

Dormitory fees may be boosted next year

By STEVE GATES
State News Staff Writer

MSU students may be facing yet another hike in dorm fees next fall—the eighth such increase in the last 15 years—hinted Emory G. Foster, manager of dormitory and food services.

Foster termed an increase “not at all impossible,” but refused to predict such an increase definitely, pending wage negotiations for next year with the employees union.

However, Foster noted that there will almost certainly be a wage increase for civil service employees next July, and that MSU wages will probably be influenced by this raise, although MSU does not employ through the Civil Service.

He added that a major hike in wage rates, added to the current inflation in food prices would almost necessitate the rate increase.

He also noted that the residence hall system is self-sufficient financially, so that any wage hikes and price increases in food would have to be reflected directly in increases in student rates.

A decision on such an increase would not be made by his office, Foster suggested.

Final decision on any increase would rest with the Board of Trustees.

The increase would come on top of a $45 increase this year, from $825 to $870, Foster explained that this increase was primarily the result of two raises in both regular and student wage rates, plus increases in food prices.

Presently, MSU rates for room and board rank among the lowest in the Big Ten, with only Illinois and Ohio State charging lower rates for similar accommodations. Highest among the Big Ten is University of Wisconsin, at $960 for a double room. University of Michigan is second, with a $950 rate.

Even though Illinois and Ohio State charge lower rates, Foster said, “I still think we give the best dollar value in the Big Ten,” citing our “better rooms” and “wide choice of quality food” as two reasons for his opinion—plus the fact that he had eaten meals at all of the Big Ten Universities.

Compared to the national median room and board rates, compiled by the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges (NASULGC), MSU’s position is somewhat altered. Board and room rates at MSU are over $80 above the median.

However, NASULGC indicated that among the 97 member institutions, board and room rates tend to vary with the particular region of the country. On this basis, MSU rates rank among the lowest in its region.

Since 1952, MSU’s rates for room and board have increased $104, plus $21 for telephone service. Including the telephone increase, this is an average of $8.33 increase each year for the last 15 years.

Increases have tended to come in spurts, with increases every year between 1953 and 1957, then no increases except for the telephone service between 1958 and 1962, and then increases in 1963, 1964 and again last year.

MSU increases have approximately corresponded to, or been less than increases in the NASULGC median.

Students vote to end strike at Berkeley

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — An estimated 6,000 University of California students voted Tuesday at a noon rally to end their classroom boycott as Chancellor Roger W. Heyns went before the Board of Regents to explain his firm policy of dealing with protesters.

The student vote to end the strike at 8 p.m. was contingent on similar action by teaching assistants belonging to the American Federation of Teachers. The assistants had struck in support of the boycott.

Heyns was armed with an overwhelming faculty vote of confidence in an Academic Senate resolution calling for an immediate end to the student strike.

Assemblyman Don Mulford, R-Piedmont, addressed to the regents a demand that all teachers who joined in the classroom boycott be fired.

The boycott protested outside police action in breaking up a demonstration the evening of Nov. 30 against a Navy recruiting team in the Student Union. Police arrested 10 persons, including six non-students.

Losses backing

The classroom boycott suffered significant loss of student backing after the faculty action pledging support and cooperation to Heyns. The Academic Senate vote was 795 to 28, with 143 abstaining.

The student Senate then voted 13-7 to withdraw its strike support.

The student Senate, policy body of the Associated Students of the University of California, called for immediate suspension of the strike to give time for “negotiation to develop in a new direction.”

The Daily Californian, campus newspaper which last week backed the protest cause, editorially declared the strike “must end today (Tuesday).”

The student strike committee maintained pickets at campus gates.

Heyns met briefly Monday night with student strike committee members after the faculty vote.

City Council raises rates to block storage parking

By BEVERLY HALL
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing City Council put a damper on storage parking in city parking lots one and three Monday night, by raising rates from 10 to 15 cents per hour after the second hour of parking.

Mayor pro-tem Bill Hanel said this would discourage students from parking all day in the city lots behind Jacobson's and Knapp's, but Roger Jonas, representing the East Lansing Chamber of Commerce, said his study on the parking problem concluded that most people who use the two lots for storage parking are store employees, not students.

“Since the rest of the city lots will not increase their rates, there’ll be plenty of room for employees to park in other places,” Jonas said.

Robert Wilcox, manager of Jacobson's, visited the Council meeting to commend the council on its support of the parking rate increase.

“This proposal is very sound,” he commented. “It does what we want to do—provide a faster turnover of cars in the East Lansing lots that are most convenient to shoppers.”

The increase in rates will go into effect February 1, as soon as tickets and machinery can be adjusted to the increase.

The council gave City Manager John Patriarche permission to have city parking lots remain open after the normal closing hours, 6:30 p.m., during the Christmas shopping season when most stores are open until 9 p.m.

David Milstein, 335 Marshall Street, represented 21 householders in requesting that a stop sign be placed at the intersection of Dorothy Lane and Marshall Avenue.

“There are many students living in this neighborhood, and we have noticed some careless driving,” he said. “We are requesting the stop sign primarily for our children’s safety.”

City Engineer Robert Bruce said he watched the intersection at one time, but saw no traffic there and can identify no problem that would be solved by a stop sign, because Dorothy Lane does not cross Marshall Avenue, but merely meets it.

Police Chief Charles Pegg attempted a speed check at the intersection, but there was no traffic at all on Dorothy Lane. “If we start putting stop signs at every little intersection, drivers will begin to disregard them,” Bruce said.

Despite a traffic commission report suggesting that a stop sign be placed at the streets, the Council did not approve the request.

Commonwealth nations press for tight oil ban on Rhodesia

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Secretary George Brown flew to New York Tuesday night seeking sterner United Nations sanctions against Rhodesia’s rebel government. He is empowered, if pressed, to accept a limited oil ban.

Brown also carried strict instructions from Prime Minister Harold Wilson’s cabinet to avoid any action that could bring Britain into a head-on trade war or worse with its fourth best customer, South Africa.

Inside and outside the 25-nation Commonwealth, pressures built up for stronger measures against the white regime of Prime Minister Ian Smith, which rejected a settlement Monday that could have ended Rhodesia’s 13-month rebellion.

A big majority of ambassadors at a special meeting of the Commonwealth Sanctions Committee pressed Commonwealth Secretary Herbert Bowden for stern steps. They argued for an oil embargo, complete with provisions for enforcement.

At U.N. headquarters, delegates of militant African states went even further. Ambassador Marof Achkar of Guinea urged that British bombers destroy rail and road links between South Africa and Rhodesia along which oil supplies reach Smith’s regime.

Qualified British authorities said the Wilson government already has considered but rejected such a plan. They reported Royal Air Force chiefs some time ago carried out a feasibility study of the project and concluded it could be carried out with a minimum loss of life.

But British political leaders took the view that bombing raids, mounted from an aircraft carrier off the East African coast, would require the prior destruction of Rhodesia’s air force and this was politically unacceptable.

The collapsed Wilson-Smith peace attempts brought other swift developments in Salisbury and London.

—Smith told Rhodesians in a radio broadcast that acceptance of the pact worked out aboard the British cruiser Tiger Saturday night would have meant “the abject surrender” of his regime to Britain. He accused Wilson of “obduracy” and “ignorance” of Rhodesian realities. Earlier his regime denounced the projected deal because it would have meant setting up “a quisling government” on Britain’s behalf.

LBJ says $9-10 billion more needed for Viet Nam costs

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson announced Tuesday a “reasonably accurate estimate” that Viet Nam costs between now and June 30 will top earlier projections by $9-10 billion.

He said he would ask Congress for the extra money next month.

The new figures were perhaps somewhat less than many had expected. Johnson himself had said earlier the request for supplemental appropriations might run anywhere from $5-15 billion.

He declined to say whether the new projection made a tax increase less likely. He said he had made no decision on that.

Johnson held a news conference in his Austin office. With him was Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, who had a surprise announcement of his own.

The Pentagon chief said the United States would build and deploy the Minuteman III intercontinental ballistic missile, the most advanced ICBM on U.S. drawing boards.

Claiming this decision had been reached some time ago, McNamara coupled his announcement with an admission that it appeared the Soviet Union would deploy

Students protest recruiting

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Jibes and jostling were traded by University of Wisconsin students Tuesday in a protest at a U.S. Marine Corps recruiting table on the campus.

Foes and supporters of the war in Viet Nam were the combatants.

The shoving and pushing melee developed when a group calling itself the Committee for Direct Action carried out its announced plan to confront the Marine recruiting effort in the university’s Memorial Union Building.

A similar incident took place last week at the University of California in Berkeley, when students picketed a Navy recruiting desk, touching off a student strike there.

Action committee backers triggered the Wisconsin disturbance when they tried to question recruiters about alleged incidents in the Philippine Islands and Korea.

The Marine recruiters refused to comment.

During the attempted confrontation, other students shoved their way through to the recruiting desk to pick up enlistment literature.

Some protesters carried picket signs saying Marines trained killers. The pickets argued they should have the opportunity to set up displays to espouse their cause, too.

A university spokesman estimated that about 125 students and nonstudents listened to the protesters. The university has an enrollment of about 30,000.

There were no injuries reported. A campus policeman broke up a brief shoving match. There were no arrests.

Jack Ruby's retrial site moved to Wichita Falls

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Dist. Judge Louis T. Holland announced Tuesday that Jack Ruby’s new trial for the slaying of Lee Harvey Oswald will be held in Wichita Falls sometime in 1967.

Holland said he selected Wichita Falls because “it is accessible to all witnesses, has ample facilities, and is made up of a multitude of good, fair, honest people.”

