any sport, and "ran the table" the first time he picked up a pool cue, Nye added.

Interest gradually changed to technology and invention, and Ed-wood Stratemeyer began publishing the highly successful Tom Swift series, Nye said. The books were written by Victor Appleton, a pen name for Howard Garis, who also wrote the "Uncle Wiggly" books. The books were well written, ten, imaginative, and impressively scientific, he said.

The novels of Alger, Patten and Carls followed the changes in society's ideas of success, according to Nye. Success was wealth for Alger, personal merit for Patten and invention for Carls. All were enjoyable for youth, and if they were not overly valuable, at least reading them was "no worse than smoking corn silk," Nye said.

These novels have passed from sight now; Chip Hilton has replaced Frank Merriwell, and Tom Swift Jr. is 10 times the genius his father was, Nye said. But the legends of the old novels remain, he added. Horatio Alger awards are presented annually, he said, and men like Knute Rockne and Grantland Rice have talked surprisingly like Frank Merriwell.

LSD testimonial

"The time has come to think," Leary said, and society must be ready.

"You must have a method," he continued, "and our method is called a 'sacrament.'"

"We don't worship the drugs," Leary said. "They are just the visible—external—things that trigger off the key."

"We have to climb out of normal mental thinking to discover reality," he said.

"Every place I go, I talk to a sell-out crowd," Leary said. "It really has nothing to do with me. It's just a play. Someone gave me the good lines. Turn on—tune in—drop out," he said.

"When you are spiritually ready to do so, I want you to go out and turn them on. That's the way it's always been done."

As the crowd of cheering students gave him a standing ovation, Leary made a sign of a prayer and said "I salute the divinity within you."

Not Even A Prayer

It is obvious that at least one Spartan fan believes that Notre Dame has absolutely no hope for victory in tomorrow's game. Let's hope that he's correct, for Notre Dame is favored by four points.

ethical tradition of the university teaching profession in refusing to publicize reasons for its decision...

"This tradition is intended not to cloak unjust actions, but to protect men seeking employment at other universities."

Hannah indicated in an interview that he considers the vigil to be essentially pointless, because he thought the lines were too sharply drawn within the ATL Dept. for any further action to be taken in the cases of the three men.

Emphasizing that he did not wish to imply in any way that the ATL Dept. did not necessarily consider the three cases sufficiently, Hannah said he thought the demonstrations would encourage the department to consider its staffing problems a little more closely next time.

He said that "mobility" among nontenured faculty members is common, and that there should be no stigma attached to a change of schools by such people.

At Bessey Hall the vigil attracted about 170 participants at 1 a.m. Thursday and about 140 were left at 4 a.m. Of the 140, 70 said in a poll that they were either National Merit Scholars or semi-finalists.

As on Wednesday, the demonstration slipped down to about two dozen people during class hours.

Michigan State — Offensive lineups — Notre Dame

86 AL BRENNER 6-2, 196, So. 21 passes caught for 349 yards and one TD. A dependable receiver with great hands and shifty moves. Former halfback who is counted on for third down catches. Also returns punts. 19 runbacks for 264 yards and one TD -- 95 yard effort against Illinois.

79 JOE PRZYBYCKI 6-1, 239, Jr. One of strongest men on team. Steady blocker on power plays and traps run to his side. Biggest man on offensive line.

67 TONY CONTI 5-10, 219, Jr. Versatile performer, who never played offensive guard until fall practice. Took over for Norm Jenkins. Rugged and quick, though small.

52 LARRY SMITH 6-1, 194, Jr. Took over position from Ron Ranieri, when Ranieri was hurt at start of fall practice. Held his job with good straight ahead blocking. Again, small, but quick.

68 DAVE TECHLIN 5-11, 201, Jr. Alternated at tackle last year with Przybycki. The pulling guard, who leads the outside runs and sweeps. At 201, another small but quick lineman.

77 JERRY WEST 5-11, 214, Sr. Most dependable blocker on the offensive line. Steady performer, who has key blocks on most of Apisa's plays. Will switch to opposite side, when line is unbalanced.

84 GENE WASHINGTON 6-3, 219, Sr. 22 passes received for 554 yards and seven TD's. Possesses amazing average of 25.1 yards per reception. Has it all, great size, speed, and moves. Holds all MSU pass-catching records, and five Big Ten and NCAA hurdles titles: Could be the best all-around end in the nation.

16 JIMMY RAYE 5-10, 172, Jr. Passing: 55 completions in 103 attempts, six interceptions and 10 TD's. Running: 101 carries for 361 yards and 5 TD's. A great runner and scrambler who has shown he can throw. Accurate long and short, but would still rather keep the ball than let it loose.

34 DWIGHT LEE 6-2, 192, Jr. Rushing: 58 carries for 288 yards and two TD's. Receiving: 6 passes caught for 42 yards and one TD. Powerful runner and blocker, with great starting speed. Runs in Jones' shadow, but has been used in key situations. Leading rusher in Notre Dame game last year, when he carried 26 times for 85 yards.

26 CLINTON JONES 6-0, 201, Sr. Rushing: 149 carries for 771 yards and six TD's. Receiving: six catches for 85 yards. Team co-captain. One of the truly great halfbacks, with great speed, size, power, and finesse. Can go all the way with one opening any time. Used a great deal up the middle this year, after opponents stopped his outside sweeps.

45 BOB APISA 6-1, 218, Jr. Rushing: 84 carries for 444 yards and eight TD's. Receiving: five passes for 29 yards and one TD. Has fantastic speed and drive for a fullback, when he is running right. But has been bothered by recurring knee injuries. Can run through broken field or to the outside--but knee is still questionable.

