Johnson proposes record: asks sacrifice to pay costs

WASHINGTON — President Johnson unveiled Tuesday a record $75 billion defense budget, his sixth to exceed $73 billion, after 18 years of military spending by the United States. The budget would take $72.3 billion in military outlays — $5 billion more than Congress approved in the previous year. The budget took 18 months to prepare and is the largest in the nation's history.

The budget, which totals $75 billion, is the same as that called for by the president in his budget message. The budget for fiscal 1968 is expected to be $76.3 billion, or 10 percent higher than the previous year.

The budget includes $71.2 billion for defense, $4 billion for economic and social programs, $2 billion for foreign aid and $500 million for the arts and education.

The budget for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1968, is expected to be higher than the previous year.

It is possible to write off the firing of Kerr from his post of chancellor of the University of California as just one more irresponsible political act in a state that has become a symbol of political irrationality. But to do this would be to miss the greater significance of last Friday's action by the California regents, Kerr and California Governor Ronald Reagan were engaged in a classic struggle of state university versus state government, and in the end this expected government reigned dominant. When Kerr was a faculty member at Berkeley in the early '50s, Kerr established his liberalism by fighting against the firing of colleagues who refused to sign loyalty oaths. As recently as a year ago he was named chancellor of Berkeley, and in 1952, as a member of the entire university system.

Strong hand Kerr was out of the country when the famous FSM rebellion at Berkeley erupted in 1964. He subsequently lent his support against student lawlessness, but refused to follow the holding of the student leaders by regents who told him how to punish the "unruly demons." He was always in a curious position: unpopular with the students for the control he still exerted and unpopular with outside elements in the state for his apparent leniency of benignity.

It is still not certain exactly what prompted the regents' decision to fire Kerr. Kerr had changed Kerr had politics with backing of his support for Pat Brown in the recent gubernatorial election. And there had been increased friction recently between the chancellor and governor over Reagan's plans to cut the University's budget and aid stabilisation.

Reagan had also sparked a dispute with his demand that Kerr "clean up the back- side of the state university" by stanching the "student and political" movement at the Berkeley campus. Whatever the reasons is that the far-ranging implications of the firing are political, no matter what the precipitating cause. Kerr has said that the University "should serve truth, not political partnership."

This applies to far more than just the University of California, and strikes me particularly hard in a state-supported institution.

Precarious position Kerr's case demonstrates the precarious position of a university president. He must absorb pressures from above, from the monetary power, and political control of the state university especially arising to dominate the intellectual and educational control over his institution.

At this time heightened questioning of the university's administration, it is important that the state university especially strive to dominate the intellectual integrity and separateness from any external control, the dismissal of Kerr was a regrettable misstep.

 luggage, and cholera are on the increase according to reports recently received. These reports, which are based on a comparison of the number of cases recorded in the past with the number of cases recorded in the present, are from the medical authorities in the region. The reports indicate that the number of cases of cholera in the region is increasing, and that the disease is spreading rapidly. It is important for the authorities to take immediate action to control the spread of the disease and to prevent it from becoming a major epidemic. This can be achieved through the implementation of various measures such as vaccination, isolation of infected individuals, and disinfection of contaminated areas. It is also important to ensure that the necessary medical supplies are available and that the health workers are adequately trained to deal with the situation.

American embassy settles Nicaraguan 20-hour revolt

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — U.S. officials said yesterday that the Managua government has accepted a 20-hour cease-fire to end the anti-American uprising which forced the closure of the U.S. Embassy. The cease-fire, which took effect at 2:00 p.m. local time, was announced by a spokesman for the government of the Sandinista Front.

The announcement came just hours after the Sandinista Front, which controls most of Nicaragua, launched a full-scale offensive against U.S. forces in Managua, forcing the evacuation of all American personnel from the embassy. The U.S. military had been on high alert since the uprising began on Monday, and the cease-fire was seen as a crucial step in preventing further conflict.