Ruby, 35, a former night club operator, was convicted and sentenced to death by a Dallas jury March 14, 1964, for the slaying of Oswald.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reversed the conviction Oct. 5 and ordered that Ruby be given a new trial away from Dallas. The appellate court cited inadmissible testimony from a police officer as the specific reason for the reversal. But it added that the holding of the first trial in Dallas also constituted a reversible error.

Holland announced the new trial site after a conference with prosecution and defense lawyers. The judge said: “It will take the cooperation of attorneys, news media and the court to see justice.”

The trick may be in the treat

At best, it now appears to be just an expensive thought.

When two University of Michigan law students, the M-U student committee, first devised their plan for finals week fruit packages, it was intended to be much more.

They hoped to provide a pleasant assortment of Christmas fruit and candy that parents could order for their freshmen sons and daughters, now going through the ordeal of final exams for the first time.

They hoped that parents could express through the gifts a moral support for their children, away from home for the first time.

And they hoped of course, to make a profit. By selling the baskets for $3, while giving food of considerably less value, there was money to be had.

Unfortunately, the two students didn't consider just how much their little project would cost. So far they have invested over $3200 for their offer. And then there was delivery, packaging, and taxes.

This not only means that the "MSU Student Committee" will be lucky to break even, it also means that the fruit package probably won't be everything they expected.

An orange, an apple, cookies, a candy bar, hot chocolate, raisins, a nickel bag of peanuts, and an artificial corsage is what they "deliver for three dollars." It costs them around 75 cents.

What the two U-M students are doing is not illegal. They will deliver what they said they would, which is more than similar deals at MSU have done in the past.

But students and parents should be aware of what they are getting. They should be aware they are paying over $2, in effect, just to send good wishes during finals week.

It is a nice idea. But for much less money, a "bleary-eyed student" could probably find his own refreshment, more to his liking.

And it's an expensive thought.

The master politician

A year ago it was common to see President Johnson flash his homely smile and in an even homelier manner say that we sure do have a swell economy.

Today he isn't smiling about the economy. In fact, no one is.

By last week, conditions had deteriorated in the construction industry so greatly that Congress had to step in. In a $250 million pre-Christmas gift package, it voted to finance indirectly some 15,000 new home mortgages. These measures had to be taken because the construction industry has fallen into its worst recession since the end of World War II.

What is behind this riches-to-recession plight that is threatening not only the housing industry, but the economy in general?

Manipulate spending

Beginning in 1961, the Federal government put its confidence fully behind the New Economics, as it is called. This is the theory that growth can be maintained throughout the economy, if government expenditures are carefully manipulated. It worked well for four years. We had the greatest peacetime boom in history. Though many factors contributed to the growth in these years, the New Economics played more than a small part.

Then in 1965 the War in Viet Nam began requiring a larger chunk of the federal budget. The multitude of great society programs added even more. The result was federal manipulation of the economy—but not according to the rules of the New Economics. Economic theory was given a back seat to political "practicalities." The New Economics called for a reduction in government spending if inflation were to be avoided. Johnson refused to make the necessary cuts because it was politically unfeasible, because of the upcoming elections. The result was the predicted inflation.

Cost misjudgment

What really began to throw the economy out of kilter was a "misjudgment" by Defense Secretary Robert McNamara of the cost of the war. His estimates were off six to 10 billion dollars. This was enough to throw the carefully made plans of the economists off balance and open the door to a possible recession.

To neutralize this error, the New Economists recommended a general tax increase. President Johnson, mindful that 1966 was an election year, refused. He did, however, try to curtail industrial desire to invest by removing investment tax incentives. This didn't help and the inflation grew.

LBJ first

The economy could be placed back in balance without much painful adjustment if Johnson would follow the recommendations of his New Economics advisers. But the master politician seems intent on putting his political considerations first.

It is often true that what is best for the President's political future is not best for the U.S. economy. And more often than not, a leader will succumb to the natural tendency to take the path that's best for his own welfare, as Johnson has.

It's time Johnson decided to take the other path. It's time he realized that his first obligation must be to the U.S. economy rather than to the political welfare of LBJ.

We will not have stable growth until he does.

'U' police on students' side

Whispers of an "MSU police state" are once again beginning to waft through the hallowed halls of our fair campus. The University Police, a trite, but always popular student scapegoat, are again in the line of fire.

Criticism is nothing new to the 34-man force. Within the past year they have been accused of everything from harassing students to framing a state senator.

"MSU is still big on police. There are literally policemen all over the campus, almost beyond the wildest expansion of the human retina. There is the campus police—a compliment of roughly 35 men in blue uniforms. . . finally, it is hard to find a parking spot on campus since so many policemen are occupying the stalls."

Scalpers protest

The most recent protest concerns the arrest, prosecution and fine of a coed on ticket scalping charges.

The young lady admitted that she had tried to sell three tickets to the Notre Dame game for $150. She contended, however, that she was guilty not of a crime, but a technicality because she initiated the suggestion of a price to the police officer who posed as a buyer.

Prior to the Notre Dame game, Ingham County Prosecutor Donald L. Reisig issued a statement saying that all persons arrested for ticket scalping would be prosecuted. However, although six persons, only one student, were "contacted" by the police (with Reisig present) they were not prosecuted.

Arise, students! The "campus cops" has been jailed, but the six out-of-town "operators" were not!

But wait. . . The prosecutor makes the decision whether or not to press charges against persons arrested on suspicion of any crime. The police have little say in the matter.

With Reisig present at the time of the arrests, it seems obvious that he, not the police, made the decision to release the persons without prosecution.

In another gripe a letter to the editor from a graduate student early this summer read:

Incongruous

"College students. . . feel nothing but contempt and hatred for these men. Many fun escapades started by students have turned into near riots because of maltreatment at the hands of these officers."

It seems incongruous that Michigan State should have a quasi-official police force in an area that is serviced by four other enforcement agencies—Lansing, East Lansing, State Police and the Sheriff's Department.

"A police force that plays down rapes on the campus, but abuses its power when dealing with students on minor enforcement should no longer waste the taxpayers' dollar. It's time that appropriate officials looked into this matter before an innocent student is maimed or killed by these men," he continued.

The student's letter was, first, poorly researched. He admittedly talked to "two or three persons" who expressed a dislike for the police, all of whom, if I recall correctly, had recently received parking tickets.

Considering the timing of the letter, the "fun escapades" he refers to were probably the spring term finals week riots, in which 12 persons, not all of them students, were arrested.

All complaints expressed to the State News by University administrators, students, and observers of the Brody riots were directed against over-zealous State Police recruits and other area police. Remarks on University Police handling of the crowd were extremely positive.

Containment

It should be recalled that the University Police seem to have followed a policy of containment of student outbursts, whereas city police have sought more repressive measures. Many a party raid and snake dance have not gotten past the Grand River Avenue demarcation line.

I sometimes wonder why students are not more appreciative of the college-educated police force necessary to keep order in a community which expands daily to 45,000 persons.

This is a department which has shown itself again and again to be service oriented and in sympathy with the existence of the University. Why are we so critical of a force which is psychologically in tune with the young 38,000 young adults they work with daily?

Why not try something different? Let's get a typical city police department for MSU. . . complete with all the problems of lower educational standards and different methods. Better yet, why not try the state police? Why not let them train their rookies on MSU students?

Then we all could really have something to complain about.

Prof clarifies hitch-hiking issue

To the Editor:

Your editorial, "Thumbs Down," on 29 November about the hitch-hiking prohibition at Harrison Road and Grand River Avenue is a textbook example of the failure to study the issues before taking a dramatic stand.

The facts are these: about 170 children cross Harrison Road at Grand River four times a day on the way to and from Central School; that a goodly number of girls from nearby sororities stand on the curb at that corner to hitch rides along Grand River to the campus; that the crossing-guards have complained that they cannot see when cars have right-turn signals on because of the girls perched like sparrows at the edge of the avenue; and, finally, that the City Traffic Commission has agreed with the safety chairman of the Central School PTA that this constitutes a danger to the children.

Snews

Richard Chapin
Library

Dear Dick,
How about receipts now when we turn books back in?
S'news

This is the ONLY issue, Miss Spencer, representing the girls before the Traffic Commission, has pretended that the PTA dragged in the moral issue. You fell for that line in your editorial, saying that "the claim that hitching creates a bad example for the local children is beside the point." It sure is! It has not been raised by Central's safety chairman, nor by the Traffic Commission.

I can handle any 'moral issue' raised by co-ed hitch-hiking. The three children

I send along Grand River to Central School know people do things they are not allowed to do. They also know that advancing age brings more freedoms. What I cannot handle is the ton-and-a-half auto crossing guard did not take into account because she could not see its blinker light. That's the only issue the PTA has raised, and it's the only one that concerns me. (By the way, I speak only for myself, not for the PTA.)

One other comment, I disagree that the prohibition of thumbing makes it very difficult for the co-eds in the sororities to get to campus. I live four blocks from the Delta Gamma house, approximately one block farther from campus. Like the girls, I do not ordinarily drive. I have found on mornings too cold for cycling that it takes me exactly eight minutes to walk to the campus bus stop across from Brody. The busses run often. It's quick; it's cheap; it's legal. And it might save some kid's neck.

Imagine creatively with the exciting spirit and romantic flair so popular today with the smart, young set. The extra brilliance of an Orange Blossom diamond costs no more. . . Priced from $150.

Protest strength wanes at U-M

Student sit-ins at the University of Michigan are waning in strength, said a spokesman for VOICE, the Ann Arbor chapter of the Students for a Democratic Society.

Peter Steinberger, former president of VOICE, said no further sit-ins are planned for the remainder of this term though some definite plans are being laid by VOICE for next term.

Monday about 150 students sat in the lobby of the administration building from noon to 8:00 p.m. The sit-in was not disruptive.

