

NEVILLE URGES MSU SIZE LIMIT

By ED BRILL
State News Staff Writer

In a major policy statement, Provost Howard R. Neville said Wednesday that the time has come for the University to limit its size and concentrate on improving the gains it has made in recent years. Speaking at the yearly meeting of the Academic Senate, Neville recommended: --stabilizing the size of the University between 40-42,000 by 1970.

--limiting the number of colleges within the University after the addition of the new Law School.

--moving to study the proportion of students (student mix) at various levels to meet the needs of those at each level.

Neville said that the University must change in response to the needs of our time. The rapid changes in Michigan State and in the society it must serve require a reconsideration of the University's direction and aim.

"No longer should we be, nor can we be, all things to all men," Neville stated. "We must choose our direction."

The way to best meet the needs of the future is by "developing and emphasizing quality in every branch of our undertaking," he said.

The proposed management of size at Michigan State is based on the consideration of the limited funds available to the University.

"We cannot live with constantly increasing size without commensurate resources to support the kind of education we ought to be offering," Neville said.

In the last six years, he pointed out, state appropriations per student have remained at almost precisely the same level. It was $25 per student credit hour in 1960, and $26 today.

Increased faculty loads, restricted budgets for the library, supplies, services, and research funds have been the price of University growth in recent years, Neville noted. "We have been able--barely able--to keep up. We never catch up," he said.

"The time has come for management of size at Michigan State," Neville insisted, "management based on available resources."

Despite increasing pressure to add still more programs to the University after the addition of the Law School, Neville said that the circle of programs should be considered essentially complete.

Because of the need to concentrate finances where they are most needed, any further changes in program development at the University will probably be limited to reorganization.

"We must do well what we are now doing," Neville insisted. "We do no service to the student, the state, or the nation or to ourselves by offering programs we cannot adequately support."

Neville said that a change in internal emphasis would be one of the most important decisions of the University. Both

ONE-THIRD RATIO?

Enrollment trend points to more graduates

By STEVE GATES
State News Staff Writer

With the post-war-baby boom becoming the land-grant rush, MSU appears to be experiencing a trend toward greater emphasis on graduate education.

In fact, MSU may be heading toward an equal ratio of graduate students to undergrads. Administrators, however, do not expect enrollment to actually reach anything near that proportion for many years.

President John A. Hannah indicated that there has been no specific effort made to increase the enrollment to an equal ratio of freshmen-sophomores, juniors-seniors and graduate students, although this trend has long been expected.

James V. Stoneman, assistant registrar for evaluation and research, added that while the trend definitely exists, the problem is to predict how many years in the future it will be before the trend actually reaches this ratio.

The trend is the result of several natural factors--smaller entering classes, increased enrollment in community colleges and increasing numbers of students transferring at the graduate level from particularly Grand Valley, Oakland, and Delta colleges, according to Provost Howard R. Neville.

Indicative of this trend is the rising percentage of graduate enrollment. It has increased on campus from 16 per cent in 1958, to 18.1 per cent in 1964, to 19.3 per cent this year.

One contributing factor is the decrease in the size of freshmen classes. MSU reached at least a temporary peak in the size of freshmen classes in the fall of 1965. This year's class was smaller, and next year's is expected to be smaller yet.

MSU expects only 1,300 more students next year than this, and as much as 75 per cent of this increase is expected to be graduate students.

Proposals have been made by administrators to attempt the 1:1:1 ratio in the near future. For example, provost Howard R. Neville suggested at Wednesday's Aca-

Gift offer sent parents called a racketeer's gyp

Parents of MSU students are receiving a letter that could be inviting them to buy a gyp gift package for their exam-ridden son or daughter.

The letter asks parents to order their son or daughter a gift of flowers, fresh fruits, candies and hot chocolate during finals week through the MSU Student Committee. The cost is $3.

The letter is signed George Hazlett, chairman. George Hazlett is not enrolled as a student according to records in the office of the vice-president for student affairs.

Hazlett's MSU Student Committee is not a registered student organization. It has nothing to do with ASMSU. No University or student official has yet said they know who the committee is.

And when President Hannah received one of the letters asking him to buy the gift package for his son David, he sent the letter to the vice-president for student affairs with the note: "Is this a racket?"

The offer could be perfectly legitimate, but similar offers in the previous five years were "real gyps, poor in quality and quantity," Elton Nonnamaker, associate dean of students, said. "Based on our past bad experience with such offers and knowing nothing about this outfit, I'd advise students and parents to investigate carefully before placing an order," Nonnamaker said.

If anyone has a complaint about the offer, he should take it to the postal authorities. The University has no control over what is sent in the United States mail. If the offer is a fraud, George Hazlett and his committee can be arrested for using the mails to defraud.

The office of the vice-president for student affairs has sent a copy of the

Surviving quint given new blood

PITTSBURGH, Pa. P -- Roni Sue, the only surviving Aranson quintuplet, underwent a blood transfusion Wednesday.

Dr. Lee Bass, the tiny infant's pediatrician, said 75 per cent of her blood was exchanged to check a jaundice condition. He said the transfusion was necessary to prevent brain damage due to jaundice.

The doctor said the baby took the procedure quite well. "We are hopeful of a successful recovery," he added.

Bass also said Roni Sue's condition had improved since earlier in the day when she stopped breathing several times -- a respiratory problem similar to that which took the lives of her four sisters within 56 hours of their births on Saturday.

He said she later had some more spasms of breathing failure and each time had to be stimulated to breathe, but he described her condition as "quite good."

COULD BE DISRUPTIVE

U-M protest group plans sit-in against committee formation

VOICE, the University of Michigan chapter of Students for Democratic Society (SDS) is seeking student support for another sit-in, following one staged Tuesday in the school's administration building.

The sit-in, called for by VOICE Tuesday night, will be staged if a minimum of 250 students support the proposal, a VOICE spokesman said. The decision was made independently of U-M's Student Government Council (SGC).

VOICE called another meeting for

Thursday evening to determine support for the sit-in, which may become one of a disruptive nature with students sitting in offices of the administration building.

A spokesman said the sit-in will protest University President Harlan Hatcher's statements Monday, when he indicated he would establish three committees composed of students, faculty and administrators.

The committees will make recommendations to the president and regents for a revised SGC plan, will review and consider the recent sit-in ban and will investigate compilation of class rankings used for Selective Service purposes, according to Hatcher's statement.

Ed Robinson, SGC president, said he was not sure that a sit-in is "the best thing to do now."

Robinson is calling for a mass meeting Thursday night to begin in Haven-Mason Auditorium and finish in Hill Auditorium at about 10 p.m.

He said the purpose of the meeting is for "more discussion, more education and to plan further directions."

Prior to the VOICE meeting twelve teaching fellows (graduate assistants) said they understood they would not be invited to attend next Monday's literary college faculty meeting and indicated they would circulate a petition among teaching fellows asking that they be represented in future faculty meetings.

Philip Newman, a literary college fellow, said there is an objection from many that since teaching fellows account for about 40 per cent of the undergraduate teaching done at the university they should be included in decisions.

Social committee reviews rules for campus activities

By FAYE UNGER
State News Staff Writer

From chaperones to the no-alcohol-at-social-functions policy, the All-University social policies are being studied by the social affairs committee for possible revision.

The committee is looking into regulations governing open house in dormitories, chaperones, time limits on social events, the registering of social events, alcohol on campus and procedures for changing social regulations.

They should complete their report by the end of winter term.

"It's practical to study the social regulations every three or four years to see if they still serve a valid purpose," Arthur Sandeen, associate director for residence hall programs, said.

"The University has decentralized and grown since the social policies were last reviewed. Some rules may be no longer suited to the changed University," he said.

The social affairs committee is composed of representatives of the major student governing groups, their advisers and a Union Board representative. The social policies and procedures review is presently being conducted in two sub-committees.

The first policy to be put under the microscope is that requiring chaperones at social events held by registered student groups.

Chaperones are guests of the sponsoring student organization, the 1966-67 student leaders' handbook says. Chaperoning gives students and faculty a chance to meet informally. Chaperones can help with emergencies and see that University rules on social events are carried out.

Erhard ends chancellorship

BONN, West Germany P -- Ludwig Erhard stepped down as Chancellor Wednesday, making way for a "grand coalition" government of his Christian Democrats and the opposition Social Democrats.

The new Christian Democratic leader, Kurt Georg Kiesinger, is due to be elected Chancellor Thursday by the lower house of Parliament.

