U.S. to withdraw troops, planes from West Germany

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The United States will withdraw up to 35,000 troops and almost 100 airplanes from West Germany next year, saving an estimated $100 million spent abroad, under an agreement reached last week with Great Britain and West Germany.

The agreement, announced Tuesday, was reached after five months of negotiations on the crucial issue of keeping as many American troops in Germany as possible while cutting back on the drain of America's gold reserve.

According to the announcement, Britain will withdraw about 5,000 soldiers and about 20 planes from West Germany.

President Johnson was deeply involved in the five-month-long negotiations, officials said.

The agreement, which now goes as a three-nation proposal to the Defense Planning Committee of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, is expected to end a period of uneasiness among the three allies which started in the summer of 1966.

That was when the West German government made clear it would not continue the practice of offsetting the cost of keeping Anglo-American troops on its soil by purchasing military hardware in the two countries.

U.S. officials stressed that the tense atmosphere in which the talks started last October gave way quickly to a friendly climate in which all three sides cooperated in seeking an answer to the ticklish problem which boils down to this:

Can the two "troop dispatching countries," the United States and Britain, ease their balance of payments problem without jeopardizing what the military calls the combat potential of the alliance?

Details of the agreement, partly spelled out in a State Dept. announcement and partly explained by U.S. officials, are as follows:

--The United States now has 225,000 ground troops in the six divisions of the 7th Army in West Germany, and 35,000 Air Force personnel with three wings -- nine squadrons -- of 200 planes. It will withdraw up to 35,000 men and less than 100 planes beginning Jan. 1, 1968. The 35,000 men consist of 10,000 to 12,000 combat troops -- two brigades -- 16,000 to 18,000 support units, and about 6,000 Air Force personnel.

--West Germany agrees to buy between July 1967 and June 1968 $500 million in special, non-marketable, medium-term U.S. Treasury securities and promises to continue its military purchases in this country without committing itself, however, on the value of these purchases.

American officials estimate that these offset purchases will reach $300 million a year, and as U.S. troops in West Germany cause a net outflow of $800 million a year, this could be offset by the two-pronged arrangement.

--Britain now has about 55,000 men in its army of the Rhine. It would withdraw one brigade of 5,000 to 6,000 men and one squadron of about 20 planes.

--Britain will get from the Germans $150 million in the form of offset purchases, but it claims that keeping its soldiers in Germany will cost $230 million. To help close the gap the United States promises to make military purchases in value of $19.6 million in Britain and there will be a windfall of approximately $20 million to Britain from American troops relocated there from France.

In addition, the Bonn government pledges "to continue its practice of not converting dollars into gold," the State Dept. announcement said.

The withdrawn troops, it said, are "fully committed to NATO." This means, officials explained, that the two American brigades, part of the 24th Infantry Division now stationed in Bavaria, will leave their heavy equipment in West Germany and could be airlifted back on short notice in an emergency.

Moreover, the announcement said, the three brigades of the division will rotate and once a year all three will be in West Germany for exercises. The same applies to the four air squadrons to be withdrawn from the nine in West Germany. The headquarters of the 24th Division and its remaining brigade are expected to be transferred from Bavaria to somewhere close to Frankfurt, officials said.

Sen. Aiken urges GOP to take new Asian stand

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., said Tuesday he believes the Johnson administration "cannot achieve an honorable peace in Vietnam." He urged Republicans to promise in 1968 a new look at Asian policies.

He spoke out in a statement as GOP Policy Committee members met in closed session to study a staff report which could help fashion a Republican position on the war for the 1968 campaign.

Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois read reporters a statement he said represented a consensus of members in the closed session of the Policy Committee, in which a staff report critical of Johnson's course was debated.

In the statement, which Dirksen said he personally drafted Tuesday morning before leaving Walter Reed Army Hospital, the Republicans said:

"Preserving wholly the right of full and fair inquiry and criticism, we reiterate wholehearted support of the commander in chief of the armed forces and reaffirm our position of standing foursquare behind him and our field, air and sea commanders in Southeast Asia, along with support of our superb fighting men in their fight to win over Communist aggression."

Dirksen had been in the hospital for treatment of infectious pneumonia.

Dirksen appeared to disagree in part with Aiken, who said previously that the Johnson administration was so involved in Vietnam that he did not believe it was in a position to make an honorable peace.

Aiken, who left the meeting early, said it would be "a fool thing" for the Republicans to try to take a position of "trying to tell Johnson how to run the war in detail."

Aiken, who has opposed escalation of the fighting, said the Vietnam conflict has "split this country to a depth and with an intensity not experienced within this century."

This has resulted because President Johnson, he said, has predicted peace on the unlikely capitulation of the enemy. From the Democratic side, Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., said Monday's disclosure that 28 attempts have been made without success to get negotiations going demonstrates that North Vietnam is prolonging the war.

LBJ delays rail strike for 47 days

WASHINGTON (AP) -- As Congress waited for President Johnson to recommend ways to settle the railroad wage dispute, he signed into law Thursday a bill delaying for 47 more days any strike by craft-shop workers.

