Enrollment trend points to more graduates

BY STEVE GATES
State News Staff Writer

The proportionate increase from last semester's enrollment is expected to produce a trend toward fewer students at the graduate level.

Norris Maier, director of student affairs, said 1958, to 18.1 percent in 1964, to 19.3 percent of this increase is expected to reach at least a temporary peak in the percentage of graduate enrollment.

The average rate of enrollment growth at Michigan State University has been 8.6 percent from 1953 to 1964, to 9.2 percent in 1964, to 9.4 percent to 1965. This year's class was smaller, and enrollment is down 1.1 percent.

Norris Maier, director of student affairs, said that since teaching fellows account for 18 percent of the enrollment, the problem is to predict how many in the future are needed to meet the needs of those at each level.

The university has no control over the number of students enrolled and is not aware of any plan to reduce the number of graduate students.

The goal is to stimulate more enrollments in the graduate level from par-}
Policy restatement was not requested

The Board of Trustees again has been put in the same position as taking a weight behind the concept of open housing in East Lansing. So one was squashed. The trustees passed a resolution at their next meeting supporting open housing policies in all communities where MSU employees and students live. The resolution itself changes nothing. It merely restates a policy first passed by the State Board of Agriculture prior to a year and a half ago, and reiterated again last year by the trustees. What's more, the resolution is merely a statement of policy. The University is not set to take any steps toward implementing or lobbying for open housing. The trustees passed the resolution, simply a paper tiger. Why, then were the trustees more interested in this than last year? The Board Chairman Warren Roff said the resolution was proposed to endowment President John Hannah from criticism leveled at him last year to come and to make this part of this University's crystal clear. At first glance one would find their timing a bit late. Actually, the criticism leveled at him last year was directed at him alone, not the University, Hannah, as an individual simply failed to lend his support to an open housing amendment in East Lansing. In light of his position on the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, this failure was attacked as morally indefensible.

A change in position of the University was never requested. It has been clear, at least on paper, for some time, that what was asked, rather, was the support of an individual well-recognized as being against open housing and short-comings of open occupance. Prices too high

To the Editors:

Just a shot in the dark on your page was an item about the price of a basket of food. The item was far too high. It is too high.

I am a student at Michigan State University and have had the good fortune to shop in various grocery stores in this area during the past two years. I have never found the price of a basket of food to be too high. I am not aware of any students who have ever found the price of a basket of food to be too high. I am not aware of any students who have ever found the price of a basket of food to be too high. I am not aware of any students who have ever found the price of a basket of food to be too high. I am an out-of-state student and, as such, I feel that this is unfair and that the prices in East Lansing should be reduced.

US. prepares for attack

DOUG HA, South Viet Nam (AP) -- The United States set up antiaircraft gun posts 10 miles south of the demilitarized zone today, and top officers said they were put there because of possible Communist attacks.

The guns were placed on a hill near Dong Ha, the command headquarters for a combined U.S. Marine and South Vietnamese army, said a U.S. military official.

For several months, American commanders have been talking about the possibility of a Communist air attack as U.S. forces withdraw from the area that has sprung up since July, although the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong jets hit into South Viet Nam since the war began.

Kosygin arrives in Paris

PARIS (AP) -- Premier Aleksei N. Kosygin arrived Wednesday to plan a new, tight nuclear control arrangement between France and the Soviet Union.

The initiative is the second in a series of negotiations between Kosygin and French officials to establish a way of stopping the Cold War by bringing Russia back into the fold.

Weary Barb

LANSING, Mich. -- John Barb, the former MSU student accused of the murder of a student in 1969, took his case to the U.S. Supreme Court on Monday and won.

Mr. Barb was re-admitted a month after his release and was free to travel to Europe. He was charged with murder and tried in 1969, but the Supreme Court declared the trial unconstitutional after a delay of three years.

Alpena, Mich. - Eight crewmen taken off a freighter in a gale off the Detroit River have been rescued.

We were well equipped with life jackets and life boats. We were not afraid of the gale, because we had good training for this kind of work from the ISO, the radio station.

On May 27, 1966, a gale force 8 wind, measured at Grand Rapids, Mich., blew a 12,300-ton freighter into the Detroit River. The freighter, the "Bravo," was en route from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to Kingston, England, carrying 2,000 tons of iron ore from the Thunder Bay Shoal. The freighter was damaged, and the crew was rescued.

The United States, a major trading partner, relies on shipping to transport goods to other countries. The crewmen were taken off the freighter in the middle of the storm.

