Library committee backs increase in fines

By DOROTHY LAXER

Last night's meeting of the Library Committee in the Administration Building was attended by only a few students. The student body has not shown much interest in the Library Committee, according to a member who said the meeting was usually attended by only two or three students.

At the meeting, the committee discussed the increase in fines for overdue books. They voted to increase the fine from $1 per day to $2 per day, but the vote was not unanimous. One member of the committee, who was opposed to the increase, walked out of the meeting in frustration.

WASHINGTON — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower will enter the hospital Thursday, after being visited Monday and Tuesday by doctors who are expected to recommend immediate, emergency surgery. But the announcement from Gettysburg on Monday afternoon made plain his doctors feel he must have the diseased gallbladder removed, a report of the exact condition prior to surgery.

The operation will be performed by the chief surgeon of the hospital, Lieut. Gen. Leonard D. Heaton, 56, who performed the gallbladder surgery on President Eisenhower in 1959.

The doctors will make their own final decision on whether to perform the operation on the 76-year-old general, who was injured in an automobile accident ten days ago, was in fair condition, hospital officials said.

The announcement from Gettysburg, 10 miles east of East Lansing, was in fair condition, hospital officials said.

Jaguar. Tame it's not.

This is the story of a man who has found the perfect solution to his car problem. Meet Mike, a high school student who has always struggled with his car. He has tried everything from DIY repairs to calling in professionals, but nothing seemed to work. Until he discovered the Jaguar. Mike was always told that Jaguars were too expensive and too difficult to maintain, but he was determined to find a way to make it work.

Mike searched high and low for a solution that would work for him. He tried different types of cars, but nothing seemed to click. He even considered selling his Jaguar and buying a cheaper car, but he just couldn't bring himself to do it. He loved his car too much to let it go.

One day, Mike stumbled upon a solution that would change his life. He discovered a company that specializes in Jaguar repairs and maintenance. This company, Jaguar Repair Pros, offered a service that Mike had never heard of before. They offered to come to his home and do the repairs right then and there. Mike was skeptical at first, but he decided to give it a try.

The results were amazing. The Jaguar was fixed up in no time, and Mike was able to get back on the road without any hassle. From that day on, Mike has been a loyal customer of Jaguar Repair Pros. He recommends them to everyone he knows who owns a Jaguar.

So, if you're looking for a Jaguar repair service that will get the job done right, look no further than Jaguar Repair Pros. They will make your Jaguar feel like new again.
Georgia case ties up Court

WASHINGTON — It is a legal battle that some Supreme Court justices seem to want to avoid. President Nixon asked the same Court, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, to decide whether to water down a student protest at Michigan State University.

The Court, in a 4-4 split, refused to take the case, which in effect means that the university's student newspaper, the Michigan State News, will be allowed to run stories critical of black students who are on strike.

It was not the only case in which the Court was asked to intervene. It refused to hear a case involving a strike by black students at Michigan State University. The university had asked the Court to overrule the state legislature's decision to end the strike.

The Associated Press reported that the court refused to hear the case, saying that it was not appropriate for the court to intervene in the matter.

The report said that since the strike began, the university had been criticized for its handling of the situation. The university had been accused of discrimination and of not providing adequate resources to the black students.

The Student Body President of the university, who was not named, said that the university was not providing adequate resources to the black students and that the university was not providing adequate resources to the black students.