White House press secretary George Christian said the President would submit his legislative proposals soon. He added that Johnson had conferred Monday night and Tuesday with several advisers on this.

Among those with whom Johnson talked, Christian said, were: Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., who has been handling rail-labor legislation in the Senate; Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara; Secretary of Transportation Alan Boyd; and Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz.

The signing took place at 1 p.m. In the absence of the law, the six unions would have been free after midnight to strike 90 per cent of the railroads serving the nation.

The unions sent formal notice to their 137,000 workers of the strike postponement in compliance with the law.

There have been two previous strike bans: a 60-day one under the Railway Labor Act and a 20-day extension voted earlier by Congress.

The unions are demanding a two-year six per cent general wage increase, plus 12.5 cents an hour for skilled men the first year and a five per cent pay raise and 12.5 more cents for skilled workers the second year.

The railroads have offered a six per cent general increase, plus a five-cent per hour skill increase for an 18-month agreement.

Lansing youths hurl bottles and bricks

By MIKE BROGAN
State News Staff Writer

About 250 Negro youths went on a 90-minute spree of brick and bottle hurling Monday night following a talent show at West Junior High School in Lansing.

Lansing police said motorists reported damage to their autos totaling $8,000 from rocks, bottles and other objects hurled between 9 and 10:30 p.m.

Four motorists were injured when missiles thrown through windshields sprayed glass into the cars. One pedestrian told police he was assaulted by three youths about midnight. Two of the motorists and the pedestrian were admitted to Lansing hospitals for treatment.

Richard Letts, director of the Lansing Human Relations Committee, said the violence occurred after a fight broke out between two Negro boys outside the school. The talent show, sponsored by the city recreation department, had just concluded.

After the fight about 100 youths began moving west on Kalamazoo Street on their way home.

Someone apparently began throwing rocks and other objects at passing cars. As the crowd reached Logan Street the action was in full swing.

Letts said that when he approached groups of youths and talked with them they began to break up.

"When we got there and talked with the kids, they calmed down and started to disperse," he said. He said he didn't know if they regrouped after breaking up but said the whole incident "subsided within an hour or so."

Letts met with Lansing Mayor Max Murningham, councilman Joel E. Ferguson and police officials for two hours Tuesday morning to discuss the situation.

Letts said the meeting tried to arrive at proposals "to find out what happened."

Dodd cancels testimonial

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., said Tuesday he has requested a friend in New Haven to call off plans for a $100-a-plate testimonial dinner for him.

Earlier Arthur T. Barbieri, New Haven Democratic town chairman, had announced he was arranging the dinner with the funds raised to be earmarked for Dodd.

In a statement issued through an aide here, Dodd said, "I had no knowledge of plans for any dinner to be held in my behalf in Connecticut. And since I have learned of them, I have asked my friend, Art Barbieri, not to go ahead with them."

Barbieri had said the money to be raised would go to Dodd to do with as he pleased.

Faculty response: inaction line

By ANDREW MOLLISON
State News Executive Reporter

Yesterday's article was a tactical error. Students liked it. But seven faculty members (four of them department heads, interestingly) responded.

It may be that faculty members view MSU as their professional concern, a matter of interest to students, but one in which the students, like the client who goes to a lawyer, should shut up and follow advice.

It may be that faculty members, like the American people during one of the country's maniacal reform waves, still prefer to talk only of problems that they know can be solved or blamed on somebody.

It may be that each faculty member thinks I'm talking not to him or her, but to the instructor down the hall.

It may be that they are paralyzed by the widespread misconception that only small adjustments can be made in a substantially unchanging educational monolith here.

It may be that something was wrong with their education, too. They may now believe that they have no educational responsibilities outside of the demands of their discipline.

If so, of course, they won't answer today either.

But I'd like to take a chance that they didn't answer because of some failure of craftsmanship on my part.

It may have been that the questions, although they certainly represented common student worries, were the wrong questions. Or that everybody was busy yesterday.

Those faculty members who read this far might be willing to give me another chance. So I'll give them one in return. They can call me between noon and 2 p.m. at 355-8252 with comments, suggestions or answers. Or they can call at another time and leave a message for me to call back. Or they can drop me a line. I will ask only two questions:

Would you send your son or daughter to MSU?

Why?

Armed protestors disrupt assembly in California

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) -- A band of young Negroes armed with loaded rifles, pistols and shotguns entered the Capitol Tuesday and barged into the Assembly chamber during a debate. Police seized some of their weapons in a mild struggle.

The guns were unloaded and returned to the group, which later marched out of the building only to be arrested by city police at a gasoline station four blocks away.

Twenty-six men aged 17 to 25 were booked on suspicion of a variety of charges.

Members of the group said they represented the "Black Panther Party" of the Oakland area. They protested a bill which would restrict the carrying of weapons within city limits.

Britain readies fresh try for share in Common Mart

LONDON (AP) -- Prime Minister Harold Wilson announced Tuesday the long-awaited British bid to join Europe's Common Market to make it an economic community of 300 million people and capable of challenging the political and economic strength of the United States and the Soviet Union.