The posts of vice-chancellor and foreign minister will go to Mayor Willy Brandt of West Berlin, the Social Democrat leader whose party had formed the opposition since the federal government came into being 17 years ago.

In a meeting that extended into the small hours of the morning, Kiesinger and Brandt reached an agreement on a new Cabinet that will bring the Social Democrats into the government for the first time.

Late in the day, Kiesinger announced that his Christian Democratic party had given overwhelming approval to the coalition Cabinet. But he declined to say who was in it.

Erhard said he was glad the political crisis was over and that West Germany would have a strong government again. Charges of weakness and indecisiveness within his own party had played a large part in his ouster after three years in office.

Justice Dept. reviews use of 'bug' devices

WASHINGTON P -- The Justice Department announced Wednesday night it has begun an extensive review of all court cases -- present and past -- in which evidence may have been gathered by means of electronic eavesdropping.

The department made the announcement in a paper filed in the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of Joseph F. Schipani, who had been convicted of income tax evasion.

In the supplemental memorandum it filed with the court, the department said: "Recognizing its obligation not to use evidence obtained in violation of a defendant's protected rights in any criminal prosecution, the department has initiated the program to discover prior instances in which this may have occurred."

Attorneys cautioned

The department also disclosed that Acting Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark had sent on Nov. 3 a memorandum to all the U.S. attorneys cautioning them that the department "must never proceed with any investigation or case which includes evidence illegally obtained or the fruits of that evidence."

A department spokesman said the current investigation affects all cases which have been brought to trial as well as pending cases.

The department said it had been informed by the FBI in a memorandum dated Oct. 28 that although Schipani was not the subject of "direct electronic surveillance by agents of the FBI, he was a participant in various conversations electronically monitored on a number of occasions in 1961."

The FBI had installed a microphone at a place of business where Schipani and others frequently met.

Freighter sinks in Lake Huron with 33 aboard

HARBOR BEACH, Mich. P -- The freighter Daniel J. Morrell, with a crew of 33 aboard, apparently broke up and sank in storm-lashed Lake Huron on Tuesday night, the Coast Guard said Wednesday.

A survivor of the ship was picked up by a Coast Guard helicopter late Wednesday. Seven bodies were recovered.

The Coast Guard identified the survivor as Dennis Hale, 26, of Ashtabula, Ohio.

The Coast Guard said the Morrell began breaking up at 2:30 a.m. Tuesday. Hale had been in the water for about 36 hours. He said he had been on a liferaft with several other men, but he did not know what had happened to them.

The Coast Guard took Hale to a hospital here.

Hale was found about 10 miles northeast of here, about two miles from where the Lack of justice strains relations

A week before the Michigan State-Notre Dame football game an MSU coed was arrested, charged, and punished for ticket "scalping"—the illegal resale of tickets for more than face value.

She had been arrested by a police agent posing as an Oldsmobile executive, and the case received much publicity.

An example had been made of her; she was, in effect, a deterrent. The police issued a warning afterwards that they would, "arrest any person in violation of the law."

And then, the morning of the game, police apprehended six ticket scalpers, five of them non-students, in the vicinity of Spartan Stadium and took no action other than confiscating the tickets.

The county prosecutor admits these six cases were in no way significantly different from that of the MSU coed. The good-natured officials merely decided to "give those people a break."

Because of the difficulties in enforcing the current

Michigan "scalping" laws, and the loopholes in them, the police and prosecutor have resorted to deterrence of ticket scalpers, rather than equal enforcement.

Admittedly, deterrence can, and probably did, prevent many people from breaking the law in this case.

It is just sad that MSU students are too often the victims of such "deterrence" campaigns, rather than the beneficiaries.

Certainly and potential gains the police might have made by the publicized prosecution of one MSU coed were significantly reduced by the easy-going treatment of the six others.

The police cannot hope to win the respect of Michigan State students, if the students continue continuously appear to be "picked on."

Making an example of a coed, while letting five non-students go free only serves to add more tension to the already strained student-police relations.

THE READERS' MINDS

E. Lansing's prices anger students

To the Editor:

I have just returned from a shopping trip in East Lansing, during which I found prices to be deplorable. These people must think we are all rich, and can afford such expenses. I, for one, can, and will, wait until I'm home to make my purchases, for I know I will get the same articles for less cost.

It is a shame that these East Lansing Stores have to take such advantages of 38,000 ready-made customers. They keep such extravagant prices, realizing that students will shop and buy because of the convenient location. But even though these stores are so suitably located, if they keep on raising their prices, they will lose many customers.

I hope that ASMSU through VISA, or any other program, can do something about this outrageous and growing problem. Something must be done. We cannot let students be exploited, taken advantage of... or will prices continue to rise?

Barbara Weide

Prices too high

To the Editor:

Just a short time ago I took a journey into Lansing and East Lansing to purchase a gift. This will be the last of such trips. The prices are too high on each item. In comparison to Detroit and cities these prices are extremely high. So I have given up. I will no longer buy or even think of buying anything off-campus in the Lansing and East Lansing area. I can't afford it because as you know I'm a student and money is not my largest commodity. What I want to know is why can't something be done? Why are the students of MSU literally robbed by the merchants of our greater campus area? Why are prices so high? No one knows but many care. Why can't something be done because until then things are barely tolerable.

Prices shocking

To the Editor:

Since Michigan is supposed to be a much more agricultural state than New York, I was really shocked to see the difference in food prices between East Lansing and my home. But since I really don't (or shouldn't have to) buy food here, what I'm griping about is the price of clothing. For the same quality of clothing here as at home, I have to pay at least one-third more. Therefore, I have resolved not to buy any clothes whatsoever in East Lansing.

It would seem that by lowering prices, the local merchants should make at least the same, if not more profit, due to the increase in volume of goods that such a change would bring about.

What can't (or doesn't) a committee of students representing MSU meet with the local better business bureau or board of merchants to discuss this problem of prices?

Nancy Bachter
Scotia, N.Y., freshman

Prices disturbing

To the Editors:

I am disturbed at the high prices in East Lansing. I think that 15 cents for a seven-ounce glass of milk at Howard Johnson's is quite high. One can buy a large size pizza in Ann Arbor (just off campus) for a dollar less than for the same pizza at the Gables or the Pit. I feel that this is unfair and that prices in East Lansing should be reduced.

Stephan Berger
Grand Rapids sophomore

Prices unfair

To the Editor:

As I was walking down the street of Grand River, I came across a row of stores. Deciding to go in I bought a pair of slacks, only to find the same pair in Detroit for a lower cost. I decided to eat at Howard Johnson's and found all the prices ten cents higher than in Detroit. I feel that this is not fair. I have a tendency to think this is because across from these stores is a campus of 38,000 people from which they can hoard. There must be some explanation for this. I don't like to be exploited by shop-keepers who live in an area of which I have no vote, I feel that some sort of action should be taken.

Lynne Snyder

What's up?

To the Editor:

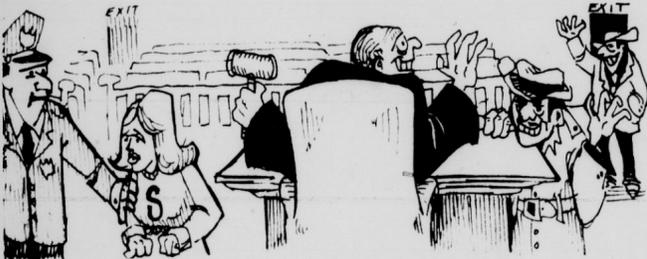

There has been some discussion of the question of prices in East Lansing, and there is bound to be more. I have seen and heard reports of discourtesy and ill-service on the part of East Lansing merchants. As a student of MSU and a resident of Michigan, I would like to know: 1) whether prices are higher in East Lansing and 2) if prices are higher, then why? I am an out-of-state student and, as such, have no basis of comparison.

Letter policy

Policy restatement was not requested

The Board of Trustees again last week put their weight behind the concept of open housing in East Lansing.

No one was squashed.

The trustees passed a resolution at their monthly meeting supporting open housing policies in all communities where MSU employees and students live.

The resolution, itself, changes nothing. It merely restates a policy first passed by the State Board of Agriculture 20 years ago and reiterated again last year by the trustees.

What's more, the resolution is merely a statement of policy. The University is not actively working towards the resolution. The trustees have passed, simply, a paper tiger.

Why, then were the trustees motivated now to make this less than staunch stand?