The students were addressed by about 40 faculty members from the College of Literary Arts and Sciences Monday afternoon. The faculty members spoke both for and against recent action taken by students over administration policy.

At a faculty meeting of the College of Literary Arts and Sciences Monday, Herbert Kellman, professor of psychology, submitted a proposal that faculty members disagreeing with the University policy of submitting a male student's grades for use in Selective Service rankings should be permitted to turn in pass-fail grades and a brief evaluation of the student instead of a letter grade.

The proposal was defeated, 305 to 115 with 40 faculty members abstaining.

Some who voted against the proposal said they did so because they were given no time to consider it fully.

A similar proposal is expected to be submitted at the next faculty meeting, scheduled for Dec. 12.

That proposal, which asks that the university not compute class rankings in the next academic year, has about a 50-50 chance of passing according to Steinberger, a Literary College faculty member.

OPPOSE TAX BOOST

'Junior' House members favor Viet war escalation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The typical newly elected House member favors military escalation if necessary to win the Viet Nam war and wants to cut domestic spending rather than raise taxes to finance it, an Associated Press survey showed Tuesday.

He doesn't see any need for new civil rights legislation, but would study carefully any proposals that might be made.

This is the consensus stemming from a cross-section check which brought responses from 36 House members elected for the first time on Nov. 8. A majority—27—were Republicans, GOP newcomers outnumber Democrats 48 to 14.

Minority viewpoints cropped up too.

Four "freshmen" oppose escalation of the war, compared with 21 Republicans and five Democrats who favor expanded military action if present tactics fail to end the conflict.

Tax boost opposed

Six new members said they are flatly opposed to a tax increase to finance greater war costs. Only two Democrats said they didn't see where domestic spending could be cut back without harming essential programs.

On civil rights, five newcomers called for additional legislation, compared with 24 who said enough civil rights laws are already on the books. One favors repeal of existing rights statutes.

The sum of it all is that the House in the 90th Congress is likely to give President Johnson enthusiastic support for any additional steps in Viet Nam.

But it is likely to put pressure on him to cut domestic spending even more before resorting to a tax increase to meet war costs and to curb inflation.

gressmen said they needed more information before they could commit themselves on Viet Nam, the general feeling was that the United States could not let the war go on indefinitely.

Prestige at stake

"I feel we'd have no choice if there is no discernible improvement in the near future," said Rep.-elect S. Fletcher Thompson, R-Ga. "I am very much opposed to letting the war drag on for 10 or 15 years. We have an awful lot of prestige at stake there, and all of Southeast Asia is at stake as well."

But John Dellenback, newly elected Oregon Republican, said "I am not prepared to commit myself to further escalation until I see what else is being done. We ought to be pushing every effort that we can to settle this on a sound, long-range basis."

Three questions

The AP put these three questions to all newly elected House members:

1. Would you favor escalation of the war in Viet Nam if the present course fails to show signs of improving the situation?

2. Would you favor increasing income taxes or cutting domestic programs as a means of financing the war?

3. Do you think there is any need for new civil rights legislation at this time?

Self-styled ministers not exempt

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals held Tuesday that recognition of a person as a minister by a religious sect does not necessarily entitle him to exemption from the draft.

Charles Apton Jackson, 25, Kingwood, W. Va., classified as a conscientious objector, was sentenced to three years in prison for failure to report for duty in a Charleston, W. Va., hospital in lieu of induction into the armed services.

In February, 1962, Jackson signed in a Selective Service classification form he was a conscientious objector and an "ordained minister" of the Jehovah's Witnesses.

In the ruling, written by Judge Herbert S. Boreman, the court held it is "necessary that the defendant prove that he regularly and customarily taught and preached the principles of his religion, administered the ordinances of public worship embodied therein, and that he performed these functions, not incidentally or as his avocation, but regularly as his vocation. "Defendant failed to satisfy these requirements."

1,453 to receive degrees at fall commencement

A total of 1,453 degrees will be awarded to students at 3 p.m. Saturday in the MSU Auditorium.

This total includes 825 bachelor's degrees, 474 master's degrees, 150 doctorates and 4 educational specialist degrees.

Stephen J. Wright, president of the United Negro College Fund of New York City, will be the guest speaker for the ceremony and also will receive an honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Wright is a former president of Bluefield State College and Fisk University, was appointed to the National Citizens Committee for Community Relations by President Johnson in 1964.

In 1965 he became the first Negro selected to head the Association for Higher Education.

MSU's Concert Band under the direction of Leonard Falcone will provide the music for the event.

Falcone, who is retiring next year, will also perform as soloist on the euphonium.

Tickets for commencement are being distributed to graduates this week.

Persons without tickets may watch the ceremony via closed-circuit, big-screen television in Fairchild Theatre.

Rev. Theodore K. Bundenthal, lecturer in religion and pastor of Martin Luther Chapel, will offer the invocation and benediction.

Chinese walk out of Kremlin meet

MOSCOW (AP) — Red Chinese diplomats walked out of a Kremlin meeting today to protest Soviet remarks critical of Mao Tse-tung, Chinese Communist leader.

The Chinese walkout was the third such from an official function here in the last month. Nikolai G. Yegorychev, the Moscow Communist party chief, in a speech in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses, said: "Of late, Mao Tse-tung and his group have been following a great power line aimed at undermining the unity of the countries of socialism, of the entire world Communist movement."

Diplomats who attended the meeting said two Chinese diplomats walked out of the hall at that point.

Americans face Russian trial

MOSCOW (AP) — The father of one of two young Americans facing trial in the Soviet Union arrived today for a reunion with his son and said he hoped that with Soviet compassion he could take them both home.

Both of them are accused of illegally exchanging a total of about $70 in violation of Soviet currency regulation. The charge carries a penalty of three to eight years upon conviction.

Ethiopians kill Somali prisoners

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — The Somali national news agency said today Ethiopian troops had killed nine Somali prisoners in an area where the borders of Somalia, Ethiopia and Kenya converge.

The agency said the killings were part of recurring clashes between Ethiopians and Somalis over Somali claims to border territory in both of its neighboring countries.

The Somali news agency said that an "indiscriminate extermination campaign of Somalis of Ethiopian forces still continues. People and camels are being shot on sight. Casualties are not known."

Ike in good spirits over pending surgery

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Just 48 hours before he is to enter Walter Reed Hospital for major surgery, former President Dwight D. Eisenhower said Tuesday: "I never felt better in my whole life."

Eisenhower's mood has been completely relaxed since a terse announcement early Monday that he would enter Walter Reed this week for removal of his gall bladder.

Eisenhower, 76, canceled a trip to New York where he was to have appeared Tuesday night at the annual dinner of the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame. He said he did so because of the furor created by the announcement of his impending surgery.

He said he was afraid his presence at the dinner would detract from the acclaim he said was due unreservedly to "heroes the occasion is to honor."

Pearl Harbor 'footnotes' show White House scene

WASHINGTON (AP) -- In the footnotes of history hides this item: On the evening of Dec. 7, 1941, Eleanor Roosevelt calmly scrambled eggs for guests at the White House.

This showed up Tuesday in a journal among the manuscripts the Library of Congress put on exhibit commemorating today's 25th anniversary of the day the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor.

The journal was kept by Mrs. Charles Hamlin, widow of a former governor of the Federal Reserve Board. She was a guest at the White House that turbulent day.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt worked that day from his office on the second floor of the executive mansion, she said, and all day there was much "coming and going."

That night, she said, "Eleanor stood calmly stirring the scrambled eggs and talking of going to the West Coast to see about civil defense in the cities."

Mrs. Hamlin apparently did not see Roosevelt that day.

She wrote that in the morning, as she walked to church, the day was "beautiful and warm and peaceful."

There were other guests for luncheon at the White House, she said.

"Eleanor was a little late joining us in the blue parlor and she seemed a bit flustered as she told us that the reason was that the news from Japan was very bad -- that the President would be unable to come down to luncheon," she added.

When the luncheon broke up, the news of the bombing of Pearl Harbor "was about," Mrs. Hamlin said, "and everyone stood around the hall in knots--we almost whispered our amazement to one another."

In another footnote of history, the library exhibited the diary of Breckinridge Long, assistant secretary of state at the time of the Pearl Harbor attack.

Long wrote on Dec. 8, 1941, of uncertainty in Congress and at the State Dept. over the correct title in the resolution of war--Imperial Government of Germany or Government of Imperial Germany.

Long must have been flustered or too busy that day--for it was Japan, not Germany, the resolution named that day. War against Germany was declared Dec. 11, 1941.

Long said that after arguments over the correct appellation he finally told everybody to accept the one used in the resolution passed by one chamber of the Congress.

So in the national archives is Senate Joint Resolution 116 of Dec. 8, 1941:

"Resolved, etc., that the state of war between the United States and the Imperial Government of Japan which has thus been thrust upon the United States is hereby formally declared."

Bravery Rewarded

President Johnson awards the Congressional Medal of Honor to Marine Sgt. Robert Emmett O'Malley. A squad leader, O'Malley was wounded three times in Viet Nam while singly killing eight Viet Cong.

UPI Telephoto

Marine awarded Medal of Honor

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) -- President Johnson draped the Medal of Honor around the neck of a Marine Corps hero of Viet Nam Tuesday and said that "gallantry above and beyond the call of duty" are words that never seem to grow old.

Sgt. Robert Emmett O'Malley, 23, of Woodside, Long Island, nervously licked his lips. He had won the nation's highest award in a battle with the Viet Cong, killing at least eight of the enemy and suffering three wounds from shrapnel and gunfire.

In a colorful ceremony on the plaza between the post office and federal building in Austin, Johnson presided at the tenth award of the Medal of Honor for valor in Viet Nam--the first for a Marine.