"This is an historic occasion which could well determine the future of Britain, of Europe and indeed of the world for decades to come," Wilson told the House of Commons.

Four years after President Charles de Gaulle of France vetoed Britain's first try to join the Common Market, Wilson set his country again on a risky course that, if it fails, could set back European unity for decades and humiliate the British.

The formal British application for full membership in the 10-year-old European Economic Community (EEC) -- as the Common Market is formally called -- will be submitted next week after the Labor government wins what is considered certain endorsement from Parliament.

Denmark, Norway and Ireland are expected to follow up with their own applications. Austria and possibly Sweden will press for associate membership.

Britain will also apply to enter the European Coal and Steel Community and the European Atomic Energy Agency, both run by EEC members. Talks could start when

Orientation: looking both ways

The troubles with MSU's freshman orientation program stem primarily from an underlying conflict that occurs whenever any activity tries to assume two different roles at once.

The orientation clinic must function as the formal introduction for new students into the University; it has become, in addition, the last in a series of glorified sales pitches for MSU. With only minor hassles, however, the two separate programs have co-existed as one for years.

Now the minor conflicts are coming to light, and the program's major difficulties are showing through. From several different directions, calls have come for wholesale revisions in the orientation procedure.

A cautioning note has been sounded by several of the Spartan Aides who actually work in the summer clinics. They deny that they are mere assembly line cogs in the orientation machine, and in fact point to the great influence they have in shaping the program.

While the protesting Spartan Aides are undoubtedly sincere in their estimation of the program's value and their part in it, it must be recalled that these Aides are all appointed arbitrarily by one administrator. And the revisions which the Aides have initiated have all been within the existing framework and philosophy of the program.

Two major revisions in structure and philosophy should be made in the program.

First, a student-faculty committee should be created to oversee the entire freshman orientation operation. To bring the program in line with its real purpose, the emphasis should be switched from the social to the academic.

The student-faculty committee would serve to protect the interests of those most concerned and most knowledgeable about life at MSU. It would derive its membership from the Academic Senate and ASMSU.

Most importantly, the committee should have powers of review and ultimate approval of orientation policies and procedures. An advisory body, formed last year by ASMSU to help adjust orientation, was called upon only once. In instituting any new committees, status as an advisory body should not be settled for again.

Second, a change in the program's philosophy would help eliminate some of the duality in orientation. In introducing students to MSU, the University must be represented primarily as an academic institution, and not as the social and residential community it has incidentally become. Because of emphasis on social regulations and rules, academics have become only of secondary importance.

But while adjusting is important, it seems the emphasis of orientation to a university is misplaced if it does not concentrate on academics and scholarship. Such a misplaced emphasis contributes to the anti-intellectual environment of which we hear charges. It is an emphasis conveyed in house meetings, general discussions and the activities night.

As part of its overall investigations, the Committee on Undergraduate Education is evaluating orientation procedures. Undoubtedly they will find cause to comment on the lack of academic emphasis in the University's introduction to itself.

Changes in structure and philosophy of the orientation program should be made. These two suggested alterations would provide at least a framework for further improvements.

Stopped-up Urinal

There is a publication which is widely distributed and carefully read in the Greek system which is aptly called the Urinal. It is published, if that's the right word, by the Students for the Advancement of Extracurricular Activities, commonly referred to as SAECA.

The whole bit is sponsored by the Coral Gables Restaurant, and it comes out weekly.

The publication reminds me of a small town paper minus all "savoir faire," especially since it began its policy of editorializing on issues.

Oh yes, it runs editorials, all of which are slightly to the right of Louis XIV in political philosophy. Therefore, its long standing concern with Greek gossip is shared with its attention to the problems of society.

Originally, SAECA was formed as a representative campus group to advise the Gables management on what's the best way to please its customers, or should I say, consumers. Today SAECA is little more than a Greek clique which occupies itself with local humor.

But that's okay, because the whole idea, organization, and newsletter are taken with a grain of salt, and sometimes a good laugh. It's in their editorials where one is given the impression that this is 1953 and we are attending MSC.

The issue positions have the degree of enlightenment you'd expect from a Bolivian peasant. It's so much fun to read about Suzie and Frank and all that, but when they burden their readers with opinions lifted from the 19th century, it's too much to bear.

Someone once said to me that the Urinal is a "canker on the already poc-marked face of society." Gosh, I can't go that far. It's hardly worth the trouble.

That is their main problem. The weakly could be thought of as the appendix of MSU. Most people retain that organ, while realizing that it is of no use and belongs to an age that is gone.

Stop the muddling on dorm magazines

"I'd walk a mile for a Camel."

So says the commercial, but no MSU resident would be forced to go to such efforts to get a Camel. A Saturday Review, yes; a Camel, no.

While every dorm has at least one cigarette machine, none of them sells magazines.

Most students like to read magazines. They provide a quick and easy way to get behind the headlines, to find out more about what is going on than the daily newspaper can provide. They give the specialist or the person with a hobby a place to read material aimed directly at him.

In the past the dorm governments have provided a valuable service by making magazines and newspapers available on a check-out basis.