Board Chairman Warren Huff said the resolution was proposed to defend MSU President John Hannah from criticism leveled at him last summer and to make the position of this University crystal clear. At first glance one would find their timing a bit late.

Actually, the criticism leveled at Hannah was directed at him alone, not the University. Hannah, as an individual simply, failed to lend his support to an open occupancy ordinance in East Lansing. In light of his position on the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, this failure was attacked as morally indefensible.

A stand by the University was never requested. It has been clear, at least on paper, for some time. What was asked, rather, was the support of an individual well acquainted with the benefits and short-comings of open occupancy.

So, another resolution has merely been added to those already on the books at MSU. We might better have titled it a "reminder."

U.S. prepares for attack

DONG HA, South Viet Nam (AP) -- The United States set up anti-aircraft guns just 10 miles south of the demilitarized zone today, and top officers said they were put there because of concern over possible Communist attacks.

The guns were placed on a hill near Dong Ha, the command headquarters for a combined U.S. Marine and South Vietnamese army force larger than an American division.

For several months, American commanders have been talking about the possibility of a Communist air attack on the huge Dong Ha military concentration that has sprung up since July, although the North Vietnamese are not known to have sent their MIG jets into South Viet Nam since the war began.

Britain to ask U.N. aid

LONDON (AP) -- The British government plans to ask the United Nations this weekend for compulsory economic sanctions against Rhodesia if Prime Minister Ian Smith doesn't come to terms by then, government sources reported.

The sources said Prime Minister Harold Wilson apparently hopes the threat of such a request to the Security Council will prompt Smith to accept a settlement of the year-old rebellion by the African territory's white minority.

Kosygin arrives in Paris

PARIS (AP) -- Premier Alexei N. Kosygin arrives Wednesday to plant a new signpost pointing toward cordial relations between France and the Soviet Union.

The initiative has come from President Charles de Gaulle, whose aim is to settle the cold war by "bringing Russia back into Europe."

De Gaulle's courtship of the Soviet Union has produced bilateral cooperation in economics, science, technology and culture.

So far there have been no political agreements and French officials insist none is expected during Kosygin's nine-day visit.

Kosygin is returning De Gaulle's visit to the Soviet Union; President Nikolai Podgorny and Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev will follow next year.

Paul Schiff today: an individual emerges

Paul Schiff

By ANDREW MOLLISON Executive Reporter

Just one year ago he was addressing an Academic Freedom rally on the lawn by Beaumont Tower. Almost everybody here knew that he was the graduate student who went to federal court to fight the University's decision not to re-admit him.

He was re-admitted a month after the rally, his "violations" of the University's literature distribution policies notwithstanding.

Today to fully one-fourth of the student body he is only a dim figure occasionally re-created in upperclassmen's reminiscences of the good old days. To others, the maelstrom of passions, procedures and pronouncements which the lanky, soft-spoken New Yorker aroused is already half-forgotten.

Martyr or mischief-maker? Victim or victor? Student or standard-bearer?

That was what strangers asked themselves last year when they met Paul Schiff.

That is what I asked Schiff when I phoned him at 5 p.m. Tuesday. In a way, he answered. The phone call, which came at 2 p.m. California time, woke him up. Schiff works nights now--at what, he'd prefer not to say.

Schiff, the man who was sometimes accused of (or, inevitably, congratulated on) attempting to turn MSU into another Berkeley, now lives in Oakland, the Bay-side metropolis which borders upon the California college town.

Nobody there, he rather wryly noted, has accused him of trying to turn Berkeley into another MSU.

After he was re-admitted as a graduate student in January, Schiff studied here winter and spring terms.

Since mid-October he has lived on Oakland's Orange St.

The Committee for Student Rights, for whom he dropped out of school for a term to edit "Logos," is gone now. Mike Price, the former MSU student who kept CSR half-alive throughout last year, is now at Berkeley.

Price, Schiff reports, managed to get an account of MSU's ATL controversy placed in the Berkeley Barb.

Of the three ATL instructors involved, Schiff knew only Gary Groat well.

Zeitgeist magazine, which Groat helped publish, used to be printed in the basement of the house next door to the one in which Schiff wrote, edited and printed "Logos."

"Groat used to joke a lot," Schiff remembered. "I hope the loneliness isn't getting to him."

Loneliness? "Sure, You're thought of in terms of a case or a principle. Your individuality is submerged," Schiff said, recalling the days when his own name was a rallying cry rather than an appellation.

"So many people I didn't know had opinions about me, I don't think I have the type of personality that exists easily with publicity."

A pause. "Sometimes it was very depressing."

A longer pause.

"To tell you the truth I haven't really tried to look at the case retrospectively before," he said slowly. "When I was involved in this thing, it was a major part of my life, so when I finally got re-admitted, I just wanted to forget about it."

Then, with a half-laugh, "You just woke me up, remember. It'll take me time to recover."

We talked about football. He saw the Notre Dame game on TV. "Great, really great. We should have been No. 1."

Q. Why? A. It shows that there's still fighting spirit in the faculty and students. Maybe more than there was in my case. Look, I think I can sum it up.

Q. Do you think your victory had anything to do with this year's ATL controversy?

A. Not at all. I've talked to people out here who think that from a civil liberties perspective the case was significant. Of course, it could have been more worthwhile if it'd gone all the way to the Supreme Court.

Q. Do you think your victory had anything to do with this year's ATL controversy?

A. I'd like to think so. In a way, I doubt it. Last year's distribution controversy with The Paper - that was connected, though, I don't know the merits of this year's controversy, but I was glad to see you had a thousand people at a rally.

Q. Why? A. It shows that there's still fighting spirit in the faculty and students. Maybe more than there was in my case. Look, I think I can sum it up.

Q. My case isn't an influence so much as it is a sign. It's a sign of a growing change--not just in East Lansing--all across the country. Apparently, people are developing an unwillingness to say, "it's done," and then play dead.

Johnson's tax increase decision could depend on easier money

WASHINGTON (AP) -- President Johnson's decision on a tax increase may turn, not only on Viet Nam war costs, but on whether the Federal Reserve Board promises easier money to credit-hungry business, congressional sources said Wednesday.

"I can't imagine the President asking for a tax hike without a firm understanding with the Board," said one source close to both executive and congressional tax planners. He asked not to have the comment attributed to him.

One major employment-creating industry, housing, is in recession while the economy generally continues to flourish.

Many observers attribute the sag in new housing starts to mounting interest rates and keen competition for money since the Federal Reserve raised the discount rate and the rates allowed on banks' time deposits almost a year ago. These actions tended to shrink the credit money supply.

If a tax increase turns out to have too chilling an effect on the economy, easier money--particularly for the housing industry--could serve as an offsetting stimulus.

Whatever the decision on a general tax increase may be, the congressional outlook is for passage of an increase in Social Security benefits and taxes such as Johnson recommended. The effect of such an increase on the inflation-deflation balance is considered neutral.

The higher payroll tax, especially if it comes on top of a boost in individual and corporate income tax, might tend to cool the economy. But the increased flow to pensioners of ready spending money, would, planners think, cancel this effect.

The reduction or postponement of $5.3 billion in federal programs, including $3 billion in savings between now and July 1, which Johnson announced in general terms Tuesday, is expected to check the expansion of administration undertakings rather than drastically cut back any.

As for the prospect for Federal Reserve cooperation in a flexible fiscal-monetary undertaking to avoid inflation without causing recession, congressional expectations are reasonably bright.

In its interest-raising action last December, the Federal Reserve dramatically demonstrated the independence it often asserts. It took the steps in the face of direct and public pleas by the Treasury that they be held off at least until budget discussions were complete.

TO ENTERTAIN POW

Dick Gregory plans trip to Hanoi; may defy gov't.

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) -- Negro comedian Dick Gregory said Wednesday he plans to leave Monday for Hanoi to see if he can entertain U.S. prisoners in North Viet Nam during the Christmas holidays. Gregory told a news conference he had not received State Department permission to make the trip, didn't intend to ask for it and would willingly go to jail afterward if required.

He said if arrangements can be worked out for him to visit prisoner-of-war camps in North Viet Nam he will return to this country to get his wife, Lillian, and two oldest children, Michele, 7, and Lynne, 5, and take them back to Hanoi. The children are at home in Chicago.

Gregory told the news conference just before he and his wife began the third day of their trial on state charges of illegal net fishing in connection with Indian protest "fish-ins" 10 months ago.

He said he had received word through British philosopher Bertrand Russell that Hanoi had given his clearance to visit the North Vietnamese capital. Russell is a staunch pacifist.