85 JIM SEYMOUR 6-4, 205, So. 37 catches for 712 yards, six TD's. Will split to either side of the line. Missed three games this year due to leg injury. Great speed, size, and moves. One of the great deep receivers in college football. Cannot be covered man-to-man.

71 PAUL SEILER 6-3, 235, Sr. The surprise of the offensive line. A sub in 1965, he has developed into the best offensive tackle on the squad. Strong on straight ahead blocking.

76 TOM REGNER 6-2, 225, Sr. Right now being compared to the great offensive guards in history. 90 per cent of short yardage situations will be run over him. With Goeddeke forms one of the strong center-guard combinations of all time.

54 GEORGE GOEDDEKE 6-3, 288 Sr. The unsung hero of the offensive line. Pros have been watching him since his sophomore year. Can handle a man of any size.

59 DICK SWATLAND 6-2, 225, Sr. The puller. Has more speed than Regner. Good at banging out the linebackers. He is the key to the outside running attack.

75 BOB KUECHENBERG 6-2, 225, So. Strong blocker, but the weakest link in the offensive line. Soph who started when Rudy Konieczny was injured this year. Has strength, but is inexperienced.

80 DON GMITTER 6-2, 210, Sr. Typical pro-style tight end, plays like a third tackle in the line. Has caught two passes for 32 yards.

5 TERRY HANRATTY 6-1, 190 So. Passing: 77 for 143, 10 interceptions, 1221 yards, 8 TD's. Rushing: 48 carries for 112 yards and five TD's. Said to be wild under pressure. Has a tendency to count heavier on deep receivers, and play for the home run bomb rather than execute a planned passing attack.

47 NICK EDDY 6-0, 195, Sr. 67 carries for 498 yards and seven TD's, average of 7.4 per carry. Great speed, the breakaway runner on the team. Has been bothered by multiple injuries this season to knee and shoulder. Given one block he can go all the way.

28 BOB "ROCKY" BLEIER 5-11, 185, Jr. Rushing: 50 carries for 229 yards and four TD's. Receiving: 14 catches for 193 yards, one TD. Flanked 75 per cent of the time. Has great speed and is a fine receiver. Runs well to the outside.

32 LARRY CONJAR 6-0, 212, Sr. Rushing: 82 carries for 427 yards and six TD's, average of 5.2 per carry. Average speed for a fullback, but a good, strong tackle runner.

Michigan State — Defensive lineups — Notre Dame

95 BUBBA SMITH 6-7, 283, Sr. Enormous physical specimen who can overpower blockers. Opponents have not run at him, and he might be tested early by Notre Dame. Puts pressure on the passer well, and has great speed for a big man.

61 CHARLES BAILEY 6-0, 208, So. Small, but quick and fast. A good pass rusher and solid tackler. Leads the defensive line in tackles.

55 PAT GALLINAGH 5-10, 214, Sr. Smart, tough player. Another good pass rusher, with quick reactions. The big rah-rah player on the team.

57 JEFF RICHARDSON 6-2, 253, Sr. One of most improved players from 1965 team. Extremely strong and fast. Was Big Ten heavyweight wrestling champ as a sophomore, and finished second in 1965. Has caught running backs from behind several times.

72 NICK JORDAN 6-1, 228, Jr. Another inexperienced player who has turned in solid performance on defensive line. Was hurt in sophomore year, and is playing first full year of ball.

36 PHIL HOAG 6-0, 208, Sr. Very small for a defensive end, but strong and quick. Most sweeps and wide runs will be to his side. Underrated performer who holds down the right side of the line.

41 CHARLIE THORNHILL 5-10, 204, Sr. Great linebacker with strength, speed, and good instinct. Crunching tackler who was a high school fullback. Leading the team in tackles with 86, and with Webster forms best linebacking corps in nation.

90 GEORGE WEBSTER 6-4, 212, Sr. Co-captain of Spartans, and one of country's great defensive backs. Is probably the nation's finest all-around athlete, with size, speed, and great football sense. Sure tackler, and team's best pass defender. A true superstar--could be the number one pro draft choice.

20 JIM SUMMERS 5-9, 179, Jr. Fastest man on the squad, sprints for track team off season. Can do 9.5 in the hundred. Small but tight pass defender, who is quick and hits hard. Sometimes gets overconfident, and might cover too close.

31 STERLING ARMSTRONG 5-9, 178, Jr. Another small speedster, who stings when he hits. Pushed senior Jerry Jones out of starting role midway through season. Capable of covering receivers tight, short or deep.

38 JESS PHILLIPS 6-0, 197, Jr. Another sprinter from the track team who ranks behind only Thornhill and Webster in tackles and hard hitting. Will safety blitz a good deal, especially in prevent sets. Likely to help handle coverage on Seymour deep.

87 TOM RHOADS 6-2, 220, Sr. Underrated star of the defense. Strong, quick and mean. He has been thrown out of two games this season.

64 PETE DURANKO 6-2, 235, Sr. Excellent speed and terrific reactions, a converted fullback. Has 64 tackles to his credit.

74 KEVIN HARDY 6-5, 270, Jr. Probably the best defensive tackle in college football. Smart student, great athlete. Top basketball player in winter. Tough pass rusher, a legitimate superstar.

81 ALAN PAGE 6-5, 238, Sr. An improved player from the 1965 season. Overpowers people, but has been blocked by backs. Has been putting on the big pass rush.

50 JOHN PERGINE 6-0, 210 Jr. Leads the team with five interceptions, and has made 78 tackles. Started the year at inside LB, but was moved to outside. Has speed, and is a good hitter.