While these services are appreciated, it is time to go beyond them. It is time to sell magazines in the dorm grills.

There are several good reasons for doing this.

For one thing, students often like to keep the magazines lying around the room to read in their spare moments, on study breaks, etc.

Selling magazines in the grill would also increase the reading of magazines by encouraging "impulse buying."

It is generally agreed that reading magazines is part of any student's educational experience. Increasing easy exposure to magazines would be a contribution of the residence halls to the total educational environment.

porter Andy Mollison reports that there appears to be no objection in administration circles to selling magazines in the dorms. But before the practice starts there will have to be some push from the students.

So far, ASMSU, MHA and WIC have all dragged their feet in taking any action on this simple, but important, matter.

It would seem obvious that the arguments in favor of dorm magazines are so great, that immediate action should be forthcoming. There is no reasonable cause for delay.

OUR READERS' MINDS

Spartan Aides: 'We didn't have to conform'

To the Editor:

This is in response to the "We had to conform" article on the Summer Orientation Program, in the Friday, April 28th edition of the State News.

Because I have always assumed that reputable newspapers print only facts, rather than opinions, in news articles, I was very disappointed by this article. It was, on the whole, one of the largest collections of improper implications, faulty generalizations, and outright lies I have ever seen.

Assuming Mr. Frederick Lawrence actually said the things he was quoted as saying, several points need to be made. First, Dr. Sabine is not the ogre that such quotes as "he gave me an hour and a half to get out of Wonders" and "Sabine did not indicate what these problems were and did not give reasons why (Lawrence) was being fired" would make him out to be. As far as I can determine (and I took the trouble to check with some people on last summer's staff, something the State News seems to have failed to do), Mr. Lawrence had some very specific reasons for being fired, which he most certainly should have known. Furthermore, Dr. Sabine went to the trouble to find Lawrence another job for the summer, so that he actually was financially better off for being fired. If this is the behaviour of an ogre, I wish I knew more of them.

Second, and more important, Lawrence implies that members of the Summer

Orientation Staff were forced to be smiling automatons. To quote the article: "there were certain things the Aides could not discuss with Incoming freshmen"; and, "Spartan Aides were forbidden to discuss or mention 'anything detrimental to the unified image we were trying to present.'" In my experience as a program specialist for the program two summers ago, and what I have heard from last summer's staff members backs me up completely, the only thing we were asked not to say were the one-liners such as the one about Sparty

To the Editor:

I feel somewhat personally involved in two recent developments of student-administration relationships. The first of these was the statement by Dr. Sabine, re the freshman orientation program, to the effect that bearded student aides would not present a favorable image of MSU to parents and freshmen.

Yes, I wear a beard. And I wear it more as an item of apparel than as a protest against anything. Need I apologize to this institution, which I respect and admire, for any bad PR I may have effected?

I am also disturbed by the new policy which prohibits students from seeing their RA evaluations. I managed to see these records before the new ruling, and I was quite surprised at some of the statements contained in the three different RA forms. (Am I "religious" if I never attend dropping his helmet. And this was not so much for the moral content as for the comment's applicability to an orientation program.

Any student of Public Relations will tell you that automatons programmed only to give high praise to what is obviously a very relative institution are not going to be any more effective than chronic complainers. The simple reason for this is that it is not natural, and people sense this. Consequently it is not surprising church?) In all fairness, I must add that Mr. Baccus (who handles personal interviews involving student records) cordially explained that these records are used only with careful reservations. I believe I am faithful to Mr. Baccus' meaning, if not his wording, in stating that an RA should not write anything on such a form which he would be unwilling to say personally to the individual involved. Evaluations are NOT letters of recommendation.

Beards not bad PR

Stephen B. Brown

that Dr. Sabine told us just to "be ourselves, that's why we were hired," and he told it again to last year's staff, and he told it once more to this summer's staff. The students who have worked on the Summer Orientation Program staff have never "had a definite posture we had to assume when working with new students and their parents." Any statement to the contrary is a lie and a slur on the character of all who have worked on the program.

In conclusion, I would like to suggest that the State News, in the interests of honest journalism, check facts before printing any article of a controversial nature. I am sure that if they had in this case, the mistakes could have been corrected before the article was printed.

Fuzzy-faced apology

To the Editor:

and to Jim Graham. Jim, I offer my most humble apologies. When I read your article about the summer orientation at State, I thought you were putting us on.

You could not have had greater support if you asked for it, in the form of the recent firing of the fuzzy-faced Aides and their boss. As a fuzzy-face myself, I resent the tone and implications made by Mr. Sabine, that it was not the type of impression that should be given to freshmen or to their parents.

I suppose next somebody will say that mini-skirts aren't going to be allowed... or dating... or speakers like Rockwell and Leary... or thumb sucking.

Yes, Jim, you said that the program needed reorganization; I do believe that there is going to be some shortly.

PROPAGANDA INTENSIFIED

Cuba builds strong radio

MIAMI, Fla. (P) - Cuba is putting together one of the world's most powerful radio systems, and intensifying her international propaganda broadcasts. Many weaker stations in the United States and Latin America are reported feeling interference.