Gregory said he was not going to Hanoi as an American "but as a human being who rejects war as a means of solving disputes between nations."

He said he would only entertain prisoners, not active fighting men of either side, because of his rejection of war.

Gregory, who does social satire, said the trip was not a publicity stunt and said that to prove it he would give up appearances as a paid comic for two years afterward.

He said he will fly to Hanoi by way of London and Paris.

Crash victim improves

While one of the two students involved in an auto accident Saturday remained critically injured at Sparrow Hospital Wednesday, the other is listed in good condition.

Daniel T. Bzovi, Trenton senior, has been in critical condition since his hospitalization after his car skidded and rolled 800 feet from the road in Williamston early Saturday morning.

Paul M. Bentley, Park Ridge, Ill., junior, is now in good condition, after being in fair condition since Saturday, a hospital spokesman said.

Board, city agree on open housing

The MSU Board of Trustees' endorsement of open housing is in absolute agreement with the policy of East Lansing, according to a resolution passed May 17, 1965, by the City Council. Mayor Gordon L. Thomas said that the City Council resolution, like the trustees' endorsement, reaffirms a long-standing support of equal housing opportunities for citizens, regardless of race, color, religion or national origin.

But East Lansing's resolution makes two qualifications that did not appear in the trustees' statement.

The City Council resolved that it "condemns discrimination," and endorses efforts of the State Civil Rights Commission to assure the "fullest implementation of the civil rights provisions of the state constitution."

"It is extremely important to differentiate between an ordinance and a policy on this issue," said Mayor Thomas.

East Lansing's equal housing policy has been in effect for more than two years, but a similar city ordinance has not yet been adopted.

"The MSU Board of Trustees was not asking for an ordinance," Mayor Thomas stressed. "In fact, their resolution and East Lansing's present policy are almost identical."

Councilman Max Strother also noticed the similarity between the two statements, and in the sincerity of both bodies in adopting such policies.

"We want very much to maintain equal housing in East Lansing," he said. "It just seems that there are always a few who want to make an issue of it -- and they're the ones who get the attention."

Councilman Mary Sharp noted that both the East Lansing policy and the trustees' statement were endorsements of former stands.

"It is a good idea to periodically re-stress our stand on issues like this," she said.

The Model Twenty-Plus

So beautiful, KLH put it on a pedestal

Here's a complete stereo music system that combines superb sound with beauty and flexibility.

The unique new Twenty-Plus is three handsome oiled walnut units mounted on classically beautiful white pedestals. One unit contains an automatic turntable, an amplifier and an FM stereo tuner. The other two units are speaker systems.

The Twenty-Plus is the most flexible stereo music system you can buy. You can place the three units side by side to form a single piece of furniture—a focal point for your room. Or you can separate the units and use the speakers as end tables. But not ordinary tables. The grille cloth panels snap out easily and you can replace them with any porous fabric in any color, pattern and texture—so they coordinate with your room.

But beauty and flexibility are only part of the story. There's the superb KLH sound. The Twenty-Plus is a total music system designed for the discriminating listener. It has a unique combination of the most advanced solid state amplifier and FM stereo tuner; an automatic turntable, custom-built for KLH by Garrard; a Pickering magnetic cartridge with diamond stylus; and a pair of KLH acoustic-suspension multi-speaker systems.

The entire system is factory balanced—matched to perfection. And most important, there's KLH quality throughout. No compromises, no shortcuts.

The Twenty-Plus by KLH is a pleasure to the eye and ear. It's truly the most beautiful sound you can buy.

'S' cage proof needed in Western game tonight

By BOB HORNING
State News Sports Writer

An 85-82 loss to Western Michigan in the basketball opener last year indicated another normal year for the Spartans. But a quick turnaround resulted in a 17-7 record and the Western game was almost looked upon as being good for the team. The Spartans then had to prove themselves.

MSU Coach John Benington said he would try to win the opener tonight against Western anyway. "Go Broncos Go," probably wouldn't sound so good to him.

Actually, as Benington pointed out, this game is about the only chance the team will have to improve over last season. "Our players remember last year and will want to make amends."

Benington will be facing his assistant coach of last year, Sonny Means.

"This will cause a little more of a strain," Benington said. "I'll have to think about the outcome more. Especially since our wives will be sitting together at the game."

Which ends all thoughts of either coach of running up the score.

At the Rebounders luncheon Wednesday, Means, as guest speaker, matched his team with MSU. He rated his guards, Joe Kramer and Ron Kidney, even with John Bailey and Steve Rymal.

Kidney, a 6-3 junior college transfer from Grand Rapids, was the national junior college scoring leader with a 31 point per game average.

At forwards, the Broncos will have Reggie Lacey and Gene Ford, who was ineligible last year. Lacey, the only starter who faced the Spartans last year, scored 28 points.

Benington said Ford has less experience but greater potential than Ajac Triplett, Western's star who scored 17 points in the game a year ago.

While Means ranks these two about equal with Lee Lafayette and Art Baylor, he gives MSU a slight advantage at center where it will be Matthew Aitch against Clarence Harville.

Both coaches agreed that baskets one team didn't count on will decide the winner. So, the benches could play an important part, Benington said.

"Since both teams operate similarly on offense and defense, baskets may come hard for both," he said. "We know their plays and they know ours."

Benington said the game should be a close one and should be a good test for Baylor and Lafayette since they both tend to get into foul trouble.

Whether MSU is able to run more this year and utilize a fast break may be answered against a quick Western team.

Last season a slow break from the gate upheld expectations.

This year, a fast start will be necessary for the Spartans to live up to pre-season predictions.

John Benington, MSU basketball coach, and Sonny Means appear here as coaching mates, but they won't be looking this same way tonight as Benington's team takes on Means's Western Michigan squad in Jenison Fieldhouse. Means was an assistant under Benington here last year and has since taken the head coaching post at Western.

'Old Dad's' challenge

By LARRY WERNER
State News Sports Editor

Spartan Stadium looks today much like it did a few weeks ago. But students can't earn two bucks an hour for digging the stadium from under the drifting white stuff this week.

The athletic department will let the snow fall where it may. Football is dead for another season, hopes of a national championship plucked from the Spartan's grip on a green battlefield now white.

With the approach of winter, sports fans prefer the indoors. Tonight, the Spartan cagers, consensus pre-season picks for the Big Ten basketball championship, officially slam the door on football. It's basketball time in Jenison Fieldhouse.

MSU is favored by nearly everyone to dominate the Big Ten. The Spartans have been included nationally in the elegant company of such powerhouses as UCLA, Duke, Kentucky, Texas Western and other "basketball schools." But why?

The answer lies in the basketball mind of a tall, thin, gentleman who could easily be mistaken for a preacher. He speaks softly, when he's not on the sidelines of a basketball court.

His name is John Benington. Benington wandered into a tough spot when he took over for veteran Spartan Coach Fordey Anderson at the beginning of last season. He made the job look easy by boosting the team from a last-place finish in '65 to second last season.

He beat champion Michigan on the final day of the season. Now the writers, the coaches and the armchair experts are picking MSU to emerge as a national power on the hardwood, when a mere two years ago, they were a national joke.

And Benington, naturally enough, doesn't like being picked as the pre-season champ. No coach likes to be on top before the season even starts.

But it's Benington's own fault that the pressure is on. He could have had a mediocre season last winter. That would have been enough after Anderson's sad, but disastrous finale.

People would have been satisfied with third or fourth place, but John Benington, father of nine, is used to doing things in a big way. He had the audacity to lead the conference for part of the season, then finish as runner-up.

The rewards were plenty for Benington's Spartans and Michigan State. Basketball was revived from attendance figures numbering only a few thousand at some '65 games, to near-capacity crowds in several '66 contests. "Go State Go," was heard again in Jenison.

The rewards have been reaped. Now one of the unpleasanties of winning—playing the favorite role—must be assumed by Benington and Co.

It will be a tough role to play. Perhaps Lee Lafayette and Art Baylor will not be able to take up where Stan Washington and Bill Curtis left off.

Few coaches are more natural favorites than the tall fellow they call "Old Dad."

Duffy Daugherty combines strategic knowhow with a unique personality in football. And Benington seems to have many of the same qualities. Benington's players love him. He has a sense of humor. And his affectionate pat-on-the-head for his players, during time outs, is a crowd-pleaser.

But they say everybody loves a winner. The Spartan coach probably wouldn't have been picked coach of the week after losing his debut to Western Michigan, last year.