61 JIM LYNCH 6-1, 225, Sr. Team captain. Great power and good reactions. Has instinct for diagnosing plays and is a team leader.

51 JOHN HORNEY 6-0, 210, Sr. Starter last season who had lost his job to Mike "Junior" McGill. Stepped back in when McGill was hurt. Has good quickness.

56 DAVE MARTIN 6-0, 210, Jr. The blitzing of the defensive line. A good man at putting the pressure on. Started as a sophomore in 1965, which is unusual on the Notre Dame defense.

40 TOM O'LEARY 5-10, 185, Jr. Usually covers the toughest deep receiver. Quick and smart. Has one interception, which he returned 35 yards for a TD.

25 JIM SMITHBERGER 6-1, 190, Jr. The hitter of the defensive backfield. A sure tackler who hurts people. Not outstandingly fast, but smart.

7 TOM SCHOEN 5-11, 178 Jr. A starting quarterback last year, converted to safety. Doesn't have great speed, but has terrific reactions and is a sure tackler. He will blitz once or twice a game. Also handles the punt return duties, and has returned 27 for 248 yards and one TD.

Gridiron frenzy hits peak

By ED BRILL
State News Sports Writer

There are some things in life you don't forget easily.

You don't forget it when you win a national championship, but you remember even longer when you lose one. When you go into the last game of the season undefeated, untied and unafraid; and when you come out with nothing but a bunch of press clippings and old wire service polls.

You don't forget it when the cup of honey is so close you can taste it, but somehow fate jerks it away at the last second.

Ara Parseghian remembers. So does Duffy Daugherty. And 80 football players who came so close, but missed by miles. They all remember how sweet it almost was -- to taste that national championship they never succeeded in winning.

In 1964 Notre Dame was the best team in the nation, 9-0, leading Southern California late in the fourth quarter of their last game. Then disaster struck, one short pass, and the great were just "good," losing 20-17.

On January 1, 1966, the Michigan State Spartans, hailed by some as the greatest team in football history, fell to the mortal ranks with a 14-12 Rose Bowl hearbreaker to U.C.L.A.

Saturday they meet. They collide, the two frustrated giants, in what has been billed as the greatest football of this, or perhaps any, decade.

Notre Dame, undefeated and untied, the top-ranked team in the country. Michigan State, winner of nine straight games and the Big Ten title, number two.

And though those two "big" losses don't show on the 1966 football ledger, you know they mean just as much as the seventeen combined wins. Neither team wants to lose a national championship again, and neither can really afford it.

"Rarely, if ever, have two teams had a better opportunity," says Duffy Daugherty, head coach of the Spartans.

THE GAME will be played at 1:30 in Spartan Stadium, and as many people as Bill Beardsley can possibly cram into the place will be looking on--some say over 80,000.

A TV audience from coast to coast and the largest press gathering ever for a football game give some indications of the frenzy that's focused on this game.

Notre Dame is both the highest scoring and least scored-against team in the major college football ranks today. They have amassed 301 points to their opponents 28 in eight games.

And Michigan State is another of those stingy, but high scoring squads. The Spartans ground defense has allowed just 47 yards a game, while the offense has rolled for an average rushing gain of 240.3.

There are tight match-ups at almost every position, but probably the key to the game lies in the success young Irish quarterback Terry Hanratty will have in throwing to sophomore end Jim Seymour.

These 'teen terrors' are long bomb specialists, hitting on seven

TD passes this season. And the MSU pass defense has been hard-pressed in recent weeks, allowing an average of 161.1 aerial yards per game.

The Fighting Irish defensive unit, which relies on an unusual 4-4 set, will present such obstacles as Kevin Hardy, Alan Page, John Pergine, and Jim Lynch to stop the Spartan attack.

Notre Dame has shut out five of its opponents, and has allowed an average offensive gain of just 175.5 yards per game.

Michigan State will throw stars such as Bubba Smith, Charlie

Thornhill, and George Webster at the Notre Dame offense.

Hanratty and Seymour have been the glamour boys of the Irish offense, but Larry Conjar and Nick Eddy as running backs, and linemen Tom Regner and George Goeddeke are big factors in the success of the air attack as well.

The Spartans will be relying on Clinton Jones to continue his great rushing form. Jones is the leading ground gainer in the game with 771 yards.

Parseghian feels pressure

EDITOR'S NOTE: Joe Mitch, a State News sports writer, attended Ara Parseghian's press conference at South Bend, Monday. Mitch was rebuked by the Notre Dame coach and banned from speaking to Notre Dame players for asking the question, "How do you plan to counter Michigan State's powerful defense."

By JOE MITCH

SOUTH BEND, Ind.--You could feel the tension and excitement mounting on the campus of the Notre Dame University this week as one strolled under the Irish's famed Golden Dome.

Students milled around the dormitories and classrooms, talking eagerly about Saturday's major college football battle between their No. 1 ranked Fighting Irish and No. 2 Michigan State at Spartan Stadium.

A gigantic red and white banner was strung from one residence hall to another. It said, "Duffy's Fate: Second Rate."

Another huge poster hung from a dorm behind Notre Dame's beautiful library. On it were ten ingredients for making a national championship. No. 9 read: A SPARTAN IN A FROZEN STATE.

Everywhere people were talking of the upcoming game--students, priests, cafeteria workers, groundskeepers. Even Notre Dame's coaching staff, headed by a young, vibrant Ara Parseghian, was caught in the rapid flow of questions from newspaper reporters.