A 50,000-watt station has taken to the air in eastern Cuba, not far from a 150,000-watt facility opened in February. The two transmitters are the first of six imported from Czechoslovakia. There has been no report on what is being done with the other four.

The 150,000-watt station, three times as powerful as any in the United States, reaches the entire Caribbean area.

A powerful shortwave station, Radio Havana-Cuba, transmitting to all of Latin America, is saturating air waves with calls to revolution. It is reported using a 100,000-watt transmitter.

A U.S. government source said the Federal Communications Commission has asked the State Department to determine whether the new Cuban stations are violating an international frequency agreement to which Cuba is a signatory. The 150,000-watt station operates on 600 kilocycles, the same as numerous small American stations. It is near Holguin in Oriente Province. The other is 15 miles away, at Cocum.

Observers of the Cuban scene link intensification of Communist propaganda with the "Solidarity Conference of the Latin American Peoples," opening in Havana July 28. Cuban broadcasts have said the conference theme will be revolution.

It was the first threat directly against British dependents in three years of terrorist activities.

British begin evacuation of dependents in Aden

ADEN (P) - British wives and children began a mass exodus from Aden Tuesday, the start of civilian and military withdrawals leading up to independence next year for this South Arabian base, once a key link in Britain's sea routes to Asia and the Pacific.

As the first dependents left, British authorities conferred on ways to meet an Arab terrorist threat of vengeance against British women, children and old men in reprisal for a school bus explosion Sunday in which at least eight Arab children and their driver were killed.

Evacuation of about 8,000 dependents is to be completed by the end of July. The only remaining European women in Aden's British military compounds will be about 200 girls in the women's services.

The first group of 270 dependents left by passenger liner and military charter planes after their baggage was collected by trucks under armed escort and searched for possible terrorist bombs.

A leaflet distributed by the People's Organization of Revolutionary Forces, an Egyptian-supported group, had threatened retaliation for the bus explosion, which it said was caused by a British-planted anti-tank mine. British authorities have said the mine was planted by terrorists in an effort to destroy a British armored vehicle.

It was the first threat directly against British dependents in three years of terrorist activities.

Blood drive gains with 439 pints donated

The blood drive showed a marked gain Tuesday with 284 pints donated.

Larry Newberry, Reading, Pa., senior and general chairman of the blood drive, said Tuesday's contributions brought the total to 439 pints. The goal of the week-long drive is 2,300 pints.

Continuation of full coverage will be more feasible if the goal is reached, said Newberry. With full coverage, any student who has donated blood is entitled to receive free all the blood he may need while still on campus.

Thirty-five pints of rare AB-positive blood are needed today for two openheart operations to be performed Thursday. Blood for such operations must be collected less than 24 hours before surgery.

Donations for these operations and all other blood types can be made from 2 to 8 p.m. today.

Leading the living units in blood donations is Triangle fraternity, 13 pints. Chi Omega leads the sororities with 3 and Howland House leads the co-ops with 5. Leading the men's halls is the House of Empyrean of Emmons, 8; and leading the women's halls, is floor 4-A of Rather, 6. Winners of each category will receive a trophy.

Senate rider repeals campaign fund plan

WASHINGTON (P) - The Senate wound up a bitter six-week floor fight Tuesday by voting against a plan to help finance presidential election campaigns with $1 income tax contributions.

The effect of the 52-46 vote was to keep tied to a tax bill a rider that would repeal the campaign financing plan of Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., President Johnson had previously endorsed the fund plan.

It was a sharp defeat for Long and for the administration, but Long had indicated before the vote that if he lost he might carry on the fight.

However, advocates of repeal declared they are confident Tuesday's vote, the fifth taken on the rider, was the decisive test.

After the vote, Long took the floor to declare Johnson might well veto the tax bill with the rider attached to it.

The Long proposal would make available to each party up to $30 million in government funds for next year's presidential campaign. Each taxpayer could earmark $1 for the fund on his tax return. It was enacted last year but wasn't scheduled to go into effect until July 1.

Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., sponsored the tax rider repeal which would restore the seven per cent investment credit on machinery and equipment and also accelerated depreciation rates on income-producing buildings.

Gore and his supporters contend the Long plan would give national political leaders too much power, but Long argued that a federal subsidy is necessary because of the tremendous increase in the cost of national campaigning.

Strong sentiment reportedly was building up in the Senate to settle the campaign fund fight and get action on the business incentives tax bill to which it was attached.

The tax bill passed the House March 16, a week after Johnson submitted it. It has been tied up in the Senate since March 23 by the hassle over the campaign financing plan and other riders.

Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana contended the tax bill is most important to business because of special incentives it would restore.

Collegiate boxing revival at MSU

By LARRY WERNER
State News Sports Editor

"To look sharp... to be sharp..." Remember those lyrics, sung to the tune of the "Bleep" Safety Razor song? Remember hearing them sung before the Friday Night Fights? Do you remember anything about boxing other than the fact that Cassius Clay is Muhammed Ali and doesn't want Uncle Sam?

It's no secret that boxing has been gradually fading out of the American sports scene.

