Full Med School Bid Goes To State Board

Expansion of MSU's existing two-year medical school into a degree-granting four-year institution was recommended to the State Board of Education by the Citizens Committee on Health Care Tuesday.

The committee, established by the state board last year, said the two-year school should be expanded so students now enrolled at MSU could complete their training without transferring to another institution.

"Development of a medical center in the university will greatly strengthen the existing education programs for the allied health professions and will enable the university to add to such programs and improve their quality," the committee told the state board.

The state board will receive the committee's report at its Nov. 29-30 meeting. Andrew Hunt, dean of the College of Human Medicine, said a great deal of work and planning as to how the University will build a university hospital, classrooms and laboratories, and how community hospitals would work with the university, have been made in the past.

Hunt expressed hopes that the board would approve "as early as possible" the report, and would recommend expansion of MSU to "a degree granting four-year institution."

Warren Huff, chairman of the Board of Trustees, called the news "top drawer." "This is something we have been working on for five years," he said.

The report and the recommendations applying to MSU have the full endorsement of the citizens committee, Huff said.

He said it was of importance to note that the recommendation also has the full concurrence of MSU's sister institutions, Wayne State University and the University of Michigan.

Provost Howard R. Neville said he was very pleased with the recommendations by the committee.

"Our hope is that it (the State Board of Education) will approve the report as submitted and recommend to the governor and the legislature that the program be inaugurated as soon as possible."

Neville said a formal proposal for a four-year medical school at MSU was submitted to the state board in July.

Funds for medical school would come from the legislature.

"In the best of all possible worlds," Neville said, "the board would approve the report and recommend to the governor and legislature that a four-year program begin at MSU."

Neville added that ideally the governor would in January recommend that an initial appropriation be made to MSU for operations and planning.

The nine-member committee headed by Michigan Supreme Court Justice Otis Swift, also said the state of Michigan will need a minimum of 590 places for first-year medical students within 10 years. It said the state's two four-year schools now have places for 325.

It said the University of Michigan should "consider expansion of its capacity by 50 additional first-year places by 1976, bringing its total to 260."

Michigan sought a total of 250 more medical doctors this year, the committee said, adding Michigan ranks below the top one-third of states in the ratio of first-year medical students to population.

Michigan had 123 doctors per 100,000 population in 1964, compared with the national ratio of 143 per 100,000, it added.

Hitch-hiking banned for 90 days

By BEVERLY HALL
State News Staff Writer

A new no-hitch-hiking traffic control ordinance in East Lansing will make getting to class even more difficult than ever for sorority girls living on Harrison Road.

The ordinance, announced at the city council's meeting Monday, will be in effect for at least 90 days, until City Council either approves or rejects it permanently.

Sorority women expressed their views to council members, and gave three reasons that hitch-hiking should continue to be allowed.

"First," said Susan Spencer, 305 N. Harrison Rd., "the people who pick us up aren't strangers. It's usually the same people who pick up the same girls every morning."

She also pointed out that since drivers must stop at the Harrison Road-Grand River Avenue light anyway, there is no real traffic tie-up or hazard involved.

The problem of children being influenced by this "poor example," she said, could be alleviated if the reasons girls hitch-hike to campus were made clear to the youngsters.

3 vigil representatives may attend Board of Trustees meeting today

By ANDREW MOLLISON
State News Executive Reporter

President John A. Hannah asked the Board of Trustees Tuesday to let representatives from the students conducting a vigil in Bessey Hall address the board at its monthly meeting this morning. Last night the vigilers began briefing their representatives and planning a silent "no signs" sympathy demonstration outside Kellogg Center, where the board will meet.

If Hannah's recommendation is accepted by the board, the students hope to convince its members to take two steps:

1. Delay a decision on recommendations from the ATL advisory committee, the dean of University College and the Provost that W. Gary Groat, Ken Lawless and Robert S. Fogarty not be re-hired when their contracts expire next summer.

2. Refer the matter back to the Dept. of American Thought and Language for review and reconsideration.

W. C. Blanton, a spokesman for United

Students, asked Hannah Tuesday if three representatives could address the Trustees, and Hannah said he would relay their request, with a recommendation that it be approved, when he met informally with the trustees Tuesday night.

Blanton, Chris Leveridge and Doug Brunger are slated to be the three representatives. Blanton's suggestion that ASMSU, the official student governing body, also be invited to speak did not receive an enthusiastic reception, he reported.

It is possible that an ASMSU Student Board member will replace one of the three representatives previously selected.

ASMSU adopted a resolution even stronger than that of the students conducting the vigil. The vigilers, who plan to end their eight-day vigil at 8:30 this morning when they walk to Kellogg, adopted a three-point program reading:

1. The instructors, if not the student body, should be given reasons why they were fired.

2. If none are given, the advisory committee should reverse its decision.

3. The AAUP statement asking the ATL committee to reconsider its decision should be implemented.

The "no signs, no chants" demonstration of sympathy outside Kellogg is scheduled for 9:30 to 11 a.m. United Students spokesmen predicted that although this is a peak class period, at least 200 students would attend.

France blasts 'two-Chinas', wants Peking admission only

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — France urged the U.N. General Assembly Tuesday to admit the Chinese Communists and expel the Chinese Nationalists without regard to Peking's attitude toward the world organization.

French Ambassador Roger Seydoux rejected as unrealistic an Italian proposal for a high level study of the 16-year-old Chinese representation problem that would explore Peking's attitude toward joining the United Nations.

This was in sharp opposition to the stand taken by the United States to keep the door closed to Peking, but to support the study.

Seydoux asserted that the presence of Peking in the United Nations is vital to

Franco proposal offers a liberalized monarchy

MADRID — Gen. Francisco Franco, Spain's dictator for 27 years, offered the nation Tuesday a new law designed to set up a liberalized monarchy when the aging caudillo steps down.

Franco, who will be 74 Dec. 4, made his proposals in a 52-minute address to the Cortes-Parliament which was approved by them at once by acclamation. This opened the way for a national referendum expected to be held Dec. 14.