"I really can't say if this is going to be a defensive battle like it was last year," Parseghian said in answer to one reporter's question. "You never know what's going to happen in a game like this."

"But I can say this much: It's going to be one of the top college games of the year. Both are ranked high, have impressive statistics, and of course are unbeaten."

Parseghian said that he would not approach this game any differently than any other game.

"The length of the practice sessions will remain about the same," he said, "although we may shorten Tuesday's and Wednesday's some. We do this as the season progresses."

With all of the advanced build up on the game being the top collegiate football duel of the past 25 years and one that could decide the national championship for either team, Parseghian said he didn't expect it to affect the younger players of his team.

"We feel they have the experience after going through eight games," he said. "They indicated poise even in the Purdue game which was on national television."

Parseghian, obviously strained under the pressure to prepare his team against a hard-nosed Spartan defense and an explosive scoring attack, displayed a violent temper when asked if he has found a weak point in the Spartans' defense through watching films and receiving scouting reports.

"You don't expect me to answer that, do you?" he roared. "That would be revealing our game plan."

Parseghian, instead, had praise for the Spartan defense, especially the play of All-Americans Bubba Smith, a 285-pounder at end, and George Webster, the 212-pound roverback.

"I thought last year's game was the finest defensive performance I have ever seen," Parseghian said. "Smith was putting a lot of pressure on us. But it wasn't Smith alone. He had help."

In that game, the Spartans held the Irish's awesome running attack to a total of a minus-12 yards and repeatedly threw Notre Dame's quarterback, Bill Zloch, for sizeable losses when he attempted to pass. MSU won the game, 12-3.

Parseghian said he felt the Spartans were using more variations in their defense this year than last.

"I see where they had a 6-1 front in the Indiana game," he said.

As for the Spartan offense, Parseghian said MSU has more team speed than a year ago and that its running game is just as strong.

"But the game films of the Indiana game shows errors in their running in the secondary," he said.

Parseghian called MSU's quarterback, Jimmy Raye, "one of the most underrated quarterbacks in the Big Ten."

"I don't know whoever got the idea that Michigan State has no passing attack," he said. "Raye passes exceptionally well and has good speed. They've been extremely successful with the long pass--they've been eating up big yardage."

"We consider them dangerous passingwise. And Raye will throw to anyone--Clinton Jones, Bob Aplsa, as well as their ends (Gene) Washington and (Al) Brenner."

Parseghian rated Washington and Brenner as about equal, but said that both were better than MSU's tight end of last year, Jim Probstle.

Parseghian said that his team will be at fuller strength than it was in the previous three games. He has sophomore split-end Jim Seymour ready to start his second straight game after missing two weeks with an ankle sprain.

Also ready will be halfback Nick Eddy, nursing a knee bruise, Tom Regner and Tom O'Leary, both with leg bruises.

The Irish were to arrive in Lansing Friday afternoon by bus after a brief practice session at Notre Dame in the morning.

STARTERS SPEAK

Spartan seniors share sentiments

By ART KLEIN
State News Staff Writer

The starting seniors on MSU's football team have become famous during their careers here.

Their names and pictures have appeared in everything from national newspapers to local bookstores.

Their last game is approaching however, and after this they will either become pros or their days as players are over.

What do these players feel they have gotten out of the game which has been such a large portion of their life?

Each of three players--Jerry West, Jeff Richardson and Gene Washington--has a somewhat different answer.

"The biggest thing I learned was the value of working hard and making sacrifices to achieve the goals that I want," West said.

"Another thing I learned is the necessity to work as a member of a team," said West, who has been singled out by Coach Duffy Daugherty as the Spartans' most outstanding offensive lineman. Richardson, a defensive lineman who was also Big 10 heavy-weight wrestling champion in his sophomore year, feels that the biggest thing he learned is how to get along with different types of people.

"There are so many different kinds of guys and when you are working closely with them as teammates you learn all about them and all about where they are from," he said.

Washington, who is a Big 10 hurdles champion as well as an All-American end, feels that the most lasting thing he has learned in football is to value close friendships.

All three of the players felt that there is a very close relationship between the difficulties a player runs into on the playing field and the problems he is forced to face in his daily life.

As Richardson put it, "When you are behind and you go into the locker room at the half knowing that you haven't played as well as you should have, you realize that you have to ignore the first half. You have to consider the score 0-0 and then go out in the second half and play to win."

Washington said, "There is no real difference between working with the other members of a football team and working with other employees in a company.

In each case you work as a team or you falter."

When asked whether or not all the work and sacrifice would still seem justified if he were playing on a losing team instead of a championship team, West referred back to his sophomore year when the team went 4-5.

"When we were losing, my attitudes toward the other players did not change, the feeling of closeness and unity were still there, but my attitudes toward the game of football did change.

"The practices seemed to drag out more and you are kind of down in the dumps, but under those conditions, when you win it means more to you."

Co-captains George Webster and Clint Jones pose with Coach Duffy Daugherty before their last game as Spartans. Webster and Jones, who have both been starters on the varsity squad since their sophomore year, join 10 other teammates in starting their last game on Saturday.

SIDELINES

ND tradition
vs. 'Moo-U'By LARRY WERNER
State News Sports Editor

The Notre Dame football team will arrive this afternoon. The famous Notre Dame football team, the nation's top-rated collection of college gridiron athletes is coming.

And the Irish have the world on their side. After all, they are Notre Dame. They are The Fighting Irish.

They have tradition on their side. Everyone has heard of Knute Rockne and "The Four Horsemen."

No sports fan is indifferent to Notre Dame. You either love them --or you hate them.