"I can think of only one gift sufficient to honor men like this," Johnson said. "We can assure this man and we can assure every man who wears our uniform that their cause is a good cause. That the principles they stand for are sound principles. That the battle they are fighting deserves their bravery."

Declaring that this cause deserves the patience and fortitude of citizens, Johnson habbed at critics of his Viet Nam Policy.

He said the cause "far outweighs the reluctance of men who exercise so well the right of dissent but let others fight to protect them from those whose very philosophy is to do away with the right of dissent."

Now a reservist who plans to go to college, O'Malley was restored to active duty for this one day so he could wear his Marine dress blues.

Members of his family were flown from New York for the event--his mother and father, brothers and sister. Seven of his comrades who were in the action in which O'Malley risked "his own life above and beyond the call of duty" arrived from Marine Corps bases in this country.

Two of the brothers are former Marines and one still is in the corps.

The nation's military high command was on hand to honor O'Malley.

The citation for the Medal of Honor, read by Secretary of the Navy Paul Nitze, said in part:

"With complete disregard for his personal safety, Cpl. O'Malley raced across an open rice paddy to a trench line where the enemy forces were located. Jumping into the trench, he attacked the Viet Cong with his rifle and grenades and singly killed eight of the enemy."

"Although three times wounded and facing imminent death from a fanatic and determined enemy, he steadfastly refused evacuation and continued to cover his squad's boarding of helicopters while, from an exposed position, he delivered fire against the enemy until his wounded men were evacuated."

The President was solemn while delivering his speech. But he broke into a smile when he hung the gold medal with its blue ribbon around O'Malley's neck.

O'Malley introduced the President to the members of his family and his comrades in arms, then the two of them got into a receiving line to greet officials.

The President kissed one or two women on the cheek. O'Malley seemed to take that as a cue and followed suit with nearly every woman who went through the line--perhaps 20 of them--and along with a kiss went a big grin.

Traffic flow changed for graduation

Special traffic controls will be in effect for fall term Commencement from 2-4:15 p.m. Saturday.

To provide for efficient traffic movement and parking, west-bound traffic on Auditorium Road will not be permitted beyond a point near the southeast corner of Snyder Hall.

Southbound traffic on Physics Road will not be permitted south of its intersection with Dormitory Road.

The only access to parking Lot G and the adjacent street parking bays will be from Auditorium Road at its intersection with Farm Lane.

Last year, thousands of lawyers, bankers, accountants, engineers, doctors and businessmen went back to college.

And not just for the football games.

We'd like to clear up what appears to be a misunderstanding. It is somewhat popular on campus to decry a business career on the grounds that you stop learning once you start working for Cliché Nuts & Bolts.

That idea is groundless.

We can't speak for Cliché, but we can for ourselves--Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System. 6 out of 10 college graduates who have joined us over the past 10 years, for example, have continued their higher education.

How're these for openers:

W.E.'s Tuition Refund Plan lets employees pursue degrees while working for us. Over 6 thousand have attended schools in 41 states under this plan. We refund more than $1 million in tuition costs to employees a year.

To name another program: advanced engineering study, under the direction of Lehigh University, is conducted at our Engineering Research Center in Princeton, N. J. Selected employees are sent there from all over the country for a year's concentrated study leading to a master's degree.

You get the idea. We're for more learning in our business. After all, Western Electric doesn't make buggy whips. We make advanced communications equipment. And the Bell telephone network will need even more sophisticated devices by the time your fifth reunion rolls around. The state of the art, never static, is where the action is.

At Western Electric, what's happening is the excitement and satisfaction of continued doing and learning. If this happens to appeal to you, no matter what degree you're aiming for, check us out. And grab a piece of the action.

Sharp increase in callup of Guardsmen scheduled

LANSING (AP) -- Some 400 Michigan National Guardsmen will be called to six months of active duty in January, a sharp increase over recent months, Maj. Gen. Clarence Schnipke, state adjutant general, said Tuesday.

Schnipke added that callup levels in Michigan would remain high at least through May or June.

Some 120 guardsmen were called to active duty in December, 60 in November and 54 in October, the Dept. of Military Affairs said.

A spokesman said the increased callup is in connection with U.S. Defense Dept. policies aimed at trimming a backlog of some 120,000 guardsmen and reservists who have not pulled their active duty.

He said the Army hopes to trim the national backlog to 15,000 or 20,000 by June.

In Michigan, he added, the backlog of guardsmen is 1,500 and "should be down to a minimum figure" by the middle of 1967.

Schnipke said the increased callup plans would affect both Selective Reserve Force (SRF) and non-SRF guardsmen. He said plans were being announced early to allow guardsmen and their employers to "make necessary arrangements."

Morgan's JEWELLERS

121 S. WASHINGTON LANSING, MICHIGAN

was at Pearl Harbor, commander of the combined U.S. and Pacific fleets. Ten days after Japan knocked out 18 ships and killed 3,435 Americans, Kimmel was relieved of command. In three months he was retired.

Made a scapegoat

"They made me the scapegoat," said the alert, white-haired Kimmel, reaching back into his memory as he brushed back a wisp of hair that fell across his forehead. "They wanted to get the United States into the war."

Who did Kimmel mean by "they?"

"President Roosevelt and Gen. George C. Marshall and others in the Washington high command," he replied.

"FDR was the architect of the whole business. He gave orders --and I can't prove this categorically--that no word about Japanese fleet movements was to be sent to Pearl Harbor except by Marshall and then he told Marshall not to send anything."

Kimmel said, "God willing, within the next year, you'll see a couple of books published exposing the whole rotten mess."

Eight separate investigations were made of the Pearl Harbor disaster. Some cleared Kimmel and the Army commander on Hawaii, Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short. Others condemned them for "dereliction of duty," or lesser errors of judgment.

Burned documents

Kimmel refuses to stop his fight to clear his record.

His feet resting on a stool and his blue eyes twinkling behind glasses, Kimmel said, "I don't know whether the whole story ever will get out. All incriminating documents have been destroyed." He predicts, however, that history eventually will clear him.

Kimmel, a six-footer, still stands erect. But he's not quick of movement or long of stride and he has long since given up hunting. Old age and a heart attack have slowed him, and leave him tired after an hour's visit.

"That's my trouble," he said, "I get exhausted, I nap anytime during the day or night."

"I used to raise gladiolas and roses," he said, "But now I can't walk around too much or bend over."

Kimmel came to Groton in 1947, after he gave up a job as a consultant with a New York engineering firm. He built the three bedroom ranch house to be near a naval officer son, then in submarine service and also to be close to the excellent naval hospital facilities in New London, Conn.

His two other sons also were in the Navy during World War II, one was killed in action. A grandson, Thomas K. Kimmel Jr., is an ensign, having graduated from Annapolis last June.

OFFICIAL WARNING

Draft failures
thwarted by tests

By JOHN D. BRESLIN

Although Michigan Selective Service authorities haven't encountered deliberate deception in the pre-induction physical exams reported in some states, there have been cases of purposeful failure of mental tests by Michigan draftees.

An official of the Armed Forces Entrance and Examining Station (AFES), in Detroit, said recently the station had cases of college graduates scoring at near moronic levels on the Armed Forces Qualification Test (AFQT).

The AFQT is the standard pre-induction mental test.

The Detroit AFES, which administers physical and mental exams to Selective Service registrants from all but 12 Michigan counties, now has a special scoring key that indicates purposeful failure of the AFQT, the official said.

Examinees who are shown by this key to have purposely failed the AFQT are required to take parts of the Army Qualification Battery (AQB), he said.

Should an examinee also fail the AQB parts he is given a "terminal interview" with an Army psychologist, who attempts to ascertain the reasons for repeated failure.

The result of the psychological interview may be a recommendation that the examinee be drafted as an "administrative acceptee," he said.

"Those intentionally failing their mental tests may well be placed in a job classification commensurate with their test scores," the official warned.

"New regulations have been adopted to deter those who, for example, have college educations yet purport to flunk their mental tests," he said.

Kennedy gift turned down

NEW YORK (AP) -- Mrs. John F. Kennedy has turned down a $3,000 gift to the Kennedy Memorial Library donated by former undersecretary of the Navy Paul B. Fay, Jr., who was a personal friend of the late President.

Mrs. Kennedy's office here would not comment on the rejection any further than confirming it.

There have been published reports that the Kennedy family was unhappy with portions of a book written by Fay about President Kennedy. Reports said some parts of the book, "The Pleasure of his Company," were cut when the Kennedy's objected, but others remained over their objections.

Flint cemeteries end discrimination

FLINT (AP) -- Cemetery operators in Flint say they are ending racial discrimination in graveyards because of a Negro's successful fight to bury his mother in an all-white cemetery.

"It's the law of the land now," said John L. Tobin, manager of Graceland Cemetery.

A number of other cemetery officials told newsmen they had either dropped bans against non-whites from grave plot contracts or were in the process of ending discrimination.

J. Merrill Spencer, a Negro mortician, had sought since 1964 to bury his mother, Rosa Lee Spencer, in all-white Flint Memorial Park.

Monday, after Spencer's battle reached the Michigan Supreme Court, his mother's body was exhumed from an integrated graveyard and reburied in Memorial Park.

He had purchased two grave lots from their white owner, but Memorial Park cited a contract clause barring nonwhites and prohibited him from burying Mrs. Spencer there.

In the first court ruling that Spencer had a right to bury his mother in Memorial Park, Circuit Judge Stewart A. Newblatt of Genesee County said in 1964:

Workshop for police under way

The second phase of the four-part federal government sponsored police workshops is under way at the Union this week.

The sessions began in October and will end in April. Their general emphasis is on police and community relations.

This workshop will deal specifically with training directors and their programs in 20 municipal police departments throughout the country.