Franco's proposals would broaden popular representation and open the doors to his own succession by a king or royal regent when death or age forces his retirement.

The program, ranging from succession to assurances of religious liberty, appeared to be aimed toward political liberalism. But Franco stubbornly resisted the admission of political parties as part of the plan.

"Every country must solve the question of democracy in its own way. With us, a genuine, orderly, and effective democracy excludes political parties," he said.

Franco's speech made no mention of a specific successor, but his project detailed changes and amplification of the law of succession which restored a monarchy to Spain.

On succession, he proposed that if the post of chief of state becomes vacant through death or incapacity, the three-man Council of Regency must take over these powers, and within three days announce to a meeting of the National Cabinet and Council of the Realm a nominee of royal blood who must, if qualified, be approved by two-thirds of those present.

If this proposal is not accepted, the Council of the Realm and the Cabinet must make a second proposal of a nominee to become king. If, in the judgment of those meeting, there is no person of royal origin who meets all conditions of law they must propose to the Cortes a regent to take over the powers of chief of state, setting the term and conditions of such a regency.

Academic Council gets revised freedom report

By FAYE UNGER
State News Staff Writer

The revised academic freedom report is now plunged into the next round of discussion and revision, this time within the Academic Council and the standing faculty committees.

In minutes sent out Tuesday for the Nov. 8 meeting of the Academic Council, William H. Combs, dean of University Services and secretary of the council, outlined suggestions for discussion at both the Nov. 8 meeting and the next meeting Dec. 6.

The council is waiting for all "matters of controversy" to be brought forward before setting up a procedure to deal with them.

The academic freedom report should deal with students' rights in relation to medical care, Hilliard Jason, director of the office for medical education research and development, suggested to the council.

In its statements on rights, the academic freedom report might be making promises a developing university may not always be able to meet, said Paul M. Hurrell, associate professor of philosophy.

(The right to competent and fair instruction is such a promise, said Combs. If the legislature ever cuts appropriations severely enough, the University might not be able to provide enough instructors. The enrollment could not be cut quickly enough, he added.)

President John A. Hannah offered four suggestions:

(1) The statement on rights, responsibilities and behavior of students should cover areas beyond the classroom.

(2) Matters of detail should go to the proposed ombudsman wherever possible.

(3) Rules on student conduct should have the approval of the vice president for student affairs.

(4) The section on the State News and other student publications should provide a more realistic approach to the responsibilities for and management of these organs.

Leo A. Martin, chairman of the department of Television and Radio, also asked that the report define legally the University's responsibility for student publications.

As the academic freedom report set up the State News organization, there is no control over the editor-in-chief similar to that between publisher and editor on most papers, Martin said.

REGENTS 'IN TROUBLE'

Nearly 4,000 protest 'M' sit-in ban

By MIKE BROGAN
State News Staff Writer

ANN ARBOR — The Board of Regents at the University of Michigan is in the trouble spotlight again. Nearly 4,000 students jammed into Hill Auditorium Monday night to protest an administration ruling to ban sit-ins.

They also spoke out against the University's refusal to accept a recent student referendum against the compilation of class rankings for draft boards.

The student group met for three hours before deciding to:

--Demand that the administration abrogate the sit-in rule and accept the student referendum as binding.

--To set a Nov. 29 deadline for an administration response to the proposals.

--To hold a rally on the campus diagonal to coincide with the administration deadline.

--To exert sanctions in the event the administration does not accept the demands.

--To leave channels open for further action based on any administration response.

The sanctions accepted by the students include moving the rally, scheduled for Nov. 29 at noon, to the front steps of the Administration Building. They will then sit-in quietly in the lobbies and hallways of the Administration Building but not the offices, during the lunch hour.

In breaking off relations last week, the Student Government Council (SGC) contended that the administration should consult with student and faculty representatives on such matters rather than act arbitrarily.

Ed Robinson, SGC president, said at the onset of the meeting that "the issue with which we are concerned is the relationship of the students to the administration."

Marvin Niehuss of the administration told the students that issues at the University are not new. He said in the past "change has come about through rational suggestion, debate and discussion and not through ultimatum and demands."

Repression again

The University of Michigan, with all its reputation for liberality, sophistication and tolerance, has recoiled in alarm from the idea that students should have something to say about policies affecting students.

Trouble started when the university banned sit-ins that would interfere with university processes. It geared the result of a referendum on whether the university should compile class standings for draft boards.

The Student Government Council (SGC) broke relations with U-M because the ban was not rescinded.

Echoing those who turned Mario Savio into a hero, U-M President Harlan Hatcher said in reference to sit-ins, "We just cannot have that kind of thing here."

Richard M. Cutler, vice president of student affairs, intimated that the ban would stay in effect until the students saw things U-M's way: "until the general climate here changes, this kind of regulation is necessary."

Having attempted to repress sit-ins, the university went on to deny the issue. Hatcher said, "I just do not see that there is an issue here about consulting students. My concept of SGC's role is that it aids the administration in making rules that affect them."

In accepting such student aid while remaining deaf to the student voice, U-M has shunned its old reputation of liberality and tolerance and taken on one of repression and contradiction.

Infamous efficiency

At times we are sincerely thankful that the old AUGS type of student government Congress was done away with and the new ASMSU corporation-like student board set-up in its place.

At its first meeting, the ASMSU General Assembly, a body quite similar to the old Congress except that it advises only, asked the student board to request an explanation of the ATL dismissals.

At its next meeting, the board did just that--it requested explanations.

So, last week, the General Assembly went full-cycle and passed a resolution supporting the board's resolution--a resolution they had originally called for.

It was this type of efficiency that made the old Student Congress infamous.

'Scalper' hits police action

To the Editor:

I am the coed who was arrested on a scalping charge. I have just returned from paying the fine for my crime. I write to you for two reasons.

(1) I wish to inform the students of Michigan State of the proper legal method of selling football tickets.