This week, most of the world loves them. I don't love them. In fact, this entire Notre Dame tradition bit tends to make me sick. But then I'm rooting for Michigan State, or as we are known down in South Bend, "Moo-U."

Notre Dame is favored to kill MSU Saturday afternoon--on the underdogs' gridiron. Saturday will be the first time this season that Michigan State has been an underdog.

It's not surprising that Notre Dame is favored. Some thought that the home-field would give the advantage to the "second-best" team in the country. But that old Notre Dame tradition has captured the odds for "Ara's Boys."

The Irish have two S's going for them: size and sentiment. Sentiment is why they get the edge, year after year.

Sentiment must be the reason that many picked the Irish in last year's game, despite the Spartans' No. 1 ranking.

There was also the "great poll mystery." After last season's bowl games, Notre Dame moved up a notch in a certain wire service poll, without playing a post-season game.

Many of the stories which have been rolling off the wire (labeled "game") are enough to make a Moo-U fan turn in his milking stool.

One particular piece stated that the Spartan offense "probably isn't as good as last year's unit," and that MSU quarterback Jimmy Raye "really isn't a passer."

If you've read the recent articles in Time and Sports Illustrated--and you bleed green and white like I do--you know exactly what I mean by this "sickening sentiment."

Notre Dame is the only school in the country whose "beautiful library" and "stately dome" become part of the team's offense in the pre-game stories.

The more you read, the sicker the sentiment gets. Terry Hanratty and Jim Seymour were "legends" after four games. They are "Teen Terrors," "Baby Bombers" and "the greatest passing combination in Notre Dame history."

Notre Dame has a tremendous image. The Irish have a great press. (In fact, the sports editor of the campus paper is one of Ara Parseghian's student managers.)

Our foes from South Bend have "class." The Rocknes, the Gippers and the Pietrosantes have immortalized the Fighting Irish in football.

We at Moo-U lack class. All we have is five All-Americans backed up by a host of outstanding football players.

It's a fact that Notre Dame has gone far on its reputation. It is also a fact that they have gone far enough.

Spartan freshman squad
keyed to take on IrishBy NORM SAARI
State News Sports Writer

While most eyes focus upon tomorrow's championship game, one group of men are keyed for the gridiron tonight.

The Spartan freshman team, after defeating Indiana last week (25-13) take on a mammoth Notre Dame squad tonight. Notre Dame beat Pittsburgh last weekend, 29-0. The two teams meet tonight at 7:45 on the East Lansing High School field.

Spartan coach Ed Rutherford said he was "very pleasantly surprised with the Indiana game."

"We may have started the game flat," he said, "and I'd certainly like to get a faster start against the Notre Dame team."

"The boys on the freshman team make a big adjustment between high school and college life, and some still need more time and experience to make this adjustment," he said.

"Every boy that made the trip to Indiana played during the game," he added.

Quarterback Jack Pitts from Decatur, Ga. led the frosh team throwing three touchdown passes.

Pitts explains his passing ability in modest terms: "The offensive line gave me real good blocking, and if you have enough time to throw, you're supposed to hit the receivers. They were open and I just threw to them."

Pitts connected with Lamarr Thomas for 51 yards, and Frank Foreman for seven- and 34-yard scores.

Cal Fox recovered a Hoosier fumble in the end zone for the other Spartan score.

Spirits were high during the game. Standout defensive tackle Tody Smith was ejected late in the second half.

"I never experienced so much ignorance in my life," Tody said. "They were all foul-mouthed."

"I gave the guy a good forearm, and the referee called a penalty and kicked me out."

Speaking of the Notre Dame game, Smith said it would be a "battle of pride."

"Nobody on the frosh team has any love for Notre Dame."

Notre Dame tried recruiting 21 of the 26 players MSU signed on athletic tenders.

The Irish frosh, coached by Wally Moore, is rated as big or bigger at each position than the varsity.

Defensively, they are led by Mike McCoy, 6-5, 270 pounds; Bob Jockisch, 6-3, 260 pounds; Jay Ziznewski, 6-7, 250 pounds; on the line and Vito Racanealli, 6-1, 210 pounds at linebacker.

On the offensive squad, Jeff Zimmerman, 6-1, 205; Ed Ziegler, 6-1, 213 and Tom Nash, 6-1, 225 lead the backfield.

Notre Dame reports they are at full physical strength. MSU's

Helmut Goral and Cliff Hardy, who both were injured in the Indiana game, will be ready along with Bob Miltenberger, a fullback who was held out last week because of a knee injury.

Admission for the frosh game tonight is $1 for adults, 50¢ for MSU students and students of high school age. IDs will be checked at the gate.

National TV

Although the "Game" was originally scheduled as a regional broadcast by the American Broadcasting Corporation, vigorous demands by sports fans all over the country have forced the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) and ABC into a national telecast.

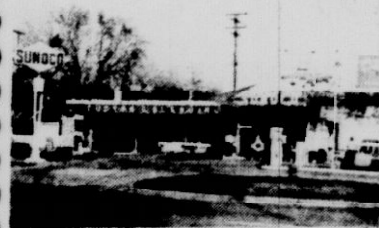

The entire country will see MSU play Notre Dame Saturday, but some parts of the U.S. must be satisfied with a video tape showing.

Nuns at Center loyal to Spartans

Eagerly awaiting Saturday's game between No. 1-ranked Notre Dame and No. 2-ranked MSU are Sisters Ancilla, Marcell, Cormier and Daniel, Sisters of Charity at St. John Student Parish. All have followed football since childhood and enjoy it immensely.