Professional boxing is fading. But on the college level, the sport has faded, and intercollegiate competition is nearly non-existent.

The main art of self defense was terminated at Michigan State in 1959. And eight years later, an ex-serviceman, an amateur middleweight champion and the boxer most successful in wearing the gloves for MSU are hopeful for the return of Spartan boxing --- on the club level.

John Donley learned his boxing army-style. He is attending Michigan State after completing his military service. During winter term, he placed an ad in the State News, requesting sparring partners.

The response to the ad culminated in the formation of a boxing club. Donley is now the club's president.

A former member of the MSU boxing team, Jerry Kendall, heard that a club was being formed and offered his services as an instructor. Kendall is a senior who has returned to school after several years' absence.

Kendall was a member of the Spartan varsity in 1958, is a three-time Detroit Golden Gloves champion and amateur middleweight champ of Texas.

Charles P. (Chuck) Davey is the only four-time winner of the NCAA Boxing title. Davey graduated from Michigan State in 1949, then turned pro and beat such big names as Ike Williams and Rocky Graziano.

Kid Gavilan and his "bolo punch" scored a TKO over

Out of the past

Chuck Davey is shown in his boxing days as a Spartan fighter. Davey calls the formation of a boxing club at MSU, "a great idea."

Davey in a 1953 championship fight. Davey is currently the state boxing commissioner.

He referred to the formation of a boxing club as, "a great idea."

The hard work of Donley, the interest of Kendall and the endorsement one of the top names in boxing. These are the major components of a force trying to brush the cobwebs from MSU boxing.

"I was introduced to boxing in the army," Donley said. "I have an interest in it and found that several others here at MSU do also. The basic purpose of the club is for us to band together to facilitate our interests."

The club, under the direction of Kendall, trains and does light sparring in Jenison, only after thorough instruction in fundamentals and safety.

"I read that the club was being formed, and I wanted to make sure that this was going to be a good representation of boxing," Kendall said. "I found a sincere bunch of guys, and I offered my services to them."

Kendall, a 30-year-old enthusiast, is acquainted with boxing on several levels. His sentiments are exclusively amateur-oriented and he decries the pro variety as "commercially-misused" and dangerous because of the long period of time the contestant is involved in contact.

Amateur bouts are limited to three two-minute rounds. Professional fights go as many as 15 rounds.

"Lansing Golden Gloves has been operated by the Shriners for 20 years without a serious injury," Kendall said. "The proceeds of championship fights are given to the Shriners' Hospital in Chicago. This is the level we wish to compete on."

Davey is now general agent for the Southfield branch of New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. He attributes much of the success he has attained to boxing.

"The sport did much to help me," Davey said. "And I think my achievements brought some honor to the school. 'Boxing teaches men to be individuals, to stand on their own two feet.'"

Boxing frequently arouses thoughts of brutality in the minds of many opposed to the sport. According to Davey, boxing ranks 11th among contact sports in deaths and injuries.

About any opposition which the MSU Boxing Club may have to face, Davey said, "I'd hate to think that the school I am so proud of would consider itself above the sport."

JIMMY WALKER

No. 1 draft pick a Piston already

NEW YORK (UPI). -- The Detroit Pistons made their bid to get out of the National Basketball Association's Eastern Division cellar Tuesday when they signed major college scoring king Jimmy Walker of Providence to a four-year contract.

The signing, for an estimated $300,000, gave the Pistons a one day jump over the rest of the NBA, as the annual college player draft gets underway today.

Walker, who averaged 30.4 points per game to win the scoring crown against UCLA's Lew Alcindor, said he was "very pleased with the signing, and now I will be playing with the team I want to."

Detroit won the right to negotiate with Walker, their certain no. 1 draft pick, when they won a coin toss with the Baltimore Bullets. Both the Bullets and the Pistons finished last in their respective divisions.

As a result, Baltimore will pick following Detroit's "formal" selection of Walker. The teams will then pick in order of worst to best, with Chicago, Los Angeles and New York following the Bullets. However Detroit will choose instead of L.A., on the first round as a result of the Rudy Larusso deal.

The NBA's two new teams, Seattle and San Diego opened the draft Monday when they selected players from the existing teams.

Walker, who negotiated with the Pistons through his business agent Frank Scott, said he "knew very little of the details connected with the contract, but that everything was worked out."

Walker said it was Father Joseph Taylor (Assistant Athletic Director at Providence) and Detroit's Rookie of the Year Dave Bing, that helped him the most in deciding on signing with the Pistons.

"During my college years, I have been very close to Father Taylor, and he advised me on many things. But I have known Dave (Bing) and will be very happy to play with him," Walker said.

Walker said he was "pleased" to be rated on the same level as Cincinnati Royal star Oscar Robertson, but "he's an established star and I'm just coming out of college -- in a way, it's a bad comparison."

Spartan's 6 'kid' pitchers come through for Litwhiler

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

Coming into this season, pitching was a question mark for the MSU baseball team. MSU had Dick Kenney, 5-1 in 1966 and a 2.31 earned run average, to build from and Bob Peterson, 1-1 in '66 and a 5.16 ERA in only 15 innings of work, plus a bunch of untried sophomores and a promising junior college transfer.