The pressure is on. There was little expected of Benington at the beginning of last season. This season, the sky's the limit.

The first challenge, in a year of challenges for John Benington, is tonight at 8.

Major leaguers want pay boost

PITTSBURGH (UPI) - Major league baseball players are feeling that cost of living pinch, too.

They asked the owners to raise the minimum major league salary from the present $7,000 at the baseball meetings Wednesday.

Marvin Miller, counsel to the players, did not reveal how much the players are asking the minimum be raised but it was believed they are seeking a boost to $10,000.

"I'd rather not get into that because we still are in the negotiating stage," said Miller, when asked how much of a boost the players want. "I will say this for background purposes, though. The $7,000 minimum is now nine years old."

Wrestlers have talent

Wrestling Coach Grady Peninger figures he is in an "enviable position" as he looks forward to the fast-approaching season.

The Spartans won the conference title last year, and four men are returning who won their weight classes and two who finished first and second in the past two seasons.

Leading the returnees is Don Behm, one of the seniors who has placed first and second in the Big Ten championships the past two seasons and was third in the NCAA finals last year. He will once again be in the 130-pound weight class.

Others who won their weight classes in the '66 championships are Dale Anderson, 137 class; Dale Carr, 145; and Mike Bradley, 177.

Bradley will not be participating in team's first match of the year, this Saturday here against the Air Force Academy, because he is a member of the Spartan football team and has not yet gotten into proper physical condition for the wrestling season.

Others doubling as gridders and wrestlers include Jack Zindell, a sophomore and Jeff Richardson, standout defensive lineman for the football team and one of the most feared heavyweights in the conference.

George Webster, Charles "Bubba" Smith and Gene Washington were honored recently at the Michigan State Football Bust. UPI poll honors 5 Spartans

NEW YORK (UPI) - Notre Dame's national champions with four players, and Michigan State, with three, dominated the 1966 United Press International All-America football team announced Wednesday.

Selected by the ballots of 267 football writers and broadcasters, the country's No. 1 team paced guard Tom Regner and halfback Nick Eddy on the offensive team and tackle Pete Duranko and linebacker Jim Lynch on the defensive eleven.

End Gene Washington on offense and end Bubba Smith and halfback George Webster on defense were the players honored from Michigan State, the nation's No. 2 ranked team.

Not only did those two football powerhouses win the most positions on the mythical teams, but five of their seven players also received the most votes.

In the strongest showing ever made in the UPI balloting for All-America teams, Smith came within seven votes of being an unanimous choice. He received 260 out of a possible 267 votes. Webster received 210 and Lynch 202.

It marked the first time in the years of platoon football that defensive stars, rather than the more highly publicized backs, led the voting. Even on the offensive team, a lineman—Regner—was the vote leader with 189. Eddy led the backs in the balloting with 183 votes.

Here are the players chosen as the best in the land in the only All-America team selected by the direct vote of football writers and broadcasters:

OFFENSE
Ends—WASHINGTON and Jack Clancy, Michigan. Tackles—Cecil Dowdy, Alabama, and Ron Yary, Southern California. Guards—Regner and Laverne Ailers, Nebraska. Center—Jim Breland, Georgia Tech. Quarterback—Steve Spurrier, Florida. Backs—Eddy; Mel Farr, U.C.L.A., and Floyd Little, Syracuse.

DEFENSE
Ends—SMITH and Tom Greenlee, Washington. Tackles—Duranko and Loyd Phillips, Arkansas. Middle Guard—Wayne Meylan, Nebraska. Linebackers—Lynch and Paul Naumoff, Tennessee. Halfbacks—WEBSTER; Nate Shaw, Southern California; Tom Beier, Miami (Fla.); and Martin Bercher, Arkansas.

In addition to the four players on the first team, Notre Dame also placed five players on the second team, giving the Fighting Irish nine places on the 44-man squad. Michigan State had two players on the second team, giving the Big Ten champions a total of five places. The second team:

OFFENSE
Ends—Jim Seymour, Notre Dame and Ray Perkins, Alabama. Tackles—Wayne Mass, Clemson and Jack Calcaterra, Purdue. Guards—Edgar Chandler,

Georgia and Del Williams, Florida State. Center—George Goeddeke, Notre Dame. Quarterback—Griese, Purdue. Backs—CLINT JONES, MICHIGAN STATE; Ray McDonald, Idaho, and Len Snow, Georgia Tech.

DEFENSE
Ends—Alan Page, Notre Dame, and Sam Harris, Colorado. Tackles—George Patton, Georgia and Kevin Hardy, Notre Dame. Middle Guard—John Lagrone, Southern Methodist. Linebackers—CHARLES THORNHILL, MICHIGAN STATE, and Townsend Clarke, Army. Halfbacks—Bobby Johns, Alabama; Tom Schoen, Notre Dame; Larry Wachholtz, Nebraska, and Lynn Hughes, Georgia.

Spartan gymnastic squad: young, experienced, deep

By ROBERTA YAFIE
State News Sports Writer

The three-dimensional Michigan State gymnastics squad—young, experienced and deep—looks good from any angle, especially when you're viewing floor exercise, rings, side horse and vault.

Those are this season's power events, and the men at the controls should be providing championship punch. The first test will come Saturday at Oak Park, Ill., in the Midwest open meet.

Michigan State is expected to finish second in the nation this year behind always sensational Southern Illinois, the reigning NCAA champ. The Salukis have depth galore.

In the Big Ten, Spartan Coach George Szypula rates Michigan, the conference champ, on top, followed by Iowa. The Wolves lost only two men, Rich Blanton and Ned Duke. The Hawks are said to be fielding the finest team ever assembled in their history of gymnastics.

Iowa has a new coach, Sam Baillie, a former Hawkeye star and coach at Arizona, where his teams won four straight conference titles.

Illinois, with a strong corps of juniors, is also a possible threat. The other four schools have made many improvements, especially Indiana, which Szypula says could be the Big Ten dark horse.

Another coaching turnover came at Ohio State, where Jim Sweeney, former Washington State coach, took over as mentor.

The Spartans lost five lettermen, with NCAA and Big Ten champ Jim Curzi heading the list, along with Ted Wilson, John Rohs, Bob Cordaro and Ray Strobel, but return with a well-balanced 17-man unit for '67.

Captain Ron Aure is the only senior. Other returning champions are Big Ten title winners Dave Croft, Dave Thor and Ed Gunny, all of whom are juniors. Gunny also won the NCAA rings crown.

Headlining the sophomore standouts is Toby Towson, from Blue Mound, Ill., the National AAU floor exercise champion.

Towson, Thor and Aure are the top three on floor exercise, backed up by Bill Diggins, Pittsburgh junior, and Norm Haynie, a sophomore from Los Angeles.

Haynie will be working all-around, alternating with Thor. Thor, who earned the Big Ten all-around, side horse and floor exercise championships his first season, is the Spartans' key man.

Szypula noted that Thor has improved tremendously in the vault over last year, and that his parallel bars work is looking very fine. Thor is also a capable rings performer.

Along with Thor, the vault features Aure and Towson.

The rings event is loaded again this season. Joining Larry Goldberg, Gunny and Croft is sophomore Dan Kinsey.

Szypula commented that at this point, Goldberg looks like the leading ring man.

"But just like last year," he pointed out, "the event won't go according to the script. Kinsey is moving right up there." High and parallel bars, consistently outstanding events for MSU for many seasons, fall a notch below.

"We don't yet have the mastery that Curzi exuded," Szypula said. "We have two tough men in Thor and Gunny on high bar. I feel that Haynie will fit right in, but being a sophomore it's hard to predict. Cliff Diehl is a strong fourth man."

Diehl, another sophomore from Butler, Pa., which produced Curzi, Croft and side horse man Jerry Moore, has solidified on parallels to give the Spartans a good one-two punch.

"He's stressed parallels and hasn't been able to get ready on high bar, but should be set by the season's start," said Szypula. "He's also a good all-around man, and can be called on if needed."

Dennis Smith and Haynie are expected to fight it out for the third spot on parallel bars, with Diggins helping out in the fourth man.

Smith has been doing excellent side horse work, according to his coach, and should add valuable points behind Thor. Already in the third spot is sophomore Ed Witzke from Oak Park, Mich. Witzke has the nice, clean style of a top side horse performer, Szypula said.

Keith Sterner is the leading trampolinist, but Ray Walker, a junior from Winnetka, is expected to be a strong threat to Sterner's No. 1 spot. Thor and Aure will also be called on to help out.