Serving as spokesman for the foursome, Sister Daniel said "We all taught school and had to be interested in football or the students wouldn't respect us."

"I came from a family of seven brothers; I had to like football," Sister Cormier added.

Through their work at St. John Catholic Student Center the sisters have met many Spartan stars including Clinton Jones, Gene Washington, Bob Apisa, Dick Kenney and Pat Gallinagh. Many players attend religious services at the center Saturday mornings and can often be found watching the Sunday afternoon professional games at the sisters' convent across from the student center.

Following Mass' one Sunday morning last fall, Sister Daniel told Coach Duffy Daugherty, "Clinton Jones reminds me a lot of Whizzer White (former All-American from Colorado). From that time on Duffy knew I was a football fan," she said.

The sisters said they receive many curious looks from people when attending games. "People can't believe nuns would be interested in football," chuckled Sister Daniel.

Following last year's victory at South Bend, a smiling Sister Daniel was approached by a priest from Notre Dame. "What are you so happy about?" he asked. "Because we won," she replied.

"Religion is not a factor in determining whom we root for," said Sister Daniel. They all agreed that the school and town with which they are associated determines their loyalty. "It would not be right to cheer for Notre Dame when we know MSU's coach and players and live in East Lansing," said Sister Daniel.

Sister Daniel said Jones told her after last year's Rose Bowl defeat that the team learned a lesson and will prove to the nation this year that it deserves to be No. 1.

"There may be a little feuding this week because Jim Seymour, Notre Dame's star end, was a former pupil of our sisters in Berkley, and they will be pulling for Notre Dame," Sister Daniel said.

"My brother, a priest, is coming from Colorado and will be rooting for Notre Dame. I'm sure we will have a few differences in opinion."

The sisters describe Jimmy Raye as a "clever fellow." "You never know whether he is going to run or pass," they added.

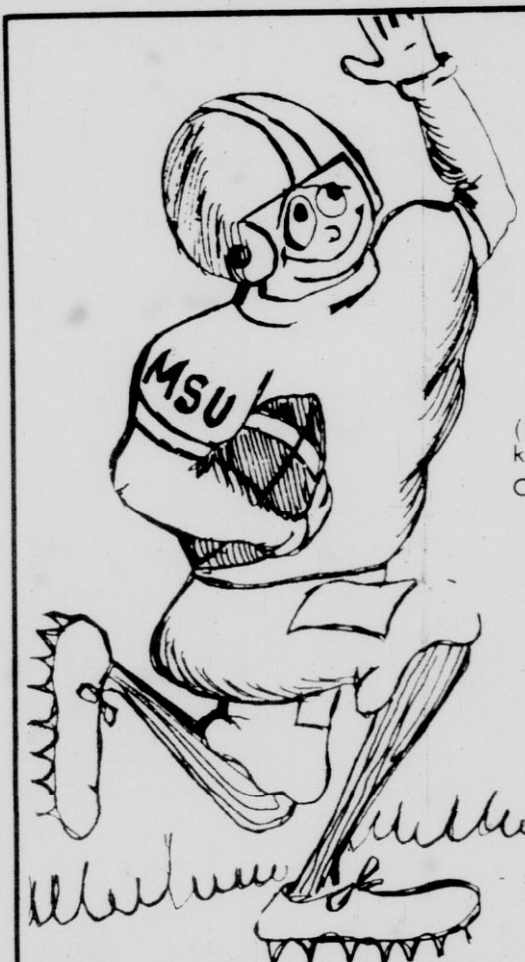

They attend all home games and believe there is no comparison to viewing the game on TV and actually attending. "You just can't feel the excitement as much when you watch it on TV," Sister Daniel commented. The women said, too, that they watch the Bump and Duffy Show each Sunday evening.

Because of their extreme interest, they said they ask Duffy many questions about various plays and penalties and are learning more about the game each week.

"It will be close, but I'm sure we'll win," the sisters concluded.

FOUR SISTERS from St. John's Student Parish await the big game between the Spartans and the Irish this Saturday. They are avid fans and friends of many of the football players.

PLAY AKRON

MSU Booters in tourney

By DENNIS CHASE

Associate Sports Editor

Michigan State's soccer team, well-rested after an 8-0-1 season, starts the first round of the NCAA preliminaries Saturday. It plays the University of Akron here at 10 a.m.

After a 1-1 tie at St. Louis Nov. 5 to end the regular season, Coach Gene Kenney gave the team a week off to study, then started workouts again last Monday.

Kenney has been rough on the boys this week. His biggest problem is keeping their minds on a team they whipped 4-1 earlier in the year.

Akron lost two games in the season, to the Spartans and to Pittsburgh, 1-0.

The Spartans have a 5-0 record against Akron in a series which started in 1962. The scores have been relatively close: 6-4, 3-0, 5-0, 5-2 and 4-1.

In the Oct. 17 contest, the Spartans trailed the Zips 1-0 in the first period on a goal by Jim Fonte from Hassan Ahmadi. Fonte beat second string goalie Joe Baum, and it marked the only time in the season that the Spartans had trailed in a game.

Forty-mile-per hour winds, and the fact that leading scorer Guy Busch and goalie Kevin O'Connell were out with injuries (O'Connell played the second half) made it uncertain whether the Spartans would get their fifth straight win.

But Tony Keyes scored his ninth, 10th and 11th goals and Tom Kreft added another to sew up a hard fought victory.

"Both teams missed numerous opportunities," Kenney said after the game.