The rescue operation was conducted by the United States Coast Guard. The crewmen were transported to a nearby port and later taken to a hospital for medical treatment.

The incident highlighted the importance of maritime safety and the need for well-trained crewmen to handle such situations.

Thant believed ready to accept another term

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

The belief is that Dr. Boutros Boutros-Ghali may be willing to stand for re-election as Secretary General at the end of his second term. Sources close to the Secretary General said, "We will only say that the Secretary General is in very close consultation with the members of his team and with the UN staff before making any decision." The sources added that there are "positive developments" and that "the Secretary General is considering his options." The Secretary General has been open-minded in the past about other suggestions for his term and has made clear that he is not interested in seeking re-election. He is currently in close consultations with a number of countries, including the U.S. and the U.K., about his decision.

Board ignores ATL issue to avoid fight

The Board of Trustees decided not to vote on the issue of the Atlantic League, which was discussed at a meeting of the Board in October. The Board members agreed that the issue was too divided and could cause a conflict, so they decided to avoid the issue until they can find a more appropriate time to discuss it. They also agreed to work towards a solution that would benefit all parties involved.

'SMU must limit its size'

MANDAN, N.D. (AP) — The Board of Trustees of the University of North Dakota has called for the school to limit its enrollment to 10,000 students as a way to control costs and improve the quality of education. The board said that the current enrollment of 18,000 is too high and that it is causing a strain on the school's resources. They also noted that the school's budget is facing cuts and that it needs to find ways to reduce expenses. The board said that the school should focus on providing a high-quality education for its students, rather than trying to be all things to all people.

When The Cheering Stops...
THE ISSUE:

Is it really business vs. government?

Business now has a significant competitor—the government.

Edward Kokalas, Michigan State University

Dear Mr. Kokalas:

The entire field of government-business relations is a complicated one, but at least one thing is clear. Government and business both compete and cooperate.

Your point is that government has become a significant competitor in terms of students making a career choice. This is healthy. Our society is a parts of this system. We in business respect the system. Business and government are essential. Those who choose government for a career must need for able and talented people in government. Who choose government for a career must likewise have respect for the businessman.

In your letter you say that many students subscribe to a new maxim: "What's good for the Federal Government is good for the country." If from this we are to imply, however, that only government careers are important, satisfying, and rewarding, then we disagree.

In your letter, you enumerate four important career goals: "Challenging work, job security, financial rewards, and a contribution to society." Let's examine the opportunities business offers to meet these goals.

Depending on how far up the ladder you go, there is no question that financial rewards are greater in business. Job security certainly exists in business where, of course, it depends primarily on merit. And, business does offer a person challenging work and the opportunity to make a contribution to society. So does government, but in a different fashion.

Ask yourself this question: "Do I want to be employed by an organization that devotes its energies to identifying problems, or one which is concerned with solving problems?" As a rule, the responsibility of solving problems falls to business and industry.

Look at the Job Corps. Most urban centers are run by private industry—companies like Gerates, Inc., IBM, Xerox, U.S. Industries, Inc., IT&T, Philco-Ford, Packard Bell, and Burroughs. To rely on government to do this job was a decision that made sense. After all, the young men and women benefiting from Job Corps programs are being trained to later hold real jobs in the real world. They'll most likely find these jobs in private industry.

Recently, the Peace Corps turned to business to supplement their bimterio university-directed training programs for volunteers. The companies involved include such names as General Dynamics Corp., Westinghouse, and Litton. Here's a comment from a Peace Corps official as it appeared in a recent "Business Week" article.

"Private industry is more flexible, less compartmentalized. We've got a better chance to experiment and innovate when business is involved."

In the field of municipal government, Mayor John Lindsay of New York recently appointed a Management Advisory Council, composed of 6 top industrialists, to study and improve city administration. The move was made in the hope that "our municipal government... can be operated as smoothly for the benefit of the people as the complex organizations headed by these executives in the private sector."

I think that with the proliferation of government programs and resulting duplication and red tape, more and more businessmen will have to be called on by government officials to help straighten things out for reasons of effectiveness, economy, and efficiency.

This is where the real organizational strength of business lies. This is how its performance is measured. This is one of the reasons why business is the pacesetter in our society providing the creative and economic foundation for all else to happen.

Business, in common with government, succeeds when it is established "of the people, by the people, and for the people." As you choose your career, consider both business and government in terms of how each renders its service to all people and how each challenges you personally.