Now Coach Danny Litwhiler has five men fighting for the four starting assignments, and can still save one of his best pitchers for relief.

The reason is that Litwhiler's "kid pitchers," as he termed them, have come through much the way he predicted they would.

Sophomores Zana Easton and Mel Behney pitched shutouts against Northwestern and Wisconsin.

Smith has shown flashes of his potential but has been inconsistent, and Peterson, bothered with a sore arm for most of the season, has shown possibilities of making a comeback in his last two appearances.

That leaves sophomore Mickey Knight, who's been a strong thrower for the Spartans all year, in the bullpen -- just where Litwhiler wants him.

Knight has the lowest ERA of the six pitchers, 0.92 after 29 2/3 innings of work, and gave up just one hit in 6 2/3 innings against Northwestern Saturday. He's 2-1 overall, with the two wins coming in the Big Ten -- half of MSU's conference victories.

"Mickey's been doing a real fine job for us," Litwhiler said, "but I'd like to keep him for relief work as much as I can. We need a good reliever and Mickey's been it."

"I may start him sometimes, if we get complete games from a couple of the other pitchers and I can use them for relief."

Kenney has had trouble winning this year, although pitching well most of the time. The Hawaiian has a 3-6 mark and a 3.18 ERA, and has been MSU's most-worked player, with 53 2/3 innings on the mound.

Three of Kenney's losses have come in the league, all by one run.

Behney, the only left-hander on MSU's "big six," turned in a two-hitter against Wisconsin to salvage a split for MSU last Friday, but was tagged with his second loss against three victories in the Notre Dame game Tuesday when he gave up two hits in the eighth inning which led to the winning run.

Behney has a 2.78 ERA in 48 2/3 innings. He gained a starting position after shutting out Ball State April 8.

Easton has MSU's best won-lost record, 3-0, with only Saturday's victory over Northwestern coming in the conference. A shut-out over Eastern Michigan gained Easton a starting assignment.

Smith came back from the spring training trip as MSU's best pitcher with a 2-1 won-lost record. Since then he is 1-3, the victory coming against Albion in which he was relieved by Knight.

The transfer student from Alpena Junior College took a loss against Eastern Michigan to start the regular season and lost the Indiana game Easton started. He pitched well against Detroit April 25, and gave up just one were shut out in the game. Smith was bombed for four runs in the first inning against Northwestern but was saved from defeat when Knight shut the Wildcats out the rest of the way and his teammates came back to score eight runs.

Peterson came home from Florida 2-2 and anxious to pitch in the regular season. Too anxious.

Pitching in the regular-season opener against Ball State, Peterson not only lost the game, but aggravated an arm that was sore before he pitched. Litwhiler didn't know the arm was sore.

After sitting out for nearly three weeks, Peterson saw action in relief against Detroit and retired every man he faced.

The East Lansing senior pitched six innings against Notre Dame, striking out eight men in the process before being relieved by Behney.

"Peterson looked good against Notre Dame, and there's a good chance I'll start him, depending on how well he does in practice."

If Peterson starts one of the others will be left over to join Knight in the bullpen or become a fifth starter.

NCAA to decide on grid playoff

CHICAGO (UPI). -- Major officials of the National Collegiate Athletic Association open a three-day meeting Thursday with such subjects as a possible playoff for a national football championship and penalties for rules violations on the agenda.

The matter of a football playoff will be decided by the executive committee. There was speculation that a feasibility study could be authorized to determine how and when such games would be held.

The executive committee, opening the meeting Thursday, will also hear reports from rules committees on plans for a 1968 college division baseball tournament, and discuss the NCAA position on Pan American and world basketball games.

Big business pours money into amateurs

NEW YORK (UPI) -- Big business is plunging into amateur sports with the kind of help amateurs need the most.

Money is flowing in from widely scattered sources to create vast new programs for young people so the amateurs can keep in step with the recent explosion in professional sports.

American Airlines touched off a drive for an annual Summer and Winter Olympic-style extravaganza to start at Los Angeles and Lake Placid, N.Y. in 1968.

American Machine and Foundry and Old London Foods, Inc., will help sponsor an annual kiddie Olympics to be rotated among 12 American cities.

The U.S. Lawn Tennis Association has signed with a licensing agency for the sale of officially "approved" items expected to produce a quarter million dollars annually for tennis development.

Bulova Watch is deeply involved in the World Para-Olympics for the handicapped.

A Rowing Foundation already is in existence to defray training and competitive expenses of American International Teams. Soft Drink Manufacturers are active on many fronts.

The village of Champ, Mo., pushing a sports complex including a race track, will bid for the 1971 Pan-American games and the 1976 Olympics.

Countless other industries and private businesses, other than those involved with television sports or the manufacture of sporting goods, kick in funds for clinics, tournaments and teams in many branches of athletics at all levels.