Louis A. Radelet, director of the National Center on Police and Community Relations here will coordinate activities.

The conferences are sponsored by a $100,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Justice.

Remaining workshops will deal with recruitment, promotional standards, and management problems. The first session centered on human relations.

Isenberg
lecture set

A Stanford University professor, Patrick C. Suppes, will present an Isenberg Memorial Lecture in philosophy at 8 p.m. Friday in Conrad Auditorium.

Suppes' topic will be "On the Theory of Cognitive Processes."

Suppes is professor of philosophy and statistics, and dean of Stanford's School of Humanities and Sciences. He joined the Stanford faculty in 1950 after receiving his Ph.D. from Columbia University.

Suppes is the author of four books and holds membership in several philosophical, scientific and mathematical societies.

Bubba: Lineman of Year

By UPI

Charles (Bubba) Smith, the massive 6-7, 268-pound end who bulwarked the Spartans' awesome defensive unit, today was named United Press International's Lineman of the Year for 1966.

"Beautiful, baby, beautiful," Smith said, after learning of the honor.

"I thought it would be Lloyd Phillips (Arkansas defensive tackle). I really didn't think I'd win it."

The 21-year-old senior from Beaumont, Tex., who made All-America for the second straight year and missed by only seven votes of being a unanimous selection in this year's balloting, was a runaway choice for lineman of the year honors as he earned 159 of a possible 320 votes to easily outdistance Notre Dame linebacker Jim Lynch and Arkansas defensive tackle Lloyd Phillips.

Smith was the central figure on Michigan State's highly-praised defensive unit which led the Spartans through a 9-0-1 campaign and a No. 2 national ranking. His tremendous size and strength made him almost impossible to move and enemy passers and punters were constantly harassed by him during Saturday afternoon clashes.

Lynch, a vital cog in Notre Dame's defense which allowed only 4.2 points per game, received 25 votes in the balloting while Phillips received 18. George Patton, Georgia's outstanding defensive tackle, was named on 12 ballots while middle guard Wayne Meylan of Nebraska and defensive halfback George Webster of Michigan State each received 10 votes.

Other linemen to get five or more votes in the balloting were Michigan offensive end Jack Clancy, 9; Notre Dame defensive tackles Kevin Hardy and Pete Duranko and offensive guard Tom Regner and Michigan State offensive end Gene Washington, 6; and Southern Methodist middle guard John Lagrone, Notre Dame offensive end Jim Seymour, Army linebacker Townsend Clarke and Alabama offensive tackle Cecil Dowdy, 5.

Smith is the first Michigan State player ever to win the honor and it is strictly his father's doing that he attended the school at all. Bubba was coached by his father in high school and wanted to go to UCLA upon graduation, but the senior Smith persuaded him to go to Michigan State because of his respect for Coach Duffy Daugherty and because the name of the school "fascinated" him.

Smith, who majors in physical education, won a letter as a sophomore and reached his potential as a junior. He followed with an even more impressive campaign this year and is expected to be selected early in the January pro draft.

The big end was a campus hero at Michigan State this fall and signs with slogans such as "Kill, Bubba, Kill" adorned the stands of each Spartan game.

Smith is the fifth Big Ten player to receive the award since its beginning in 1950. Other recipients from that conference were Alex Karras of Iowa (1957), Tom Brown of Minnesota (1960), Bobby Bell of Minnesota (1962) and Dick Butkus of Illinois (1964). End Howard Twilley of Tulsa won the award last year.

De Witt sells Cincinnati Reds

CINCINNATI (UPI) - A group of local investors, headed by Francis Dale of the Cincinnati Enquirer, purchased the Cincinnati Reds from Bill DeWitt Monday and said they intended to keep the club in Cincinnati and see that it has a new riverfront stadium.

The price was not disclosed but it was estimated at $8 million, about $4 million more than DeWitt paid for the team when he acquired it from Powell Crosley Jr. in 1962.

Dale identified members of his group as attorney Louis Nippert; David Gamble, director of Proctor and Gamble; Raymond and Barry Buse, owners of R. L. Buse Whiskey Distillers; James R. Williams, president of Williams Investment Company; Dr. William Hackett, London, Ohio veterinarian; John Sawyer, London, Ohio, farmer and cattle rancher; A. E. Knowlton, Del-ware, Ohio, contractor and developer; Andrew Hopple, executive of Newtown, Inc., in Cincinnati; William DeWitt Jr., Cincinnati Red official and son of the former owner and William J. Williams of the Williams Investment Company in Cincinnati.

Hackett, a former Ohio State football star, and Sawyer are members of a group headed by former Cleveland Browns' Coach Paul Brown seeking to land a professional football franchise in Cincinnati.

Dale said none of the new owners has more than 15 per cent of the outstanding shares. The temporary officers of the group, known as Six-Seventeen, Inc., are Dale, president; William J. Williams, vice president and Henry Hobson Jr., secretary and treasurer.

Dale said the new owners would enter into a 40 year lease with the city which would cover the life of any bonds issued to finance the new riverfront stadium. Progress on the new stadium has bogged down over the failure of DeWitt and city officials to agree on terms for a stadium lease. Dale said the new owners would launch an immediate search for a new General Manager. He added that DeWitt will be available on a consultant capacity for one year. He also said that Manager Dave Bristol and the present front office staff will be retained.

Dale also said that the group anticipates that Pete Rozelle, commissioner of the National Football League, will announce an AFL franchise for Cincinnati before the end of the week.

IN ASTRODOME

Houston named site for Clay-Terrell title bout

NEW YORK (UPI) - Cassius Clay announced today that he will defend his heavyweight title in a long delayed bout against top contender Ernie Terrell Feb. 6 in Houston's Astrodome.

The champion promised 50 per cent of the gate and 50 per cent of the ancillary rights while Terrell will get 20 per cent of the gate and 17-1/2 per cent of the ancillary revenue.

Terrell, who owns the World Boxing Association heavyweight title, predicted, "I'm going to beat him to a pulp. In fact, I'm going to knock him out. Clay said that he would quit if he is beaten, and I will make him quit and let him be a Black Muslim minister, because all he does is preach. This will prove who is the real champion."

The official signing took place in a midtown hotel with officials of the Astrodome Championship Enterprises, Inc., which will promote the fight along with a newly formed organization, the Houston Sports Association.

"The fight should settle once and for all the man who deserves to wear the heavyweight crown," said Fred Hofmeier, president of Astrodome Championship Enterprises. "It was inevitable that these two great fighters should meet and we are very happy that they have chosen the Astrodome as the setting for the fight."

Ticket prices will be $5, $10 and $15 in the permanent Astrodome stands, and there will be three ringside ticket prices at $25, $50 and $100.

Clay said, "This will be your last fight. All I hear is about you being champion, champion, champion. We'll see about that."

Amid much ballyhoo, Clay signed to defend his title last March against Terrell. But the bout was driven out of the country because of Big Ernie's alleged underworld connections and the champion's outspoken views on the Viet Nam war and his draft status.

The fight finally found a home in Toronto, but Terrell pulled out when he saw that the live gate and closed circuit telecast revenue was going to suffer from adverse publicity. Canadian George Chuvalo was rushed in as a last minute substitute and put up a surprisingly good fight, managing to last 15 rounds against Clay.

The contest with Chuvalo started Clay on the busiest campaign of any heavyweight champion since Joe Louis concluded his "Bum-of-the Month" club back in 1941. After the decision victory over Chuvalo, Clay kayoed Henry Cooper, Brian London, Karl Mildener, and Cleveland (Big Cat) Williams. Williams's bout with Clay also was held in the Astrodome, and the financial success of the fight was mainly responsible for Clay and Main Bout, Inc., the Black Muslim outfit that owns exclusive ancillary rights to Clay's fights, returning to Houston. The Clay-Williams affair attracted 35,460 spectators and $491,290.

Instructor Beatty

Charles Beatty, injured in 1964 and told he would never wrestle again, is serving as manager of the wrestling team. Here he gives advice to members of the team. State News photo by Tony Ferrante

OVERCOMES INJURY

Beatty won't quit

By NORM SAARI
State News Sports Writer

Ambitions of becoming a Big Ten wrestling champ were shattered in one afternoon for Charles Beatty. But a lifelong love of the sport's keen competition has kept him interested, and Beatty now serves as varsity team manager.

As a member of the freshman wrestling team two years ago, Beatty dislocated three neck vertebrae, was totally paralyzed from his neck down for two weeks and remained partially paralyzed for the following two months. Now, however, he has regained complete movement, but is under strict doctor's orders never to wrestle again. Beatty is a physical education major who has hopes of becoming a wrestling coach.

"With his knowledge of the sport, he has proved to be a very efficient manager," Peninger said. "As a freshman wrestler he came here with a 84-3 high school record in Ypsilanti and we rated him as future championship material."

Beatty, who was attracted to MSU, along with high school teammate Mike Bradley, by a wrestling tender, recalls vividly the day of his accident.

"It was Nov. 3, 1964, towards the end of practice, I was getting kind of tired, but was on the mat practicing with another freshman in the 115 weight class."

"I shot for a 'fireman's carry' but my foot slipped and I fell to a sitting position. He came over the back of my head, and tucked my chin into my chest. I never felt any pain, but could not move. They took me to Olin, then had to transfer me to Sparrow Hospital. X-rays showed that I had dislocated three vertebrae in my neck."

"During my two-month stay at Sparrow, I eventually regained control of my body. They released me after Christmas, and I still got to spend some of the vacation at home."

"When winter term started, I stayed at Olin for therapy treatments. Finally, I was allowed to go back to classes spring term."

Beatty explained that the doctors discovered he had an underdeveloped spinal column and any further injury could cause paralysis for life.