Walker, a transfer student from Elmhurst Junior College, has had a good deal of high school experience. He didn't compete at Elmhurst, however, and so lacks the competitive experience.

Concentration is shown by Cliff Diehl as he goes through a practice session on the parallel bars. Diehl, a sophomore on the gymnastics team here, was Pennsylvania high school champ in 1965.

Bathgate sent to minors

DETROIT (UPI) - Veteran National Hockey League star Andy Bathgate was ordered to take a vacation in the minors Wednesday—and he didn't even complain about it.

"I knew I wasn't doing any good," Bathgate said after the announcement. "And maybe I'll be able to find myself after a few weeks down there."

Bathgate was sent to the Detroit Red Wings' farm club in Pittsburgh. Detroit Coach Sid Abel said the reason was that "Bathgate is supposed to be a goal scorer, but he's not scoring any goals."

Late Wednesday John Mitchell, the Red Wings' assistant general manager, predicted the move would only be temporary.

"Andy's not going down there for good," said Mitchell. "He'll be able to play a lot down there, and get to score a lot of goals. If he does that, Andy will get his confidence back, and then we'll bring him back to Detroit."

Mitchell said that Bathgate has been in a slump, after only scoring 15 goals all last season and just three so far this year.

The 34-year-old Bathgate is a 12-year veteran of the NHL, playing mostly with the New York Rangers, but also with Toronto and Detroit.

PROGRAM OUT OF ORDER

Board refuses to sponsor new Human Rights Week

A program for Human Rights Week (Dec. 5-10) developed by Art Tung, ASMSU member-at-large, was denied sponsorship by the student board Tuesday night.

The board ruled the program out of order because Tung's committee was established only as a study group to investigate the possibility of reinstating the campus Human Relations Commission.

Tung, a member of the East

Lansing Human Relations Commission, was a member of the campus commission last year until it was dissolved spring term.

Tung objected to the board's action because the board had been aware that he was preparing programs for the week. He had mentioned them when he asked the board to approve of Human Rights Week, Nov. 8.

Jim Carbine, ASMSU vice chairman, objected to Tung's theme for the week, which was "Student Faculty Relations." Carbine called this a "mockery of human relations."

The programs, including student-faculty panels, faculty as guests in residence halls and an all-University open house with dedication ceremonies of the Student Services Lounge to James Stefanoff, have been dropped because they do not have ASMSU sponsorship.

"The board had every right to do it," Tung said Wednesday. "They are technically correct." "But the board is not only a formal body," he said. "If all action was limited to Tuesday night meetings, student government would progress very little."

Tung referred to criticism by Jim Graham, ASMSU Chairman, of the members-at-large for not communicating to him about projects they are working on.

"As it was pointed out at the meeting," Tung said, "it is a problem which extends into the past -- not getting together on committees the members-at-large are involved in and coordinating them."

He mentioned that members-at-large get involved with "pet projects."

ASMSU gives Young fund $500

ASMSU donated $500 to the Ralph Young Scholarship Fund at its meeting Tuesday night.

"Mr. (Biggie) Munn has always been very cooperative with us," Terry Hassold, ASMSU Cabinet President, said, "and because we receive use of Jensen Fieldhouse without charge for Popular Entertainment shows, I think it is appropriate that we donate money to a fund Mr. Munn is closely associated with."

Any plot OK for 'U' film

The script contest for the all-University movie is not necessarily confined to plots involving MSU, Rod Wasserman, Birmingham junior and chairman of the movie committee, said.

The movie will be produced by MSU and will involve students, but must not necessarily pertain to MSU, he said.

The contest deadline has been extended to Jan. 13 so students may think about a plot idea over the Christmas break.

The contest requires only a plot line and character sketches, Wasserman said. The script will be written later.

The committee has written to Ohio State University for information on a successful movie program conducted there. It is also writing to movie industry associations for information and possible support and is looking for a faculty adviser.

The committee will meet again Dec. 7 in 308 Student Services. Any interested persons are welcome to attend.

OFFERS CAREER BUILDING OPPORTUNITIES

When looking for employment the young graduate engineer considers many things: challenging assignments, good salary, benefits, a company in which to learn and grow—both professionally and as a leader of men. All good things come with responsible growth.

Knowledge and experience only come in time. At Ebasco this time is greatly accelerated because the graduate engineer becomes associated with professional men who have the experience and the knowledge and who have a definite and desired interest in providing the young graduate with the tools for professional development.

The professional engineers at Ebasco, headquartered in New York City, have made the firm a world leader—a growing company that has worked in over 60 countries and in every section of the United States.

An Ebasco man might find himself building a nuclear power plant in Connecticut or engineering a hydroelectric development for Japan or he might watch the setting sun in the Andes while engineering and constructing a transmission line. The Ebasco engineer has been building for America and the world for the past 60 years—in almost every aspect of industrial growth.

A formalized program of development is established for the graduate engineer at Ebasco. In addition, the company has an education assistance program that reimburses the graduate for his tuition if he wishes to continue his education.

Right now we have career openings for recent graduate electrical, mechanical, civil and nuclear engineers.

Our interviewer will be on campus Thursday, December 8 TALK TO HIM AND BUILD YOUR CAREER WITH EBASCO. Arrange an appointment now with your Placement Director.

8 crewmen taken off ship ATL protesters move to new issues

ALPENA, Mich. (AP) — Eight seamen, who were plucked from a German freighter as it began breaking up in a Lake Huron gale, returned to dry land Wednesday and said their stay had not been too bad.

"We were wet and cold, but we were not too badly off," said Capt. Ernst-George Steinbeck.

"We were well equipped with clothing and food.

"We had good training for this sort of thing," he added. "We did not give up."

An unexpected pause in a gale-force snow squall gave a Coast Guard helicopter time to lift the men from the freighter Nordmeer as she began to crack amidships in the storm-whipped lake Tuesday.

The squall closed in again shortly after the last man had been pulled off the steel-laden vessel, aground since Nov. 19 on Thunder Bay Shoal.

"God was real nice to us," said Lt. Jack Rittichier of Barberton, Ohio, copilot.

The ATL issue is dead and it's time to move on to recommendations on the academic freedom report, teacher rating systems and coffee houses, the United Students decided Tuesday.

About 115 students met in the Union Tuesday night to elect a steering committee and talk out what to do next now that the Bessey Hall vigil is ended.

The United Students, a registered student organization, sponsored the first Orange Horse rally and the subsequent 24-hour Bessey vigil protesting "academic degeneracy" and the dismissal of the three ATL professors.

The students present at Tuesday's meeting elected W.C. Blanton, Hodgenville, Ky., senior, as spokesman-chairman for their steering committee.

They moved to set up four temporary subcommittees.

One committee is to find out what work is being done within the University on a professor evaluation system that would be distributed to students. The committee will study the practicality of United Students taking their own professor poll and distributing it.

The second committee is to study the possibility of sponsoring faculty-student seminars and of starting an off-campus coffee house where students, faculty, and perhaps even general public could gather for informal discussion.

Another committee will draw up recommendations on the judicial and student rights sections of the academic freedom report.

The students also decided to continue publishing an internal newsletter and to order orange buttons with a black "US" printed on them. The buttons would be put on sale.

Those elected to the steering committee were Dave Hasenauer, Valley City, Ohio, sophomore, Douglas Brunger, Grand Ledge senior, Chris Loveridge, Kirkwood, Mo., sophomore, and Mike Elkins, Southfield junior.

Educators to hold workshop here

Over 400 teachers representing units of the Michigan Educational Assn. (MEA) throughout lower Michigan will converge on the Union Friday to begin a two-day workshop on professional negotiations in public education.

Arnold W. Wolpert, director of the urban services division of the National Education Assn., will keynote the conference at its first general session at 7:15 p.m. Friday. Wolpert will discuss the needs in professional education in 1967-68.

The importance of preparation to negotiation will be discussed Saturday morning with Theodore Swift, MEA legal counsel, serving as chairman. Development of negotiating skills will also be discussed.

Don Giese, MEA leadership training coordinator, pointed out that negotiation by teachers and local boards of education provides communication between the school and the community, which results in improved educational programs.

Graham, Plante to attend council

ASMSU Chairman Jim Graham and Secretary Hank Plante left today for the Big Ten Student Body Presidents Council at Indiana University.

Among topics for discussion for the council are the action of the student government at the University of Michigan, academic rights and the role of the student in University government, Graham said.