(2) I feel the students of Michigan State have a right to know something about the police force that supposedly protects them.

To sell a football ticket legally, you personally must not quote any price higher than the general admission price. However, you can accept offers of any amount of money for the ticket. You must merely make it clear to the party buying the ticket that you are charging only $5.00 for the ticket, but they are freely offering you more. They may be committing a crime by purchasing the ticket at a cost over the genuine admission price, but you are legally not responsible.

I was not aware of the technicalities involved in selling football tickets. I placed an ad in the State News to sell three Notre Dame football tickets and received a call from an Oldsmobile executive desperately wishing to buy my tickets for clients. He asked me to quote him a price, unknowingly I did so. The Oldsmobile executive was a police officer who contrived a very believable story to trap me.

He knew that I was not aware that the act of quoting him a price was illegal, yet this man, a police officer, whose duty it is to protect the law, literally helped me to break it. I feel only sympathy and pity for a police force who finds it necessary to contrive plots to trap unsuspecting persons on technicalities.

Perhaps we should all commit more crimes so that our police force will be able to put their time to more profitable use than that of helping people break the law!

Who is immature?

To the Editor:

I found the comments of Associate Professor West (Nov. 16), member of the ATL advisory committee, most enlightening as to the reason behind the committee's decision concerning the rehiring of Groat, Fogarty, and Lawless. To quote Mr. West's letter: "We're trying to get rid of some of the children, partly because they kept stealing all our toilet paper to throw at cops and old ladies, but mainly because a lot of us don't want students taught by people who are immature, snobbish, narrow, and intolerant."

Reasons such as these, the only reasons publicly stated by any committee member, make me wonder just who it is in this case who is "immature, snobbish, narrow, and intolerant."

More feeble fables on the ATL issue

This is the second part of a five part point of view series by Bob Baldori on the dismissals in the ATL Dept.

Yesterday I discussed three points concerning the ATL firings in the light of reliable but ignored facts. Today, three more.

4. Fablelogy suggests that all three instructors are generally considered to be among the best-trained people in the department, or, at least, among the group of instructors generally better-trained because its members were trained to teach what they are teaching, not freshman comp.

Here the argument glibly passes over one of the most significant points of the whole harangue. It asserts as fact a statement, the very falseness of which is claimed by the advisory committee and Chairman Strandness to be a central reason for their decision.

That is, the instructors are not considered by the people in the department to be among the best trained people in the department.

No one in ATL is trained in teaching "freshman comp" with historical overtones. All but a few of the tenured professors in the ATL department have Ph.D.'s in fields relating to American Studies. The few exceptions have Ph.D.'s in speech with majors and training related to ATL.

The instructors are not trained to the degree of Ph.D. in any subject, and the point here is training.

In what specific ways are the instructors "better-trained" or "among the best trained people in the department." I submit that to rank among the best trained people in the department, the advisory committee being a specific example, these instructors have a good ten years of education and experience to go.

That is not my only point. Another is that the assertion made about the instructors is taken for fact without examination and research, in fact almost at their word, when we have the advisory committee's word and facts to indicate the opposite.

Over-hired?

5. Another fable suggests that the ATL Dept. over-hired. It holds that the department entered last year with half a dozen too many people and immediately began tightening up on encouragement of dissent.

The facts are, as can be attested to by anybody in the department, that the department underestimated the student boom, underhired, and was caught short-handed. They are still using pick-up people to teach courses.

All the more reason to keep these men, you might say. Exactly, if they were doing the best job.

The fable has it that they were boat-rockers in a crowded boat and had to be expelled. The crowded boat theory flies in the face of fact. I shall discuss the "boat-rocking" theory later.

6. One more serious refutation. It has been claimed that the chairman does not allow free discussion of all the names up for tenure.

He presents a brief list of those not insured of renewal, and then, the theory holds, watches the vote as carefully as he feels necessary in each instance, breaking ties or even voting initially when he wishes to do so.

The facts are that Strandness submitted a list, brief, perhaps, but long enough to include all 15 names of the untenured people in the department, to each member of the advisory committee.

The committee was then asked to indicate by marking which names they thought should be discussed for possible release. This was done and through common consensus, at least three names, perhaps more, were picked.

The implication that the chairman unethically influences the selection of names to be discussed or the final decision on them (secret ballot counted by Henry Silverman, ass't. professor of ATL and committee member) is denied by the facts gathered from discussing these points with all concerned.

False information

Other false pieces of information exist. They get more and more trivial.

Ann Ridgeway resigned previous to the committee's even meeting, and this has been turned into a subtle bit of propaganda by the inference that their decision caused her resignation. (State News, Nov. 15.)

Nobody really knows who voted how in the committee. Much conjecture; no fact. As I said, it was a secret ballot with results being counted by Silverman.

Groat is crudely staging a smear campaign against Strandness's mental health, going so far as to imply at a public meeting (Tues. Nov. 15th; 8 p.m., 32 Union, United Students) that the decision was made during a diabetic seizure.

He neglected to mention the known fact that this decision was not made in an instant, but over a long period of time and more than one meeting. Also the obvious that there were six other "reasonably" intelligent men in the room. Perhaps they were busy discovering their inner divinity with LSD.

Monday:

The Groat is a mythical beast.

Swamped

We received so many letters on the ATL controversy that all of them could not be printed. Space simply would not permit it.

We tried to print at least one letter expressing each of the main viewpoints.

But those letters not printed will be seen.

The large stack of unprinted letters will be given to the Board of Trustees at their meeting today.

TRINKA CLINE

The thoughtful university

Hall! You privileged guys, you. Keys you get, but keys we don't.

Our consolation? Each other's companionship over the long Thanksgiving weekend and the knowledge that you outnumber us about seven to one this weekend only.

Original plans dictated that I not go home partly because of a lack of green stuff, but mostly because of lack of energy to pack clothes for four days, make-up, curlers and books just to go 400 miles.