"I hated to give up wrestling, but I know it was the only thing I could do. Now, coach lets me do a few of the exercises with the team, but I'm not supposed to wrestle."

"There is something about wrestling that has always kept me close to it. I think there is more competition in it than in any other sports."

"You're alone on that mat, you know you're the one who has to produce or else get beaten. It isn't like team competition where you rely on other guys to help you win."

Beatty's knowledge of the sport has helped him as manager, he explained, because he can understand any technicalities of wrestling without having to question Peninger.

of contacting Devaney, Phipps said "No comment."

"I didn't even want to say 'no comment' to the reporters," Phipps said, "since that is sometimes mistaken for refusing to comment on something that actually is happening."

But the Omaha World-Herald said a "Lincoln source" said Devaney had been approached and that he "expressed interest."

When told of this Phipps said:

Devaney denies offer of Denver GM post

DENVER (UPI) — The Denver Broncos of the American Football League, in the market for a new general manager, Tuesday flatly denied reports that Nebraska head football coach Bob Devaney had been approached for the post.

Gerald Phipps, co-owner of the club and acting general manager, said, "No, he has definitely not been approached by anyone." Asked if Denver had any intention

Cage schedule called 'weak'

According to a detailed survey, Michigan State has one of the weakest basketball schedules in the country. The Spartans will meet the team with the nation's toughest schedule, Wichita State, Saturday night.

A system to rank the toughness of a team's schedule has been compiled by Gordon L. Wise, a professor at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio.

Wichita State plays the most difficult competition, Wise's system shows, and MSU, the 134th most difficult. "By the time Wichita meets MSU, Creighton, Texas Western, Utah State and St. Louis, Loyola of Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, Bradley and Drake twice each, they'll know how tough their schedule has been," Wise said.

"Notre Dame, with the fifth toughest schedule, is an example of how to compile an unimpressive won-lost mark." The Irish were 5-21 last year, and this year they will have to play such teams as MSU, St. Johns, UCLA, Kentucky, Duke, Houston, Creighton, Indiana, Illinois and Bradley.

Wise computed his figures on the basis of several pre-season forecasts for 233 NCAA teams. A composite of these forecasts was made, and a numerical value assigned to each of the 47 teams that received some pre-season support, from 45 points for UCLA to five for Michigan and 11 others. Michigan State was given 30 points.

Wichita State had 391 "schedule power points," meaning the numerical value of the teams they play add up to 391. Points are adjusted according to where the game is played—at home or a neutral site. MSU had 117 points.

At look at the top five teams in the latest UPI poll shows a big difference between their ranking and the difficulty of their schedule. Schedule points contributed are in the parentheses:

1. UCLA	87th	(45)
2. Kentucky	165th	(43)
3. Texas Western	52nd	(41)
4. MSU	134th	(30)
5. Houston	140th	(30)

From this comparison, it would seem that several of these rated teams shouldn't have too much trouble compiling impressive won-lost records. "But just how strong these teams really are probably won't be known until tourney time in March," Wise said.

"Of course, all of this will change somewhat during the season as some teams do better or worse than expected. For this reason this study will be revised at the end of the season, and the schedules and conferences will be re-rated."

The five teams with the toughest schedules, plus some others, with their schedule power points follow:

M.A. work part of Peace Corps

Peace Corps work may mean 15 credits toward a Master of Arts in Education for about 30 Corps trainees who have served since January, 1966.

But the Peace Corps also means individual research into other cultures.

The group is a joint Peace Corps - Michigan State response to the Nigerian government request for professional secondary school teachers, according to Sheldon Cherney, director of the International Extension program here.

Responsible for organizing the academic program both on campus and in Nigeria, MSU divided the pilot project into three phases.

The first phase began September, 1965, and consisted of ten weeks of campus training and three weeks practice teaching. The two-year experience in Nigeria constitutes the second part of their master's program.

Upon finishing their work in Nigeria, the participants return here to finish their degrees requirements.

MSU hopes the pilot project with Nigeria will stimulate similar attempts, said Cherney. Though the Peace Corps has thrived on its amateur standing, he feels a more professional status abroad is needed.

Besides aiding the Nigerian educational system, Cherney believes the experience can improve the Michigan school system. According to a study made six years ago, Cherney said less than one per cent of Michigan high schools taught anything about Africa.

The few lessons on Africa were more "like Tarzan and the apes," he said. The value of the program for the United States lies in the first-hand knowledge these future teachers will gain.

In Nigeria, the MSU volunteers teach courses ranging from English to science. Their extracurricular activities include coaching athletic teams, organizing music, photography or art groups, helping to construct dining halls, water towers and libraries.

Besides 30 to 40 hours of teaching, many of the volunteers help with community English literacy programs, recreation and sanitation projects, Boy or Girl Scout groups and first aid activities.

Each trainee is conducting a research project to obtain his master's degree, Cherney said one girl is translating Hausa (language of northern Nigeria) fairy tales into French for her project and for use in French classes. Another volunteer is collecting insect specimens, but faces a problem, Cherney said, ... a way to preserve them.

Counselors study student anxieties

The extreme anxiety felt by some students in test situations is being studied in connection with behavioral counseling by Carl Thoresen, assistant professor of education.

Although most students experience some degree of anxiety, there are some students who suffer serious mental or physical problems in test situations, he says.

Unlike traditional counseling which describes a problem as a symptom of mental difficulty, behavioral counseling defines an individual's problem as behavior that has been learned.

As the primary determinant of behavior is environment, the student must examine his immediate relations with others and his surroundings to determine what causes his behavior, Thoresen explains.

Once the student knows what causes his anxiety, he must "unlearn" this anxiety in test situations.

The behavioral counselor utilizes the human learning approach to "teach" the student to behave in more appropriate and adaptive ways in test situations, he said.

The counselor is viewed as an applied behavioral scientist who makes use of a number of procedures rather than the traditional counselor-client interview.

Student anxiety is being studied to identify the procedures that work best with certain types of people. In other words, the study is to answer the question of why some students are more responsive to counseling than others.

Five year program requested

Recommendations for a fifth year degree program in landscape architecture are presently being drawn up by the School of Urban Planning and Landscape Architecture.

It is hoped that the program might be implemented in fall of 1967, according to Myles E. Boylan, director of the School of Urban Planning and Landscape Architecture. Boylan also said that the Department of Urban Planning may soon consider a similar fifth year program.

The program as presently conceived would consist of a year of professional training in landscape architecture with a Bachelor of Landscape Architecture awarded at the conclusion. This degree would then become a requisite for entering the department's masters degree program.

A B.A. degree would still be conferred with the completion of the normal four-year course work.

The B.L.A. program must still be approved by the Curriculum Committee of the College of Social Science, the University Curriculum Committee and the Academic Council.

Similar fifth year programs are already in existence at four of the 20 universities which have accredited landscape architecture programs.

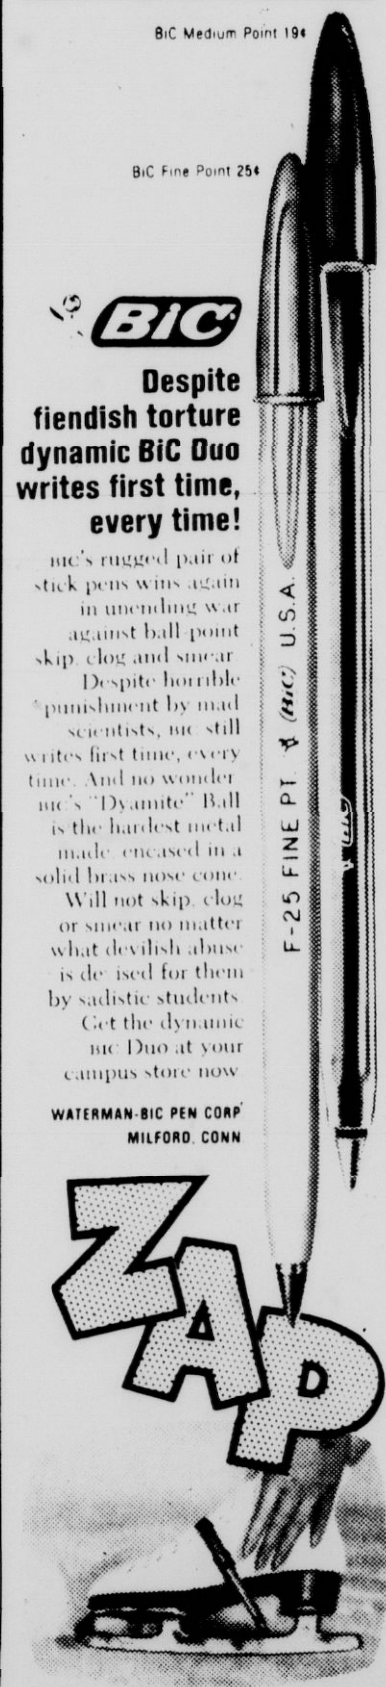

Dinner set by meat institute

A dinner to acquaint faculty members with opportunities in the meat industry for graduates will be sponsored by the American Meat Institute at the Union Thursday.

Richard Swenson, assistant dean of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources will preside at the meeting consisting of nearly 150 faculty members and key student leaders.

Guest speakers will be Herrel DeGraff, president of the American Meat Institute, and Chalm G. Houghton, director of membership and personnel relations of the institute.

During the afternoon a tour will be made of the beef cattle research center and the MSU Food Stores facility.

TWO TYPES

Prof tells why men run for office

By CAROL MIGHTON

Both personality and political system characteristics are involved when a man makes the decision to run for a political office, says Rufus P. Browning, professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin.

In a speech here, Browning outlined his research on characteristics of those running for office, and the effects of the political system upon their decision to do so.

Two types of individuals run for office, Browning said. One makes the decision to run on his own initiative and the other is recruited by the political party.