The Sandinista Front has been fighting against U.S. intervention in the country for several years, and the latest offensive was seen as a major blow to the U.S. government's efforts to contain the revolution.

Anti-filibuster move cut off by Senate

WASHINGTON — The Senate yesterday cut off debate on a bill to end the filibuster rule, that had been being used to block a measure to strengthen the Voting Rights Act.

The Senate voted 51-48 to end debate on the bill, which would have made it easier to change the rules of the Senate. The filibuster is a Senate tradition that allows a single senator to talk indefinitely and prevent legislation from coming to a vote.

The move was seen as a major victory for the Senate majority leader, Lyndon B. Johnson, who has been working to bring an end to the filibuster rule.

Newsmakers: test for Romney

NEW ORLEANS — George Romney, the governor of Michigan and the leading Republican candidate for president, is facing a test of his political strength.

Romney is the candidate who was expected to win the Republican nomination, but he is now facing a serious challenge from John B. Martin, a former Vice President of the United States.

Martin, who is running as a conservative, has been gaining momentum in the polls, and he is expected to make a strong showing in the upcoming primary elections.

Romney's political advisers are concerned that Martin's campaign could upset the party's plans for a strong showing in the general election.

Romero's campaign is facing a number of challenges, including a strong challenge from Martin and a weakening economy.

Romero's political advisers are expected to announce a new strategy to counter Martin's campaign in the coming days.
Cage nemesis: foreign floor

What happens to a team when it faces their nemesis? Wanting revenge? More motivation? A sense of destiny? The Wisconsin Badgers were not the only team to ponder these questions as the Badgers took on the Penn State Nittany Lions.

The Badgers, ranked 15th in the country, were looking to avenge their 68-60 loss to the Nittany Lions on November 20th. The Badgers had not won a game since that loss, and their record dropped to 3-4-1.

"The pressure is on us," said Wisconsin forward Jack Mullaney. "We need to win, or else we will be getting a lot of criticism from the outside world.

Spartan cages no powerhouse

The Spartan basketball team reminds me of a "Peanuts" cartoon that appeared last year. In this one, Linus was in for a moment, and said, "It's a good thumb, but not a great one," as the coal miner could not make a fist, and said, "For a great thumb, not a great one." The Spartans are a good team, but it is obvious, as Coach John Benington himself seconded, they have problems.

Even when they win games, the Spartans show a lack of consistency. They score in a row, and other times missing more baskets than Reggie Jackson. It is a "30-20" style game, the Spartans take it slow enough to make 30 baskets, but can't handle the fine style because they can't make 20 baskets.

As a result, the Spartans have the lowest scoring percentage in the Big Ten -- 75.2. Their three-point record for a year, 1965-66, was not as bad as you might think.

What does all this mean? It means that Michigan State misses the big man again this year. He can be scored on in the low post, and the Spartans can't score much in the air, as the miners always do.

Last year was a good year, and no one doubts that he is going to be a good man, but that's not on the list. Anyway, he inserted his first six points, and took a lead 12-10, but Michigan State completely dominated last team, allowing only eight points, all in the first half. Benington's own goals.

The defense has been the key to the Spartans' success so far this season. In a conference where all the teams have either equally good or equally bad, the Spartans are off to a fine start.

As Benington said, the Spartans have many problems to overcome. They're a good team, but not a great team.

Intercollegiate battle for freshman skaters

Chicago Symphony led to perfection by Martinon

By FRED T. HUMMELINE

The Film Study Club presented the first in a series of films Monday night in the auditorium of the Union Ballroom. The film, "Dance of the Happy Few," presented by the AAI, was discussed by Ron May, a student at the University of Chicago, and Mrs. J. K. Martinon, a teacher at Morgan Park High School.

The film was a study of the modern dance movement and its influence on various aspects of life. It showed how the dance movement has affected music, literature, art, and other forms of expression. The film also included interviews with dance teachers and performers, discussing their views on the movement and its future.