For the preliminaries, the team is in fair shape. Pete Hens' achilles tendon, aggravated in St. Louis, is still bothering him and Tom Kreft's knee has been slow in responding to treatment. Manny Ruscheinski, who broke his leg before the season began, has not seen any action so far. But he worked out for the past two weeks and Kenney expects him to see limited duty.

Neither Hens nor Kreft participated in the practice scrimmages this week.

"Any team plays better in the playoffs," Kenney said. "This is a one shot elimination, so Akron will feel no hesitation about shooting the works. They have nothing to lose.

"And they missed a lot of opportunities the last time we played."

There are 16 teams in the preliminary round. After this Saturday there will be eight, and after Nov. 26 there will be four. Those four will be eligible to go to Berkeley, Calif. for the finals.

If the Spartans win Saturday, it is likely they'll go to the East Coast to play the winner in that division.

South Bend 'blues'

By MIKE GROSSMAN

The fearless Greens from Lansing town
Charged out upon the field.
The fans hurray'd and waved the air,
And swore Parseghian 'd yield.

The giant Greens were ready. For
The kickoff they did wait,
Till Kenney's toe-kir-smacked the ball,
And sent it out the gate.

The Fearing Irish looked aghast.
When Kenney kicked they covered.
Then huddled round, they tried to plan
A play that'd overpower.

A pass attempt on the first down,
The call was whispered then,
But speedy Summers sensed the same,
And slyly stole it when

The ball was thrown -- and sharply too --
It would have reached a Blue,
Had not Jim Summers intervened,
And scored for MSU.

"Chalk up 7 on the boards,"
The cry went through the crowd.
Parseghian tore his hair and cried,
And whimpered right out loud.

Determination drove the Dames
To our forty-five,
Till Webster wrought down seven men
And ate them up alive.

Twenty-three they lost that play,
Still Webster called "Again!"
The ball was snapped, the Dames dispelled
As Bubba lunched on them.

The afternoon was quite a day.
For Jimmy Raye 'twas easy
To slip and slam and pass past men,
Cause Jimmy's super-griese.

"Substitutions from the bench!"
Parsegian rose and cried.
But there were none, they'd snuck you see
Up in the stands to hide.

As quarters went the Spartans shined,
The Irish showed no flair,
The scoreboard broke. It couldn't hold
No more than nines -- a pair.

At least the press,
The UPI and AP know it's true,
That MSU is No. 1
And Notre Dame but two.

"Determination drove the
Dames
To our forty-five,
Till Webster wrought down seven men
And ate them up alive"

Ken Earley has gridders 'geared'

There is a lot behind the Saturday afternoon Spartan football players, both physically and emotionally.

And there is one man who makes it his job to protect them, Ken Earley, the head equipment manager.

He has been with the Spartan football teams since 1954 and, next to Head Coach Duffy Daugherty, probably knows the current football set-up here better than anyone else.

Often, he is approached in private by a player who wants his advice as a doctor. "I have to use psychology on them," Earley says. "I have no medical background, so when they ask for advice, I have to tell them to talk with someone more qualified, but at the same time I try to help them myself."

Earley makes it clear he is the equipment manager and not the doctor.

"My job is to make sure the equipment is just right. After every game, all the equipment is checked over to make sure nothing is broken or cracked. That's how a lot of injuries happen, through broken equipment."

"At the games," he said, "I'm on the sideline and am easily accessible to spare parts. Sometimes a strap on a shoulder pad will break and it has to be repaired before the officials call a time out. I make it a practice to tape any broken equipment during a game that doesn't need a new part right away."

Earley explains each player wears from $130 to $150 worth of game equipment and uniform, with the figure higher for linemen.

He noted one exception here, Dick Kenney, who wears about $100 worth. Kenney wears soccer shoes (when he wears them), hockey shoulder pads, and no thigh pads or face mask.

Each player has two helmets, one for practice and the other for the game, and eight jerseys. He has two complete sets of jerseys in each color, one for hot weather and the other for cold weather.

On the current fiscal inventory, the varsity has $55,000 worth of gear. Earley said he operates on a $25,000 yearly budget for equipment.

He is assisted by four students and Martin Daly, who handles the freshman gear.

Earley speaks highly of the players this year, calling them "as nice a group of guys a guy could ask for."

"At Notre Dame last year, the players were mad when they returned to the locker room before the game and the South Bend crowd was yelling they were No. 1.

"The team came back out and showed who was No. 1 and took some of the cockiness out of the crowd.

"They respect Notre Dame."

Equipment manager Ken Earley adjusts a helmet in preparation for the upcoming clash with Notre Dame. Earley has been with the Spartans since 1954.

By ROBERTA YAFIE
State News Sports Writer

Sometimes the hero just doesn't get the girl.

That was the way things stood in 1945, when Illinois met Northwestern in their traditional end-of-the season game.

Prior to the game, the staffs of both student newspapers had conceived "Sweet Sioux," a wooden Indian.

The Illini won the contest, 13-7, but they never got the girl. The following September, "Sioux" was stolen from her showcase home at Evanston.

The poor girl never turned up, and so the "Sweet Sioux" Tomahawk, named in her honor and, perhaps, memory, was inaugurated in 1947, and has been the symbol of victory in the series since.

Saturday, there's nothing that Illinois and Northwestern would rather do than bury the tomahawk in each other's heads. The Illini have moved into third place in the conference and have a 4-2 record. Their season's mark is 4-5, and Pete Elliot's boys would like, after a so-so start, to break even this year.

Northwestern's chances aren't quite so pleasant. The Wildcats are deadlocked in seventh place with Wisconsin and Indiana at 1-4-1, and are 2-6-1 on the season.

The Illinois-Northwestern set-to is but one of many trophy games this weekend.