Graham is chairman of this year's council and has appointed Plante as secretary of the council, "because it fits in with his duties here," he said.

The president's council has met biannually since 1951. MSU was selected last winter as the headquarters until 1969. The chairman of ASMSU is thus automatically chairman of the council.

"The value of the council is in the interaction with other student governments," Graham said. It also passes resolutions, and Graham expects some will be passed from the topics of discussion.

Squire Beaudricourt (played by Dean Kyburz) accuses his steward (Dale Rose, seated) of stealing eggs the steward says Beaudricourt's hen has not laid, in the opening scene from "Saint Joan." The Performing Arts Company production of the Shaw play will run through Saturday at Fairchild Theater.

SAINT JOAN

Good opening night promises worthy tour

By JON CLARK State News Reviewer

The Performing Arts Company's production of George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" will be going on tour throughout Michigan and Canada during winter term. At Fairchild Theater, through December 4, MSU playgoers may attend the successful preview of what will surely be a highly successful road trip. Under the able direction of Frank Rutledge, the opening night production of "Saint Joan" was adequately and, at times magnificently, staged. Some especially fine acting by Dean Kyburz, Mack Miller, and Anthony Heald did justice to typically lengthy and thought-provoking Shavian dialogues and soliloquies. The set, consisting of an imaginatively utilized background scrim and an angular and functional wooden foundation, and the bright, rich costuming were well-conceived and served to thoroughly enhance the performance.

After a bothersome introduction, and a competently done but rather uninteresting and affectedly comic first act, the scenes of the betrayal and the trial of Joan of Arc gripped the audience with inspired acting and direction. The final scene of her sanctification was notable for its sardonic comment on the social acceptance of martyrs and rebels, though not particularly for its presentation by the PAC.

The play moved along briskly enough, but its three-hour length seemed to over-tax the rather unresponsive opening-night audience. There were surprisingly few garbled lines, considering the length of the play and the nervousness of opening night. The cast was obviously well-prepared and confident of its ability.

Problems of the play included a supposedly necessary, but highly distracting, narration provided at various intervals by

Pope warns of misinterpretation

VATICAN CITY (AP) - Pope Paul VI today warned Roman Catholics against "arbitrary and offensive" interpretations of the Catholic faith made recently throughout the world.

Speaking at a general audience in St. Peter's, the Pope said that in these days "the faith is the target of many negations and controversies even among believers."

Scott J. Weldin, the use of weak music, which sounded as if it was coming from a Victrola in the auditorium and lent an almost satirical tone to several unsatirical scenes, and the terrible acoustics of Fairchild Theater compounded by the placement of actors, in several scenes, with their backs to the audience. Another primary problem was Karen Grossman's portrayal of Joan, which lacked the convincing quality which must support the numerous references in the play to "the dangerous power in her outbursts."

However, as a whole, the production was more than adequately directed, acted and staged, effectively complementing the excellence of Shaw's writing. The tour of "Saint Joan" should bring much credit to MSU's Performing Arts Company.

LSD lecture provokes ire

By DENICE ANDERSON State News Staff Writer

"Those who sit and listen to him are no better than he is - a dirty Red!"

This reaction to the recent appearance of Timothy Leary on campus was sent in a letter addressed simply to: "MSU, The Student Government."

"Timothy Leary, of all people! Fifteen years ago I was a member of the party. I still have their little red book. Their plans are working and it's people like yourselves who are playing right into their hands."

"Oh no, you say! Yes, that is what I said when I read all about their plans to degrade our colleges by introducing dope (by lectures)."

"This man is not out to defend his crusade. He's out to do no good - orders from the 'party head.' Let's all hope that none of you young people join the LSD cult."

The sender of the letter refused to identify him or herself. The return address was Battle Creek. "I think it's ridiculous," said Jim Graham, chairman of ASMSU.

"It's the kind of letter that perks up your day," commented Jim Carbine, vice-chairman of ASMSU.

Gary Posner, ASMSU's vice-president of academic affairs, mentioned that it is almost sad that some people can be so completely warped in their outlook on things.

"Just because dope has been considered bad in the past doesn't mean it's going to be bad in the future," he said.

"There was no basis for the letter to stand on," Posner continued.

Personal contact with Leary when he was on campus showed that he is definitely out to advance only his own cause, noted Posner.

There is nobody being him - pushing him, Posner said.

In another letter addressed to student government, a group of former drug addicts, "saved by God's grace," volunteered to come to campus and "correct the false theses of the medical and other professions that there is no hope of cure for drug addiction."

The group consists of men who have found the cure, men who had been in and out of mental institutions and jails, some for as many as 18 years.

They would present a "real life drama depicting the horrors and tragedy of drug addiction."

No invitation was extended.

130,000 lbs. weekly hampers laundry

By DONNA CUMMINGS State News Staff Writer

Included in the more than 130,000 pounds of weekly wash processed by Michigan State's laundry are some 50,000 bath towels, 40,000 sheets, 20,000 pillow cases, 4,000 dresses, 3,500 table clothes and napkins, 3,000 shirts, 2,500 pairs of trousers and dresses and 2,000 bus coats, reported Chester Harger, laundry manager.

"Few people realize the extent of our laundry service," commented Harger who explained that "MSU's laundry services 210 University departments including Olin Health Center and Kellogg Center."

Upon their arrival at the laundry all soiled articles are counted and garments placed in large nylon nets before laundering to prevent tangling and tearing, according to Harger.

Next the laundry is washed in one of six large machines. Using three 900-pound washers and three smaller machines, the laundry washes a capacity of 3,000 pounds of material an hour, according to Harger.

Upon completion of the wash process, the laundry is dumped into large nylon slings and then dropped into one of four huge extractors to remove excessive water. Next, most articles are placed in one of two 200-pound dryers.

"Flatware items such as sheets and table clothes are not dried," said Harger, who explained that such items are run through one of three flat-work ironers while still damp.

Two of these ironers have automatic folder attachments, according to Harger, so they produce ironed and folded articles at the other end of the machine. Using these machines, laundry personnel can process 12-14 sheets and table clothes per minute, according to the manager.

Automatic machines also press trousers and shirts. An operator places articles on the machines, presses a button, and the machines press the garment. Efficient employees can press 45 pairs of trousers or 75 shirts an hour, according to the manager.

Two auto-matic machines press mostly dresses, commented Harger. Several individual ironers compose this system. Alternating presses iron the top and skirts of the dresses, he explained.

Clean laundry is counted and assigned to different hampers for distribution to various campus points. Most locations receive weekly pick-up and delivery service. Some points, however, such as Olin and Kellogg Center receive daily service.

The laundry owns 95 per cent of all the garments and linen it processes, according to Harger, who says that some minor repairs such as replacing buttons and mending are done on the premises.

The laundry business, as other businesses, has peak months. More laundry is processed during October and November than any other months, according to Harger, who attributes the increase to the use of linen by campus guests on home football game weekends.

COUNCIL APPEALS

Thant believed ready to accept another term

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., P. — The belief mounted among U.N. diplomats Wednesday that U. Thant has decided to accept another term as secretary-general, but there was no confirmation from him or any official U.N. source.
 "He will stay" was the confident prediction of many close associates of the 57-year-old Burmese, who has been the U.N.'s chief executive for five years. None would add that they knew for sure.
 Members of the 15-nation Security Council met informally to draft an appeal acceptable to Thant, who has been under constant pressure to remain on the job ever since he announced on Sept. 1 that he would not offer himself for another term. He agreed later in the month to stay on until the end of the current General Assembly, expected on Dec. 20. U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg, president of the council for November, was taking a leading role in persuading Thant to remain.
 Informants said he drafted an appeal to Thant saying that the present international situation and problems confronting the United Nations require Thant's strong leadership. Goldberg presented the appeal to other council members for their approval.

Board ignores ATL issue to avoid fight

To avoid any unnecessary controversy or criticism the MSU Board of Trustees omitted names of non-tenured faculty not being rehired from the agenda for its meeting last Wednesday said Jack Breslin, secretary of the board.
 Breslin said that the board acts only on matters of a positive nature, such as hiring new faculty or awarding promotions. The board's bylaws do not require any action be taken when a non-tenured faculty member's contract is allowed to terminate.
 President John A. Hannah emphasized that the instructors are not being fired, but merely not rehired, the difference being that board action is required on firings.
 Previously the agenda for the board has included a section listing the names of those non-tenured faculty members who were not being rehired, but Breslin said that this was more or less solely for the information of the board members.
 The agenda for last Wednesday's meeting did contain a list, including the names of W. Gary Groat, Ken Lawless and Robert S. Fogarty, when they were originally distributed. Later, however, all copies of the agenda were recalled on an order from Breslin's office and the list was snipped out.