Lugging the books that far would be wasted energy. There would be no studying done with a nine-month-old niece around. Thus I chose to remain at MSU and conjured up noble plans for studying within the familiar confines of my room.

Then I learned that remaining on campus means packing clothes, make-up, curlers and books and moving across campus anyway. What a way to shatter my valiant intentions of studying. Who's going to study when temporarily situated?

The story goes: men remaining here can stay in their own rooms but must capture their own food supplies for the weekend. The women not only have to worry about where that next meal will be, but have to pack up and Ship Ahoy! we're off to Holmes Hall recreation room for the duration.

250 or more expected; thus justifying installation of temporary locks on the front doors and passing out keys to them. Only 30 or 40 women are expected to stay, making it impractical to open residence halls for two or three women.

The added catchlines: There's no place to herd all the guys where adequate bathroom facilities are available. And, the girls seem to be scared of staying in an empty dorm.

This way only a skeleton staff is necessary, the men can shift for themselves, the girls aren't lonely and I, who have the capacity for being lonely in some crowded rooms and for being anything but lonely when alone at times, am a dissenter to this happy-time situation.

Annually, more men are around over the vacation because more jobs are open to them. Maybe this male-to-female ratio is to be a partial balance to the inconvenience of moving out. That I'd argue too.

Back to the issue: I can see the residence hall administration's point of view in saying there aren't enough women staying to make it worthwhile opening the halls. Not really, but that's my nature. If you are going to rig the locks on half the doors, why not on all? What about RA's? Is it that much easier to have RA's scattered around to oversee 250 men than for 30 or 40 women? Or, do women need the supervision and the men not?

If there were 200 or more of our fair sex, would the administration really let us have the freedom of our own room as the men do? Or, would it be Holmes rec room, Akers rec, Hubbard...?

Old enough?

As for most women, and I use the term uncertainly, reporting to the residence hall office that they like the cozy-wozy arrangement because of eerie feelings toward knowing you are nearly the only one in a big, locked, vicious, locked, dangerous, locked, lonely, locked dorm--If we are old enough to be spending the amount of our money, our parents' money, or someone's money that we do for an education, old enough to live so far from our mothers' apron strings and under the watchful eyes of an RA only a few years our elders if at all older, old enough to marry without our parents' permission if we so decide, old enough to be dropped from child support if our parents were divorced and if we were not still in school, are we not old enough not to be afraid of the dark?

NEW DRIVE

GOP planning to recruit youth

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Republican National Committee embarked Tuesday on a drive to convince young people that they should join the GOP.

National Chairman Ray C. Bliss announced the effort, which runs parallel to the recruiting program of the conservative-oriented Young Republican National Federation.

The Bliss program has the cooperation-if not the cheers-of the Young Republican organization.

"As long as we're able to work with them on it," said Young Republican Chairman Tom Van Sickle, "it's all right with us."

Bliss said 12.4 million young Americans are coming of voting age between presidential elections, and GOP strength among new voters has been eroding drastically during the past 10 years.

"It is a matter of plain, hard fact that we must sharply increase support of the Republican party among young people," Bliss told a news conference.

He said the first in a nationwide series of Republican conferences for young people will be held Dec. 10 at the University of Wisconsin. Bliss said he will seek to persuade and recruit potential newcomers to the GOP with arguments like this:

"We need you. We are the party of the minority. Because we are the minority party, the opportunity is here. We need more people than the Democrats do."

The Young Republican organization was not listed on the program for the University of Wisconsin conference, but Bliss said the federation will be represented there.

Bliss said GOP recruits might enter the Young Republican organization, or might go directly into the senior party of their states.

Van Sickle, in Topeka, Kan., said in an interview his organization will be seeking new members at each of the national committee's youth conferences.

Reds dim U.N. hopes

By WILLIAM L. RYAN AP News Analyst

Red China can be expected to reject and denounce the latest move on the issue of its admission to the United Nations. The chances are that the prospect of Peking's entry is more remote than ever.

The United States has supported an Italian resolution proposing committee study of the issue. Some diplomats interpret this as a relaxation of the hard U.S. line against U.N. membership for Communist China.

The move can provide an opportunity for member nations to support an initiative with the appearance of compromise. But such a compromise has practically no chance of success. In fact, Peking will view it as part of a plot and as proof of Red Chinese accusations against the world organization as it is now constituted.

The United States strongly reasserted its determination to prevent the expulsion from the United Nations of the Nationalist Chinese government based on Formosa. But any "two-Chinas" solution is out of the question so far as the current Peking leadership is concerned.

In September, the Red Chinese ambassador to Poland laid down the official line: "The U.S. government is still occupying Chinese territory, the province of Formosa, by armed force. The forcible occupation of the Chinese province of Formosa by the U.S. government absolutely cannot be tolerated by the Chinese people. I am now instructed to reaffirm that the Chinese people are determined to liberate Formosa and that the U.S. government must withdraw all its armed forces from Formosa and the Formosa Strait."

"So long as the U.S. government does not change its hostile policy toward China and refuses to pull out its armed forces from Formosa and the Formosa Strait, normalization of Chinese-American relations is entirely out of the question."

There is no sound of compromise in that, nor is there likely to be any such sound, barring overthrow of the men who now rule the mainland, Peking's chances of admission grow dimmer as it more and more vehemently refuses to abide by the rules.

For more than a year, Peking has been accusing "Soviet revisionists" of plotting a "holy alliance" with the United States and others to contain and isolate Red China.

For a year, Peking has portrayed the United Nations as a market place for U.S. - Soviet trading.

In June, Peking accused the Russians of voting in support of measures which would suppress 'people's war' in various areas.

It accused the Americans of using the organization as an instrument in seeking a Viet Nam solution.

In effect, Peking demands that before it accepts the world organization, the United Nations must conform to Red Chinese notions of what such an organization must be. There is little chance that Red China can dictate to that extent to the rest of the world.

FRENCH DEADLINE

U.S. to hurry troop removal

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The United States may not be able to meet French President Charles de Gaulle's April 1, 1967, deadline for evacuating all its troops and supplies from France, informed sources indicated Tuesday.