Michigan State had a jump on the rest of the conference, earning the right to wear the Big Ten crown another year after completing a perfect 7-0 season with a 37-19 win over Indiana.

The Spartans will be back for more Saturday, this time the mythical national championship and the Megaphone Trophy, co-sponsored by the Michigan State and Notre Dame Alumni Clubs of Detroit.

Purdue, although it's not yet official, won itself a trip to the Rose Bowl last weekend by shutting out Minnesota, 16-0, for the second straight year.

If the Boilermakers are going to be gathering roses this winter, what better vase for them than the Old Oaken Bucket? That's what's up for grabs when they welcome Indiana at Lafayette.

Purdue is in second place in the conference, 5-1 and 7-2. The Hoosiers are buried in the seventh spot, along with Wisconsin and Northwestern, at 1-4-1. They're 1-7-1 on the year.

If quarterbacks Bob Griese and Frank Stavroff decide to take to the air, they may have to get clearance from the local airfield.

Stavroff passed for 316 yards last weekend, for a new Big Ten record. The old mark was 310, set by Iowa's Gary Snook in 1964 against Purdue.

Minnesota and Wisconsin lock horns in their traditional finale game, this time at Madison.

Minnesota lost its chance, however faint, at the Rose Bowl last week with its loss to Purdue. The Gophers' Big Ten record is 3-2-1, 4-4-1 in all games. Wisconsin is 2-6-1 on the year.

Ohio State and Michigan, tied in fifth place at 3-3, will be battling for advancement at Columbus. The Wolves are 5-4 on the season, while the Bucks are 4-4 in all games.

NEEDS GROWTH

Spartan Stadium squeeze at limit

Squeeze plays of a football variety are becoming common at Spartan Stadium. When teams like Michigan or Notre Dame come to town, many fans find their seats trimmed to 16 inches.

Since that's the limit of the capacity stretching gimmicks, thoughts are starting to turn to another expansion of the Spartans' home.

With the University's ever-increasing enrollment, Spartan Stadium's 76,000 seating capacity will be needing comparable increases.

Additions are nothing new to the stadium. The first structure was erected in 1922, seating 14,000. In 1935, the capacity was brought up to 26,000 and was officially named Macklin Field.

Spartan Stadium came into its own in 1948, when another addition brought the seating to 51,000. More seats were built in 1956 (9,000) and 1957, the latter date heralding the upper decks and enlarged press facilities.

When you look at the figures involved, that eight-dollar fee seems a pittance. The '56 addition ran $43 per seat. The next building project hiked the going rate to $130 per seat; the jump due in some part to the inclusion of the press box.

It's estimated that if more seating capacity were provided, the cost would run $100 a seat. Biggie Munn, MSU Director of Athletics, has just such a plan in mind.

"We have a thought in mind of taking the second deck and bringing it around the south end," Munn said. "This would increase the seating capacity to a little over 88,000."

If the plans were to go into effect, 10 tennis courts would have to be removed, according to Munn. He indicated that he would like to move them to the Fee-

Akers area, where they could be equipped with lights.

The only big problem is money.

"Money would have to come from the Athletic Dept.," he noted, "and we don't have the funds to do it. We'd have to borrow most of it."

"If the steel and other materials could be secured this winter," Munn remarked, "it could be ready by next fall."

Increased enrollment is but part of the problem. Alumni and the general public figure heavily into the plans as well, as illustrated by the ticket sales for Saturday's game.

Student football ticket card sales this year figured to 29,000. There were 26,000 season ticket books sold. Notre Dame received 10,000 tickets for the game, leaving 11,000 for alumni and general sale.

Presently, there are a total of 91,727 alumni all over the country and world. Of this figure, 55,289 are in Michigan.

Munn said that with the schedules that have been set up for future seasons, the demand will be increasingly great, and looks to expeditious action.

was sidelined with a knee injury the last two weeks, should be a ready and in top shape for the game. Apisa leads the team in scoring with 54 points.

Quarterback Jimmy Raye, who is just one shy of the MSU season touchdown mark with 10, will be throwing to receivers Gene Washington and Al Brenner.

It could be an offensive explosion. It could be a defensive tug of war. But whatever it is, it promises to be great.

Special cheers for rally tonight

"Stew the Irish" . . . "Tame the Dames" . . . "Make Irish Stew," these and other special Irish chants will be introduced at tonight's pep rally on Landon field. Michigan State's 12 cheerleaders will lead the crowd in cheers for Saturday's foot-game with No. 1-ranked Notre Dame.

"School spirit is down from last year," said Gary Hampel, Mayville senior and squad captain. "The students seem to cheer only when the team is moving or when they are in a tough situation."

Hampel and other squad members attribute the drop in school spirit to the fact that they won't be able to play in next year's Rose Bowl.

Spartan cheerleaders expect the spirit at Saturday's game to be the best this year.

"A victory will give us a perfect season record, and will no doubt return our No. 1 rating," said Bill Risto, St. Joseph junior.

Highlights of tonight's pep assembly, sponsored by Union Board, will be a skit performed by the cheerleaders to the tune of the song "Leader of the Pack," and a song about the "Irish and Notre Dame."

Students are encouraged to take anything appropriate to tonight's rally and Saturday's game, said Terry Mitter, Taylor junior. Kristin Powell, Okemos sophomore, said "Pom poms, signs and posters will be used to display our spirit and to let the team know we are behind them all the way."

Cheerleaders will be in all sections of campus recruiting enthusiastic fans to the rally, according to Mitter. "This will be the seniors' last game," Hampel said.