Through his research of politicians in New Haven, Conn., Browning found that political recruits were concerned with person-to-person relationships and a desire to help other people.

Those who ran for office on their own initiative, however, showed greater concern for power and achievement when tested for motivation.

It was also found that the voluntary politicians had some experience or association with politics from their families.

An individual's characteristics which make him run for office also influence his choice of behavior once in office, Browning said.

When politicians in important offices were tested for motivation, most scored high on power and achievement motivations and low on affiliative motivations. Politicians in lower offices scored just the opposite, with high scores on affiliative motivation.

"People with very high levels of power motivation are so sensitive to control that they don't fit into politics," Browning said.

Men with high power and achievement motives would decide to run for office, Browning said, if the political system provided them with opportunities to carry out these desires. To satisfy their needs, a political system must provide opportunities for influence and control over policies and opportunity for advancement, he said.

The political system characteristics also influence the type of man needed for recruitment, he added.

SCREEN TEST SET

Lead in Hollywood film sought by grad student

He's a short, stocky student with brown eyes and wavy brown hair. Today fellow students walk right past him, but someday soon they and millions of others may be watching him on the movie screen.

Peter L. Barba, East Lansing graduate student, is going to Hollywood Dec. 15 for a screen test. He is trying for the leading role in a Twentieth-Century Fox film about a young Spanish priest who chooses the priesthood because he has to and not because he really wants to.

"It's a big thing for me," says Barba, who was born in Spain and came to the U.S. to study. "It's the best chance of my life."

The eagerness he feels shows as he tells how he first became involved with films.

"I was working at the World's Fair in New York, demonstrating a show car for the General Motors Futurama," he said, "when I was asked if I was interested in taking a small part in a Spanish movie."

He accepted, and went back to Spain to film the movie. Last summer he landed a supporting role in an American movie made in Spain.

"It was a case of being in the right place at the right time," he said. Soon he had an agent through whom he was contacted by Twentieth-Century Fox.

Barba is working for his master's degree in romance languages and teaching Spanish. Miss Mary Hardwick, a graduate assistant in speech, is coaching him in drama.

Miss Hardwick gives tenacity — "the ability to dig in and stick with it" — as one of his most outstanding qualities.

He enjoys teaching and wants to work for his doctorate, he said.

Junior colleges growing, changing 'U' growth trend

By LARRY SCOTT

If anything is responsible for MSU's trend toward a smaller ratio of graduate students to undergraduates, it is the growth of community colleges in Michigan.

MSU expects only 1,300 more students next year than this, and as much as 75 per cent of this increase is expected to be graduate students, Provost Howard R. Neville said last week.

Michigan's junior colleges are absorbing much of the freshman enrollment. A look at the growth of these two-year institutions offers at least a partial explanation for this trend.

In the 50 years from 1914 to 1964, annual enrollments in U.S. community colleges have increased from a mere 49 to over 46,000.

Voting trends indicate that the community college concept is gradually becoming accepted by the voters as a vital aspect of Michigan's system of higher education, according to the MSU's Office of Community College Cooperation.

In November, voters approved the establishment of the Tuscola-Huron-Sanilac Community College, the state's 28th community college complex.

Estimates of community college growth have indicated that by 1970, Michigan will have 33 such colleges.

All seek to provide these basic functions: two-year programs for transfer to four-year institutions, vocational programs leading to employment, continuing education services within the community and cultural enrichment programs for interested persons of the community.

Junior colleges absorb much of the increase in freshman enrollment, which automatically eases the burden of the four-year university, he said.

Many of these freshmen never progress beyond the sophomore level, and community colleges serve as a screening device, according to estimates. Enrollments in community colleges are expected to reach 72,000 with only about 50,000 students expected to finish the year. By 1970, enrollments are expected to exceed 125,000.

A trend toward more public education and less individual expense is indicated somewhat by the increase in federal and state aid over recent years.

It is anticipated that the Legislature will appropriate $15 million for capital outlay in 1967-68 for community colleges, in contrast to the $1 million appropriated in 1960-61.

The federal government, under the Michigan Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963, has since then appropriated over $10.5 million for capital outlay in Michigan's community colleges.

Bahamas deadline Jan. 12

Only a few arm-twisting days remain for students to maneuver parents into making their Christmas gifts a term-break trip, March 19-26, to the Bahamas.

Reservation and payment deadline for the ASMSU excursion to the Bahama Islands is January 12.

Transportation from Detroit to Grand Bahama Island and back to Detroit, seven nights' accommodation, breakfasts and dinners are included in the $250 cost.

Students will be responsible for getting to and from Detroit, Laundry, telephone calls and personal purchases — are not part of ASMSU's stated cost.

Eligibility is limited to Michigan State students, faculty, staff and their families.

Applications and further information may be obtained from Brad Miller, ASMSU, Room 335 Student Services Building.

College Bowl team set for second try

Academic sports come to the fore once more this term when MSU's Spartan scholars play Columbia again in another "College Bowl."

The four-man teams meet in New York City at the Lexington Hotel on Friday morning, Dec. 9, to compete before a convention of the National Association of Manufacturers (NAM).

This match is an entertainment program and will not be televised.

On Nov. 20 MSU participated on the nationally televised "General Electric - College Bowl" and lost to the Columbia team 320 to 150.

This same Ivy League team will again challenge "veterans" of the televised game Byron A. Boyd and captain Donald E. Mackenzie for a 30-minute contest.

Mackenzie had said that even God couldn't beat that team, but he and his teammates have been given the chance to prove that they can.

Filling the other seats on the team are Thomas A. Heppenheimer, a 19-year-old senior from Coto Solo, Canal Zone, and Ronald P. Pelley, a 19-year-old Cleveland junior.

Heppenheimer and Pelley were members of the "second team" that drilled MSU's College Bowl representatives prior to their appearance on NBC.

No prizes are offered in this match but NAM pays all expenses for both teams.

Columbia is currently a champion in the College Bowl game and Student bridge players sought for Union Board tournament

The Annual International Inter-collegiate Bridge Tournament, sponsored by Union Board, will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday in 21 Union. The tournament, now in its 20th year, is a contest in duplicate contract bridge. Entry fee is $1 per person.

All players will have the same partners throughout the tournament. All pairs compete first on campus, playing hands which will be the same at every college. The winning pair or pairs are eligible to compete in the Regional Face-to-Face Tournament.

Religion discussion at Fee

"Religion and the University Student" will be discussed at the second of this year's College of Social Science Discussion Series at 8 tonight in 137 Fee Hall. Members of a faculty panel will attempt to review the concept of religion and also will discuss the meaning of religion to the university student, according to Brian Coyer, Round Lake, Minn., graduate assistant and panel moderator.

Panel members James B. McKee, professor of sociology and Robert T. Anderson, associate professor of religion, will attempt to answer two central questions: "What is religion?" and "Is religion relevant to the university student?"

Format for the discussion tonight will be the same as in the past. Both faculty members will offer introductory remarks and then will accept open questions from the floor. "The purpose of the Discussion Series is to stimulate thought and discussion on current issues of interest to university students," commented Coyer.

Ag Econ chairman to head MSU Faculty Club in 1968

Lawrence Boger, chairman of the Dept. of Agricultural Economics, was elected president at a Tuesday meeting of the MSU Faculty Club in the Union.

Other officers named were: treasurer, Merrill R. Pierson, treasurer of the University Business Office; director at large, Carl W. Hall, chairman of the Dept. of Agricultural Engineering; house committee chairman, Henry C. Dykema, director of financial aids.

The president-elect takes on vice presidential responsibilities until 1968 when he assumes the presidency. James Stokley, assistant professor of journalism and astronomy, will become president this year.

James T. Huston, supervisor of accounts receivable in the University Business Office, remains secretary of the group. Departing President Owen Reed, professor of music, received an honorary gavel at the meeting.

it's what's happening

The MSU Marketing Club will hold a meeting at 7:30 tonight in the Teak Room at Eppley Center. There will be a presentation by Xerox on corporation and management philosophy, marketing research, and methods of finance. All majors are welcome to attend.

Ray Denny, professor of psychology, will speak to the Pre-Med Society at 8:30 tonight in 33 Union. The topic of his discussion will be "Learning in Mentally Retarded and Attempts to Train Them."

Thursday

A demonstration on making pine cone wreaths will be given at the Engineer's Wives Meeting at 8 p.m. The meeting will be held in 110 Engineering Building for all members.

Edouard Morot-Sir, cultural counselor to the French Embassy, will give two talks in French on contemporary French life and thought. The first talk, "La Vie Philosophique en France aujourd'hui," will be given at 4 today in 323 Chemistry Building.

The last meeting this term of the Spartan Christian Fellowship will be held at 9 tonight in 36 Union. The North, East and West seminars will meet together.

Grads shun business for gov't, education

Business and industry may have difficulty in recruiting the college graduates they need next year, the director of Michigan State's Placement Bureau predicts.

John D. Shingleton discusses "Trends in Employment Recruiting" in the current issue of the "Michigan State Economic Record," a publication of MSU's Bureau of Business and Economic Research in the Graduate School of Business.

He says that although starting salaries for graduates will be up 5 to 6 per cent, "the market next year will be even tighter than it was this year."

Shingleton continues that, "Business and industry have lost, and will continue to lose, ground to governmental and educational recruiters in terms of attracting college graduates."

Five years ago, only 10 government agencies recruited at MSU; last year there were 67.

In addition, colleges and universities have joined the elementary and secondary school systems which recruit from the nation's campuses. "And they have attracted graduates who might otherwise have gone into business," Shingleton says.

"Many graduates are not at all sure that a position in business will enable them to attain what may be called a 'meaningful life.'"

Business and industry are taking positive steps to counteract these developments, Shingleton says.