However, Pentagon officials are reluctant to discuss this prospect. Instead they point out that statistics released in Paris Tuesday show more than half of all U.S. military stocks and one-third of all personnel had been relocated out of the country by the end of last month.

But other sources said a major problem that threatens to bar total evacuation has been the inability of the United States to reach agreements thus far with the French on future use of American supply depots, air bases and other housing and defense installations.

Another unresolved problem area is the 300-mile pipeline stretching across France into West Germany. Built eight years ago by the United States at a cost of more than $57 million, it has a capacity of more than six million barrels of oil a year and is now being operated by a French company.

Negotiations on the pipeline and other facilities, in process since June, are continuing with no immediate agreement in sight, said officials.

Germany bogs down in coalition efforts

BONN, Germany (AP) -- West Germany's Social Democrat and Free Democrat parties reported only slight progress Tuesday in efforts to patch together a governing coalition as Communist East Germany fired another salvo of criticism at the Nazi past of Kurt Georg Kiesinger.

Kiesinger is the dominant Christian Democratic party's choice to succeed Chancellor Ludwig Erhard.

Both Mayor Willy Brandt of West Berlin, head of the Social Democrats, and Erich Mende of the Free Democrats expressed a will to form a government, but the talks apparently produced no agreement on the crucial issues of domestic economic and financial policy.

Brandt's party controls 202 of the 496 votes in the German Parliament and the Free Democrats have 245.

The three parties are striving to produce a coalition that would provide a majority needed to elect a successor to Erhard.

Kiesinger has been widely criticized because he was a member of the Nazi party from 1933 until the end of World War II, working in the radio section of the Nazi Foreign Ministry propaganda section.

A spokesman for the East German Communist party's Politburo, Albert Norden, said in East Berlin that Kiesinger often took part in daily policy conferences at the Nazi Foreign Ministry and that propaganda chief Joseph Goebbels often led the meetings.

Norden said his government had documentary proof of the allegation. Norden said Kiesinger was deputy chief of the radio section and liaison man to Goebbels.

Kiesinger, 62, has been minister-president of the State of Baden-Wuerttemberg for eight years. He has said that he had only some of the functions of the deputy chief in the Nazi Foreign Ministry radio section and that he had been a low-level liaison man to all ministries, which would include Goebbels' propaganda ministry.

Commenting on the East German allegations, Kiesinger said, "I have clean hands. I know what I did and what I did not do."

Support for Kiesinger came from former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer who praised him as "a true democrat who did not make himself guilty of anything during the Nazi regime."

ALGIERS (AP) -- Several hundred cheering Algerians broke through police cordons Tuesday to applaud Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., at a ceremony marking the third anniversary of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Viet Cong hit U.S. post

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) -- The Viet Cong demonstrated with a mortar attack on a U.S. command post Tuesday that they retain a foothold northwest of Saigon despite pressure from Operation Attleboro, the largest American action of the war.

Twenty enemy shells exploded at field headquarters of the 2nd Brigade, 25th Infantry Division, one of several units that massed more than 30,000 troops to seek out and destroy the Viet Cong's 9th Division. A spokesman said U.S. casualties were light.

Duffy steals the show

MVP Trophy

George Webster, co-captain of the football team this year, is shown receiving the Governor's Trophy as Most Valuable Player on the Spartan team. Lt. Gov. William L. Milliken made the presentation at the football banquet Monday night.

The defense got all the honors at Monday night's Michigan State varsity football banquet, but Head Coach Duffy Daugherty stole all the laughs.

Team co-captain and defensive rover George Webster was presented the Governor of Michigan Award as the most valuable Spartan player of 1966.

But Daugherty set the tone for the evening's festivities as he rose for some introductory remarks, only to see about 10 photographers popping flashbulbs in his face.

"Before you take any pictures, I want to give you my tongue in cheek over the AP vote," Daugherty said, contorting the left side of his round Irish face, while the audience broke into hysterics.

"And now, here's my UPI smile," he continued without let-up, putting on the broadest grin his friends in the 'Old Sod' would have ever thought possible.

"You know, at 4:00 p.m. I got a call from New York, giving me the UPI vote," Daugherty related. "They said that we had won by three points, but that Notre Dame had gotten three more first place votes."

"I think I can account for it," he went on. "Out of a feeling of magnanimity, I voted for Michigan State and Notre Dame both as No. 1. But they told me that Ara had voted just for Notre Dame as No. 1."

"Thank heavens I get a chance to vote again next week," Daugherty quipped, but with no animosity toward Parseghian intended, he insisted.

Daugherty called Webster the "greatest defensive player I've ever seen," before the senior back was presented the Governor's award by Lt. Gov. William Milliken.

Jeff Richardson, senior defensive guard, received the President John A. Hannah award for perseverance in football efforts. Richardson had one of the best days of his career against Notre Dame, making 13 tackles to boost his season total to 32.

Jerry Jones, senior defensive back, received the Biggie Munn award for the player who has contributed the most "extra effort" during the season. Jones is fourth on the team in tackles with 41, 20 solo.

Pat Gallinagh, senior defensive guard, received two awards. The B-plus student in history earned the Patsy Ross Memorial Trophy for making the best contribution to Michigan State athletically and scholastically.

He also received the Fred Danziger Award, given annually to the player from the Detroit area who has made the most outstanding contribution to the team.

Drake Garrett, junior defensive halfback, received the Oil Can Award for the second year in a row, for contributing the most to the team in a humorous way.

Irish Smiles

Duffy Daugherty displays his tongue-in-cheek Associated Press smile while talking about the AP rating of the Spartan football team and then breaks into a beaming United Press International smile at Monday's football banquet. The UPI rated his football team No. 1 in the country.

Spurrier named Heisman winner

NEW YORK (UPI)—Quarterback Steve Spurrier of Florida was named the Heisman Trophy winner for 1966 in overwhelming fashion over Bob Griese of Purdue, who finished second.