Speck ruled to stand trial

CHICAGO P. — A Circuit Court jury decided Wednesday that Richard F. Speck is mentally competent to stand trial on charges of murdering eight student nurses.
 The jury of seven men and five women was directed to bring in such a verdict by Judge Herbert C. Paschen after hearing expert psychiatric testimony. The action came after two days of hearings.
 Temporary insanity is still a possible defense plea, however.

GIs shell S. Viet village

SAIGON, South Viet Nam P. — A U.S. artillery battery killed three Vietnamese villagers and wounded 14 Wednesday in a mistaken shelling of a friendly community, Tan Uyen, that just five months ago was accidentally bombed by a U.S. Air Force F100 Super Sabre jet.
 Vietnamese headquarters reported a Viet Cong atrocity in the Mekong delta, the murder of four civilians in a Communist prison camp from which government troops freed 14 others bound in chains.
 The soldiers found the bodies of two men and two women who, survivors said, had been shot by the Viet Cong a short time before the troops arrived. One of the survivors died of wounds after being liberated.
 The sharpest of scattered contacts in the generally quiet war sectors was a 20-minute fight 32 miles northeast of Saigon. Five Americans of the 1st Infantry Division, headed by Sgt. Cletus Sanders, of St. Louis, Mo., took on a file of 80 Viet Cong troops after a snapping twig betrayed the American patrol's position.

 A U.S. spokesman said the patrol and supporting aircraft killed 46 of the enemy and "no friendly casualties were reported." The Americans returned by helicopter to their base at Di An without a scratch.

'MSU must limit its size'

 In size and quality, he called for re-evaluation of both the graduate and undergraduate programs, as well as a reworking of the University's relationship to its students.
 MSU will probably never again have as large a freshman-sophomore enrollment as it does this year. But Neville said that the junior-senior enrollment, which is bolstered by junior college transfers, will move up from its present level of 13,000 to an eventual mark of 14-15,000.
 Leveling off the enrollment at 40-42,000 by 1970 would require changes in "student mix," according to Neville. While in 1960 the mix was approximately 50 per cent freshman-sophomores, 33 per cent junior-seniors, and 17 per cent graduates, by 1970 it should be 40 per cent freshman-sophomores, 35 per cent junior-seniors, and 25 per cent graduates.
 "But MSU is going to be a predominantly undergraduate institution for a good many years to come," Neville remarked.
 Neville proposed broad areas of change in response to the new mix, saying that "we shall want to do more than merely adjust or adapt" to it.
 He announced the recommendation of a faculty committee on undergraduate education to President John A. Hannah which would proceed immediately with a study leading to a set of recommendations to the Academic Senate.
 Michigan State has given "too little attention to the undergraduate curriculum and the entire undergraduate experience," according to Neville.
 Although the University has made many significant developments in undergraduate education, almost all of them have been within the "traditional patterns of teaching and evaluation," he said.
 "Undergraduate education is not going to be improved greatly until we are willing to undertake more basic reforms," Neville concluded.
 Neville insisted that "students deserve better than what they are getting in some of our classrooms."
 "Students want to be heard on matters of policy affecting them, and they should be heard," he said.

'MSU must limit its size'

Nine U.S. 105mm shells exploded at Tan Uyen, 20 miles northeast of Saigon, in what an American spokesman said was a very regrettable accident caused by miscalculation in computing firing data. The U.S. command said "appropriate disciplinary action will be taken."
 Tan Uyen is on a bend of the Dong Nai River just north of the Bien Hoa airbase. A canister of anti-personnel bombs exploded in the market place there July 1, killing five Vietnamese and wounding 43 others. Investigators said it was a delayed drop in the jettisoning of unused explosives upstream by a Super Sabre returning to Bien Hoa after a strike mission.
 Officials reported American anti-aircraft guns have now been set up just 10 miles south of the demilitarized zone because of the possibility North Viet Nam might try to send its warplanes across the border.

 first body was found.
 The Morrell sinking recalled the Great Lakes tragedy of eight years ago when the Carl D. Bradley and 33 crew members went to the bottom of Lake Michigan.
 The Morrell had not been heard from since 12:15 a.m. EST Tuesday when she sent a routine message, putting her position about 25 miles north of Harbor Beach on the northeast tip of Michigan's thumb district.
 The message was sent during a storm that churned up waves of 25 feet and split another freighter the Nordmeer, just after eight crew men were lifted to safety. The Nordmeer had been aground on Thunder Bay Shore 80 miles north of here.
 Coast Guard planes, helicopters and ships swarmed into the choppy waters eight miles north of Harbor Beach light, near where the first body was found.
 "There were no distress signals that we know of," a Coast Guard spokesman said.
 State appropriations to MSU and the number of new junior colleges may also affect the graduate student total, said Terrance J. Carey, director of admissions.

THE ISSUE:

Is it really business VS. government?

“Business now has a significant competitor—the government.”

—Edward Kokalas, Michigan State University

Dear Mr. Kokalas:

The entire field of government-business relations is a complicated one, but at least one thing is clear. Government and business both compete and cooperate.

Your point is that government has become a significant competitor in terms of students making a career choice. This is healthy. Our society is a system. Business and government are essential parts of this system. We in business respect the need for able and talented people in government. Those who choose government for a career must likewise have respect for the businessman.

In your letter you say that many students subscribe to a new maxim: “What’s good for the Federal Government is good for the country.” If from this we are to imply, however, that only government careers are important, satisfying, and rewarding, then we disagree.

In your letter, you enumerate four important career goals: “Challenging work, job security, financial rewards, and . . . a contribution to society.” Let’s examine the opportunities business offers to meet these goals.

Depending on how far up the ladder you go, there is no question that financial rewards are greater in business. Job security certainly exists in business where, of course, it depends primarily on merit. And, business does offer a person challenging work and the opportunity to make a contribution to society. So does government, but in a different fashion.

Ask yourself this question: “Do I want to be employed by an organization that devotes its energies to identifying problems, or one which is concerned with solving problems?” As a rule, the responsibility of solving problems falls to business and industry.

Look at the Job Corps. Most urban centers are run by private industry—companies like Graflex, Inc., IBM, Xerox, U.S. Industries, Inc., IT&T, Philco-Ford, Packard Bell, and Burroughs. To rely on prominent businesses to do this job was a decision that made sense. After all, the young men and women benefiting from Job Corps programs are being trained to later hold real jobs in the real world. They’ll most likely find these jobs in private industry.

Recently, the Peace Corps turned to business to supplement their hitherto university-directed training programs for volunteers. The companies involved include such names as General Dynamics Corp., Westinghouse, and Litton. Here’s a comment from a Peace Corps official as it appeared in a recent “Business Week” article, “Private industry is more flexible, less compartmentalized. We’ve got a better chance to experiment and innovate when business is involved.”

In the field of municipal government, Mayor John Lindsay of New York recently appointed a Management Advisor Council, composed of 6 top industrialists, to study and improve city administration. The move was made in the hope that “our municipal government . . . can be operated as smoothly for the benefit of the people as the complex organizations headed by these executives in the private sector.”

I think that with the proliferation of government programs and resulting duplication and red tape, more and more businessmen will have to be called on by government officials to help straighten things out for reasons of effectiveness, economy, and efficiency.

This is where the real organizational strength of business lies. This is how its performance is measured. This is one of the reasons why business is the pacesetter in our society providing the creative and economic foundation for all else to happen.

Business, in common with government, succeeds when it is established “of the people, by the people, and for the people.” As you choose your career, consider both business and government in terms of how each renders its service to all people and how each challenges you personally.

ISSUES AND ANSWERS

For the last seven weeks, this paper has been publishing a unique exchange of views—a dialogue between Robert W. Galvin, Motorola Chairman, and Edward Kokalas, Michigan State student.

At Mr. Galvin’s invitation, Mr. Kokalas presented some of the opinions—positive and negative—that students have about business. This is Mr. Galvin’s answer to one of the issues raised. Responses to additional issues will appear in this paper and, shortly, Mr. Kokalas will comment on what Mr. Galvin has to say. The dialogue will continue as long as there are points to discuss.

This and similar dialogues are appearing in college newspapers throughout the country.