He cites a greater interest in recruiting among women and minority groups, new summer employment programs for students still in college, and greater emphasis on updating middle management through inservice training programs.

The College Placement Council recently inaugurated a system called GRAD (Graduate Resume Accumulation and Distribution), to aid employers in getting personnel information.

GRAD will be used by university and employer members of the council throughout the United States to make known the qualifications of experienced college graduates to a large number of prospective employers.

Lodge says Viet war 'just might fade away'

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) -- The war in Viet Nam "just might fade out" with no formal end, U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge said Tuesday.

The American envoy, serving his second tour of duty as ambassador to South Viet Nam, said the overall situation in the country is better than it was a year ago although "progress is uneven."

In an interview with the Mutual Broadcasting System, Lodge recalled that the situation was "extremely bad" in May, 1965, but took a turn for the better in July.

"I think you could say that they cannot win," said Lodge.

"I think you could say that we cannot lose, we cannot be pushed out, I think you could say that we haven't won yet."

Concerning the possibility the war might just fade away, the ambassador explained that people in the Orient are "extremely realistic."

"The oriental man," he said, "makes up his mind one day that this thing that looked pretty good really isn't so very good. It's not going to work out, so he just decides to fade out. And nobody admits anything. There's no treaty, there's no headline. They don't even admit they were in a war, let alone admit they got defeated at it."

SAE's find Santa in northern bar

Christmas is coming to the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house this Saturday--complete with Santa and Mrs. Claus, elves, tree, presents and 47 boys and girls, ranging from ages eight to 13.

Strangely enough, they owe it all to a cozy place in Harrison, 70 miles north of Lansing, called the Sportsman's Bar.

The weekend of the Purdue game, a group of the brothers and their dates went hunting. It proved an unsuccessful day, and they decided to seek out some refreshment.

The Sportsman provided the group with additional spirit--a dead ringer for St. Nick.

Santa's double is John Bradburn, a retiree in his seventies, complete with a full head of snowy-white hair and the personality to match, according to Doug Tinsler, Juneau, Alaska, senior.

The SAE's, along with the Little Sisters of Minerva, give a Christmas party every year for orphans and underprivileged children.

The Little Sisters is a national women's honorary, associated with every national SAE chapter. Originally, its members were the actual sisters of the brothers, or their fiancées.

Today, it's similar to a hand-picked sorority within the fraternity. Rush is held once a year, every spring. Some 200 to 300 girls go through, upon invitation; names are submitted by the brothers and Little Sisters. Twenty-five are chosen.

In the past, they've hired a man to play Santa, complete with fake beard and padding.

Bradburn's padding is his own, and he's grown a beard for the occasion.

He'll be giving out gifts any Santa would be proud to distribute. The Little Sisters and brothers, asking East Lansing merchants for donations, assembled $225 worth of gifts, along with a sizable donation from the Coral Gables.

Presents include a chemistry set, easels, a guitar, three sleds, a variety of games, dolls and sweaters.

At the party, each child will have a brother and sister assigned to him, serving as "parents" for the afternoon.

Santa will literally fly in. He will be greeted at Capital City Airport by the children, "Mrs. Santa" (Zeta Tau Alpha cook), eight elves and Brandy, the SAE gargantuan mascot St. Bernard. Following the party, Santa and Mrs. Claus will be winced and dined at an area restaurant.

Down The Drain

Water, water everywhere, but only milk to drink. Russell Felzke, Hastings sophomore, set a new record by remaining 100 hours in his East Shaw shower. The previous record was 66 hours, set by a Western Michigan University student.

PITIFUL OBSESSION

Drinkers discover bottle no solution to woes

Over 93 million persons took at least one "snort" last year, and at least 4 million of them "can't say no" to the bottle.

Nov. 28-Dec. 5 marked Alcoholism Information Week and various estimates place the number of alcoholics in the U.S. today at between four and six million.

A handful of MSU students are among those under treatment for alcoholism, but J.T. McConnell, education director of the Mich. Dept. of Health Alcoholism Program, would not be more specific.

"For one thing, I do not want to give the impression that alcoholism is a rampant problem at MSU," McConnell said.

He also pointed out that the problem of alcoholism is like an iceberg.

"Only a little of it shows." There is really no accurate way of saying how many alcoholics there are in a society on the basis of the few who come for treatment, he said.

The solution to alcoholism is complicated by several factors, all involving public and professional ignorance in the field.

First of all, nobody knows exactly what causes alcoholism.

There are three schools of thought.

Some say alcoholism is a psychological illness. Others say it is sociological in origin. Still others, including McConnell, believe it to be largely physical.

By this last is meant that there are differences in the body chemistry of the alcoholic, as opposed to other people. You may drink two glasses of whiskey a day and not become an alcoholic, while your friend may drink one a day and become one.

There are mysteries about alcoholism which nobody can answer adequately, McConnell said.

"Why is it, for instance," McConnell asks, "that there is so little incidence of alcoholism among Jews?"

And he goes on: "Italy and France are both big wine producing countries. People start drinking at an early age. Yet Italy has a very low incidence of alcoholism, while France has one of the highest in the world."

There are several steps to alcoholism.

First comes increased tolerance. You can drink more. Then come the blackouts. This is a period of alcohol-induced amnesia. A person wakes up the day after a party and can't remember what happened after a certain point.

Then you start sneaking extra drinks. After that comes a pre-occupation with drinking and gulping drinks.

Following this period, more blackouts.

After that comes loss of control. There begins a compulsion to drink.

If the individual has not spotted the danger before this and cut down on his drinking, he must now seek professional help to give it up.

Complicating this problem is that it usually takes about 10 or 15 years of gradual development for a person to reach the critical stage, McConnell says.

Most overt alcoholism occurs between the ages of 35-50, he says.

A person may well be on the way when he is 28, but he still has sufficient control over himself that he doesn't feel he is in any trouble.

It is believed that there are more men than women alcoholics. An estimated 18-25 per cent of alcoholics are women. This is attributed by McConnell to the higher mobility men have in society.

ICBMs faster than American intelligence experts had predicted.

It was the defense chief's contention that Pentagon planners had allowed in advance for a possible error in intelligence estimates by deciding to build the new Minuteman, by ordering new "penetration aids" designed to get U.S. missiles past defensive systems, and by deciding-as he announced last month-to replace the submarine-launched Polaris missiles with the bigger, more effective Poseidon missiles.

McNamara said he wanted to emphasize that the "United States, without taking any actions beyond those already planned, will continue to have a substantial quantitative and qualitative superiority over the Soviet Union in ICBMs."

Johnson, too, had another major announcement: The Federal Home Loan Bank Board will furnish $500 million additional to Savings & Loan Associations and some other mortgage lenders. The big home-building industry has been in a tailspin because of high interest rates and a shortage of mortgage money.

The Home Loan Bank Board said in Washington the $500 million would become available without borrowing any new money.

RECORD SET

Shower vigil lasts 100 hours

By SCOTT LOVE JOY

"It's the dumbest thing I ever did," said Russell Felzke, Hastings sophomore, after 100 hours in an East Shaw shower.

Felzke says his waterlogged vigil began at 10 p.m. Thursday, "when I opened my big mouth at the wrong time," although he swears he would have done it anyway.

The goal of 100 hours was reached at 2 a.m. Tuesday, but his excitement to get out was overshadowed by three exams and a paper due the same day.

The constantly running water turned his skin white right away. According to Felzke his hands and feet bothered him most with the skin shrinking while he was getting his usual six to eight hours of sleep a night. After 70 hours all the rest of his body began to chap and turn red -- and he was warned about a hot water bill.

According to a resident adviser, a reported call from Olin Health Center warned that any trip outside would result in pneumonia. This could not be verified.

Felzke was high in praise of the companionship given by his friends--until they celebrated the end of the vigil by throwing him back into the showers.

Visitors from Western Michigan and the University of Michigan came to see Felzke and told him the previous record was 66 hours held by a WMU undergraduate. No one seems ready to challenge Felzke's record.

'No-cash' system proposed

A revolutionary "no-currency" monetary system has been proposed for the United States by a chemical engineer writing in an MSU publication.

Lawrence A. Welsch, a doctoral candidate at the University of Pittsburgh, made this contention in his article to "Business Topics," a publication of the University's Graduate School of Business.

All purchases could be made with personalized credit cards having a number for everyone, he suggests. Stores, vending machines and other points of purchase would be wired into a computerized accounting center that would keep financial records for all card holders.

The centers would record all transactions between cardholders, keep records of stock and bond ownership, provide information for government and business surveys and serve as a vote recorder and counter in elections, Welsch says.

As individual purchases are made, Welsch says, appropriate accounts will be debited and credited. Where repetitive transactions are made, such as wages, rent, gas, interest pre-programmed sums will automatically be transferred to their proper accounts, according to Welsch.

If an account is accidentally overdrawn by a nominal sum, Welsch points out, an automatic loan would be made with an interest charge.

If a person lost his credit card, he would be assigned a new account number immediately. Memory banks in the computer would sound the alarm and mutilate the lost card if it showed up anywhere in a transaction, says Welsch.

The change from money to credit cards, according to Welsch, would not alter the present capitalistic, market-oriented economy of the United States.

Most of the equipment for this system is now available. Such a system, according to Welsch, would cost the banking system $8.3 billion annually compared to the present system costing $12 billion annually.

Opposition to a large central credit card system, Welsch points out, will come from banks, businesses that extend consumer credit and citizens who feel their privacy will be invaded. Tax evaders and crime rings would also oppose the system, according to Welsch.

Chances for its adoption now are slim, Welsch says. But the interest by banks in the credit card business, he adds, might make it worthwhile to establish a central research area to direct the development and introduction of a national credit system.