Nick Eddy of Notre Dame finished third with 476 votes.

This is the greatest honor any college athlete could ever hope to win," Spurrier said by telephone from the office of the university president. "I'm happy for the college, for the state and for the South."

Gary Beban of UCLA finished fourth in the voting with 318 points, Floyd Little of Syracuse was fifth with 296, Clint Jones of Michigan State followed with 204 and Mel Farr of UCLA had 115.

Terry Hannatty, Notre Dame's sensational sophomore quarterback, drew 12 first place votes for a surprising total of 98 points. Spurrier has drawn more professional scouts this season than any other collegian and the attention is not unwarranted. Hitting his receivers at a phenomenal .632 mark, he has led the Gators to an 8-1 record, a trip to the Orange Bowl and the No. 9 National ranking.

Spurrier has experienced a sensational senior year, completing 153 of 242 passes for 1,785 yards and 15 touchdowns. During his career at Florida, he has fired 35 TD aeriels, kicked field goals of 40 and 42 yards and punted 40 times for an outstanding 40.7 yard average.

3 Spartans All-American

Gene Washington, Bubba Smith, and George Webster were named Tuesday to the first team American Football Coaches Association All-American Football team.

Washington was named the tight end on the team with Jack Clancy of Michigan, the only other Big Ten player on the team, making split end. Jerry West, Jimmy Raye, Clint Jones, Bob Apisa, and Charlie Thornhill were all given honorable mention on the team.

Raye UPI 'Back of Week'; pass and run 'fooled 'em'

By UPI

Jimmy Raye fooled 'em. The Michigan State University quarterback was supposed to be just a runner according to advance data sheets from Big Ten sports writers.

But Raye, who led the Spartans to a second Big Ten championship and a 9-0-1 record this season, wound up the year a proven passer as well as a daring runner.

This week's United Press International Midwest Back of the Week recalled how in the fleeting moments of last year's season he demonstrated his darting swiftness on option plays.

"I like to run with the ball. Everyone thought this year our offense would be predicated around my running," he said. It didn't take long for other teams to discover Raye could throw the ball. He finished the season with a 50 per cent passing record and 10 touchdown tosses, one short of tying the team's season record for TD aeriels.

Against Notre Dame last Saturday, Raye didn't fear of throwing the ball, although he hit on only 7 of 20 tosses and had three intercepted. He set up the team's only touchdown with a 42-yard pass. He connected on another 40-yarder and threatened with several other long bombs.

"We were out to win from the start of the ball game. We went for a home run (pass) on the first play after Notre Dame scored a field goal to tie," he said.

Two of Raye's passes were intercepted near the end of the game as Michigan State "went for broke."

Raye, only 5-foot-10-inches and 170 pounds, also wound up the game as his team's leading rusher, gaining 75 yards in 21 runs.

During the season he averaged 3.5 yards per carry and scored five times.

Coach Duffy Daugherty gave Raye carte blanche authority to run the ball from pass formations. Raye likes best to roll out on an option and then shoot for the goal line if he can't find his receivers. Raye said he can't "wait to get back on the gridiron" next year. "We figured we didn't settle anything by tying Notre Dame. This will be incentive enough to keep us going next year" he said.

Irish play for poll in final grid game

NEW YORK (UPI) -- Notre Dame gets a chance to regain first place in the ratings Saturday when the second-ranked Fighting Irish meet southern California, the Western representative to the Rose Bowl and the oddsmakers have listed them 13 point favorites to end the season unbeaten.

Notre Dame should be trying to make the margin as big as possible in order to overtake No. 1 Michigan State in the rankings. Michigan State finished its season last week when it tied Notre Dame 10-10.

Southern California, the nation's 10th-ranked team, also needs a good showing to hang onto its precarious rating and convince doubters that it deserved the Rose Bowl bid over sixth-ranked UCLA.

Southern Cal lost to UCLA 14-7 last week but was picked because it had a half-game edge in the Pacific Eight conference standings. Southern Cal, 4-1 in the conference, has a 7-2 season mark, and UCLA, with a 3-1 conference record, is 9-1 overall with its season completed.

Dramatic intensity marks 'The Consul'

By FRED HIMMELEIN
State News Reviewer

The late Ethel Barrymore, when asked why there was a curious lack of coughing and inattention during her performances, replied that something within her communicated itself in such a way as to command absolute attention and silence. If the same question were put to Gian-Carlo Menotti's music-drama "The Consul," the answer might be much the same. Monday evening's performance by the New York City Opera Company was unusually devoid of coughing and sputtering, but fortunately it was not devoid of intensity of feeling and motivation. Certainly Menotti's music-drama, more drama than music according to no less an authority than Poulenc, is dated, coming as it does from the political turbulence of the early 1950s. But "The Consul" is dated in much the same way as are "The Crucible" and "For Whom The Bell Tolls;" certain of the references are a bit musty and faded, but like Miller and Hemingway, Menotti has survived this and established a creation of great strength.

Such strength was evidenced particularly in the fine work of Patricia Neway, who on Monday evening sang the role of the heroine, Magda Sorel. As the shadows under her eyes deepened, so did the dramatic intensity of her performance, climaxing in a highly acclaimed "To This We've Come," which in addition to its dramatic potency, was given with characteristically fine musicianship.

Miss Neway was ably abetted by Muriel Greenspon, singing the role of the Mother. Miss Greenspon, heard by this reviewer some two years ago in the City Opera's production of Carlisle Floyd's opera "Suzanna," delivered another stellar performance, adding another fine character interpretation to what must be a most imposing list of roles.

The gentlemen, although struck by calamity, carried on in similarly fine fashion. David Clatworthy, scheduled to sing the role of John Sorel, was vocally indisposed, and his voice was replaced by the impressive off-stage tones of Richard Frederick.

Staging, with the possible exception of microphone difficulties in the first act and a glaring light emanating from the office of the mythical Consul, was tremendously effective, considering the limitations of the house. The sets and costumes were sufficiently dismal, and fortunately the orchestra, conducted ably by Charles Wilson, was not dismal at all, but more than up to the demands of the occasionally eclectic score. This skill, coupled with the fine stage work by all concerned, was quite enough to make an entertaining and stimulating experience out of a coughless "Consul."

COLLEGE BOWL

Columbia 'too fast'

"God could have played them last Sunday and not beaten them." This is the observation Donald Mackenzie, captain of MSU's College Bowl team, made after Columbia took a decisive 320 to 150 point game from the Spartans on the nationally televised game. Mackenzie said he and his teammates have a lot of admiration for the Columbia team. He said that Columbia played by far its best game last Sunday. Mackenzie said it was perhaps the best game he has ever seen played.

Columbia has also played and beaten Providence and Indiana Universities. Next Sunday they will be challenged by the College of William and Mary.

Mackenzie said that it was a case of Columbia getting to the buzzers "too fast."

He said that others may have felt worse about the defeat than he. "But our errors were not the cause of the defeat," he said.

The team captain said that Loren Lomasky, Stephen Badrich, and Byron Boyd should be commended on their performances. He felt the team put forth a good effort.

Mackenzie noted that Columbia held an advantage because they had two weeks of experience behind them. "But I really don't think it would have made too much difference whether we played the game in New York or here in the Erickson Kiva," he concluded.

6 ND 'ticket scalpers' won't be prosecuted

Six persons contacted by University Police for ticket scalping outside the stadium Saturday will not be prosecuted, the county prosecutor said Tuesday.

"The situation was not as outrageous as we'd anticipated," explained Ingham County Prosecutor Donald L. Reising. "I feel we accomplished our purpose without prosecution."

The lack of scalpers could have been partly due to the telecast of the game, Reising said.

University Police reported that only one of the six persons contacted was a student.

Nigeria capable of leading Africa

By RON ROAT
State News Staff Writer

The Nigerian people have a tremendous desire and willingness to learn the fundamentals of today's world, the head of University Extension at MSU said Tuesday.

Nigeria is one of the few countries in Africa that has the capacity, both in natural resources and education, to become one of the leading countries on the continent, Mel C. Buschman said.

Buschman recently returned from the University of Nigeria where he was director of the Continuing Education Service.

"Our job was to educate the staff there in the various fields so that they could take over the program when we returned to the United States," Buschman said.

The University of Nigeria Continuing Education Service was patterned after the same service offered at MSU in Kellogg Center. "In fact, the same man that designed the Kellogg Center Building designed the construction in Nigeria," he said.

Buschman was part of a team of 28 educators under a grant from the Agency for International Development (AID).

"The program started about five years ago," he said. "The University at that time had 100 students, and it now has expanded to around 5,000."

Nigerian students face their education in a very responsible manner, he said. Absenteeism is a very rare thing. "If a professor misses a class, the students are apt to find him and demand that he make-up that time to the students," he said.

University of Nigeria is located in Nsukka in the eastern region. The country is divided into four regions, the northern region being the largest and chiefly Moslem.

Buschman said that the Nigerian people have a good understanding of how democracy works and could definitely operate the system, but conditions which are mostly out of their control would hinder democracy.

Buschman said that Michigan State is a leader in this field of foreign education. "AID became rather upset because the Nigerian Program was becoming known as the 'Michigan State Program,'" he said.

Michigan State is well suited for this sort of work, he said. MSU has many fields of study and good educators to use where work is required in foreign countries.

Please don't zlupf Sprite. It makes plenty of noise all by itself.

Sprite, you recall, is the soft drink that's so tart and tingling, we just couldn't keep it quiet.

Flip its lid and it really flips. Rubbing, fizzing, gurgling, hissing and carrying on all over the place.

An almost excessively lively drink. Hence, to zlupf is to err.

What is zlupping?

Zlupping is to drinking what smacking one's lips is to eating.

It's the staccato buzz you make when draining the last few deliciously tangy drops of Sprite from the bottle with a straw.

Zzzzzllupf!

It's completely uncalled for. Frowned upon in polite society. And not appreciated on campus either.

But, if zlupping Sprite is absolutely essential to your enjoyment, if a good healthy zlupf is your idea of heaven, well... all right.

But have a heart. With a drink as noisy as Sprite, a little zlupf goes a long, long way.

SPRITE. SO TART AND TINGLING, WE JUST COULDN'T KEEP IT QUIET.

BRITAIN

Welfare system not up to hopes

England's social welfare state, developed since World War II, has not fared as well as expected, according to Mrs. Barbara Shenfield, professor of sociology at the University of London.

In a lecture here Monday, Mrs. Shenfield said England's welfare state is based on the "generous ideals forged during the war; that the community as a whole makes itself responsible, each for the other."

"The premise is one any country would be proud to strive for," she said. "There are certain inherent problems in it, however, that prevent it from being achieved."

"If the government provides services at zero cost, there is no limit to the demands," she said.

She noted that in England, wants have been stimulated, new and more expensive methods are constantly being discovered and must be incorporated into the programs at more expense to the government, and that shortages and dissatisfactions have developed in the professions involved.

Mrs. Shenfield also noted that those who need help must refuse to accept charity; politics is necessarily involved in the allotment of public funds; methods of evaluation to determine priority standing of the various programs have not been developed; taxes are higher; and facilities are inadequate.

Mrs. Shenfield's suggestion for a country developing a welfare system is a division of responsibility between the individual and the government, with private payments for personal services and government payments for public facilities and general programs.

She said a private system of social services should be maintained in a welfare state as a means of comparison and competition.

"M" IS FOR THE MANY THINGS YOU'LL TEACH HER

Nobody will dispute - surely not I - that raising children is a task which requires full time and awesome skills. Nonetheless, a recent nationwide survey has revealed a startling fact: mothers who go back to work after their children are safely through the early years are notably happier, better adjusted, and more fulfilled than mothers who simply remain housewives. Moreover - and mark this well - the children of such working mothers are themselves happier, better adjusted, and more fulfilled!

All very well, you say, but what's it got to do with you? Isn't it obvious? If you are underachieving at college, get your mother a job.

What kind of job? Well, sir, your mother is probably between 35 and 50 years of age, so certain occupations must immediately be ruled out. Logging, for example. Or whaling. Or carhopping.

But don't despair. There are other kinds of jobs - not many, to be sure, but some. However, you must not stick Mom in just any old job. You must remember that after the excitement of raising you, she would be bored to tears as a file clerk, for instance, or as a doorman. (A doorman, as we all know, is someone who brings handfuls of water to track layers. With the recent invention of the pail, dolmen are gradually falling into technological unemployment.)

But I digress. I was saying, find Mom a job worthy of her talents, something challenging that uses her vast wisdom and experience but, at the same time, is not too hard on her obsolescing tissues. That's what Walter Sigafos did, and the results were brilliantly successful.

Walter, a sophomore at the Upper Maryland College of Wickerwork and Belles Lettres, majoring in raffia, approached the problem scientifically. First he asked himself what his mother did best. Well, sir, what she did best was to keep hollering. "Dress warm, Walter!"

At first glance this seemed a skill not widely in demand, but Walter was not discouraged. He sent out hundreds of inquiries and today, I am pleased to report, his mother is happily employed as wardrobe mistress for the Montreal Canadiens.

Another fortunate venture was that of Frank C. Gramsmire, a junior at the Oregon State Conservatory of Music and Optometry, majoring in sties. Frank, like Walter, did a survey in depth of his mother's talents. Chief among them, he found, was her ability to make a roast of beef feed the whole family for three days. So, naturally, Frank got her a job at the Museum of Natural History.

What has one to do with the other, you ask? Isn't it obvious? Anyone who can stretch ribs like that belongs in paleontology.

ATL men stress rights over jobs

By DONNA CUMMINGS
State News Staff Writer

The crux of the "whole ATL fight" is the fact that non-tenured faculty members don't have any rights, asserted Ken Lawless, one of three non-tenured ATL instructors recommended to the Board of Trustees by the ATL department for dismissal.

Two of the three "ATL rebels," Lawless and W. Gary Groat, discussed and answered questions on the rights of non-tenured faculty members and the publish-or-perish theory of writing in Akers auditorium Monday night before approximately 100 students.

The third member of the controversial trio, Robert S. Fogarty, did not participate in the informal discussion due to illness in his family.

Petitions available for new job

Open petitioning will begin Nov. 28 for the position of general chairman for the newly formed Meet the Press, said Rick Maynard, ASMSU's vice president of special projects.

Meet the Press has been formed to increase communications between students and members of the administrative faculty, the teaching faculty and student government.

The position is open to students in good standing with the University, who have interest, time and ability to devote to the position, said Maynard.

The Meet the Press chairman will have the responsibility of organizing the program and forming a committee if necessary.

Written qualifications will be required, Maynard noted, and each petitioner will be interviewed.

Petitions will be available in ASMSU's main office in the Student Services Building with petitioning ending Dec. 5.

English profs to speak at Texas meet

Three members of the English Dept. will present papers at the annual meeting of the National Council of Teachers of English Thursday through Saturday in Houston, Texas.

D. Gordon Rohman, dean of Justin Morrill College, will speak on "Discovery of Synthesis: some ideas for a modern theory of rhetorical invention."

Roger Shuy, associate professor of English, will speak on "Dialectology in the Urban Area," and Joseph Waldmeir, associate professor of English, will speak on "Trends in American Fiction since 1945."

Both Lawless and Groat want a change in the "no rights" tenure policy at Michigan State. They feel it "unjust and professionally insulting" for the University to fire them without any written statement of reason.

"Last year's Schiff case established that students cannot be thrown out of school without good reason," commented Lawless, "yet our case shows that faculty members can be fired without any reason whatsoever."

Citing reference to his controversial short story published in the summer edition of Zeigeist magazine, Lawless said the phrase "publish and perish" better described his situation. "The kinds of words used by Lawless in his story are no worse than those read by Gary Snyder at his recent poetry session on campus," Groat said in defense of both Lawless's composition and its publication.

"The Snyder audience accepted the use of four-letter words without commotion because Snyder is a well-known author of several books," contended Groat, "yet when Lawless expressed his creativity and scholarly ability on paper, he was fired."

The student protesters at Bessey Hall are promoting the trio's real cause of making people think and talk about the situation, according to Groat.

Both Groat and Lawless want the right to have their jobs back if they want them, but when asked if they would rejoin the MSU faculty, Groat replied, "I would probably come back." Lawless, however, said he would not "publicly" say he would not rejoin the faculty.

"My objective tonight is the same as it has been for the last three years: to teach people something and to make them think," said Groat in reply to a question asking reason for the trio's acceptance of invitations to speak at student rallies and discussions.

The fact that President John Hannah said the next time department officials will be more careful in handing down dismissal recommendations is a victory for the "rebels" cause, according to Lawless who claims that the "authorities did not discuss our teaching abilities before voting to dismiss us."

"The next time someone wants to fire some young Turk for 'boat-rocking' they will consider the person's teaching ability," he commented.

The American Association of University Professors (AAUP) says it is not competent to judge these particular cases, Groat said, but it suggested that each man be reconsidered on an individual basis.

"The students at Bessey support the AAUP's recommendation and add to it a clause stating that if sufficient evidence is found to prove our teaching disability, we should be dismissed on these grounds," Groat concluded.

speaking to a coed group on pre-marital sex at a movie-discussion period in Brody, said "The 'he can, she can't' standard is wrong."

The psychological effect of pre-marital sex can result in a distrustful marriage, he said. He added that this can occur the other way too.

keep a marriage from being successful, but it is the possible psychological results and the disobedience of Christ which are bad," he said.

A student said the Ten Commandments only bans adultery. The priest replied that "all things which are wrong aren't listed in the Ten Commandments, they're listed or hinted at throughout the Bible."