At least part of the current surge may be attributed to the long and bitter dispute between the National AAU and the National Collegiate Athletic Association, which has worried people in high places from the White House to the board rooms of industry. Both parties to the dispute have been bearing down as never before in an effort to outdo the other. Business has been willing to help somebody, anybody, to give the kids a break.

The tennis tie-in with business is outside the realm of the dispute and differs in that business will receive countable financial returns from the sales of approved items.

Other sponsors, presumably, will receive a certain amount of good-will for their money. The most ambitious scheme is the Summer-Winter "Little Olympics" to be financed by a permanent foundation built up by donations. The events will be known as the John F. Kennedy International Memorial Games and each $10 contributor will receive a Kennedy Medallion.

The airline started it off with a $75,000 check and agreed to sell the first 25,000 medallions.

Spartan golfers 'like' to play U-M

By HAROLD DEAN
State News Sports Writer

On the heels of a first-place tie with Wisconsin on Monday, the MSU golfers take on Michigan today at Ann Arbor.

Coach Bruce Fossum admitted that the Michigan squad will have a slight edge but he noted that his players "would rather play Michigan than anybody."

In the only 1966 dual meet between the two teams, the Wolverines defeated the Spartans by three strokes, 620-623. MSU also finished behind Michigan in the Northern Intercollegiate Invitational Tournament and in the Big Ten Championships.

Gone from the Wolves' squad is Bill Newton, twice All-American, Big Ten Champion in 1965 and third-place winner last year.

The backbone of the Michigan team is provided by a strong junior contingent led by John Richert and John Schroeder.

Richert finished in an eighth-place tie in the conference meet. Schroeder was a 1966 co-champion in Northern Intercollegiate.

MSU returns to Ann Arbor Friday and Saturday for the Northern Invitational in which Michigan beat the Spartans last year, 617-623.

The Big Ten Championships will also be held at Ann Arbor, May 19-20.

In the tournament at Madison, the Spartans were led by co-medalists Sandy McAndrew and John Bailey in what coach Fossum called a "dead heat."

Both finished with totals of 153 for the Spartans, who were 12 strokes down after the first 18 holes.

Fossum was especially pleased with the performance of George Butty, who, he said, "is coming on and playing real well."

Northwestern, the other team in the tournament, finished 29 strokes behind the two victors.

Rich hits the gridiron and brother waits...

By NORM SAARI
State News Sports Writer

The left defensive end gave the offensive end a quick forearm, moved from his outside "contain" position into pursuit of the quarterback, who had faded back to pass. The end tackled him high, making sure the pass never was released.

On the sidelines at the Saturday scrimmage in Spartan Stadium, a student sat on the equipment box, saying little, but watching the contact intently.

The player is Rich Saul, a top freshman prospect whose twin brother Ron is forced to remain on the sidelines. Under Big Ten rules, Ron's high school class standing was not high enough to qualify him for athletic eligibility in the conference.

"He was enrolled in MSU under the 1.7 projection figure rule," Coach Duffy Daugherty said. "By this, he must establish a 1.7 grade point for a full academic year and establish residence for a full calendar year before the Big Ten will allow him to play."

The calendar year includes only fall, winter and spring term. Since Ron averaged over a 2.5 during his freshman year, he will be eligible for fall practice next season.

"I just want to play now. It doesn't matter where or under what conditions," Ron said. "Being forced out for a year could hurt other guys, but it has made me want to play all the more."

"I just hope I get a chance," he said. Rich and Ron, who played their high school ball together in Butler, Pa., could have enrolled in other colleges that would have given Ron immediate eligibility.

In deciding to attend MSU, Rich was given an athletic tender immediately, but Ron must wait until next fall before he can receive the financial aid.

One school very interested in recruiting them was Penn State.

Their older brother, Bill, was an All-American in football at Penn and is now starting middle linebacker and defensive captain for the professional Pittsburgh Steelers.

"A lot of people back home told us we would be at a disadvantage if we left the state," Rich said. "Both Ron and I decided individually where we wanted to go to school. We hadn't planned on going out as a team. It just happened that Michigan State appealed to both of us."

The identical twins also played on the same high school team with Terry Hanratty, Notre Dame's starting quarterback.

Daugherty speaks highly of both Rick and Ron, but has not seen enough of them under playing conditions to properly evaluate them.

Rich has been starting on the Green team at the defensive end spot in all the Saturday scrimmages during spring practice. He was also co-captain of the freshman squad last fall.

Ron played offensively at guard and fullback in high school and defensively at linebacker. Daugherty felt he probably would practice him at either an offensive guard or tackle next fall.

But until next fall, and after the Big Ten reviews his case this summer, Ron is forced to the sidelines.

Wonders sells flowers for STEP

A South Wonders house council committee Monday sold flowers in the lunch line to collect funds for the Student Education Project (STEP).

$57.75 was collected from the sale of paper flowers. Each girl who bought a 25 cent flower was allowed to wear sport clothes to dinner.

Out of 600 flowers made 470 are left. Other campus councils have expressed interest in taking similar action to aid STEP.

Advised as the "STEP Into Spring" program, the committee was organized by Cathy Hagen, Traverse City sophomore, a STEP volunteer.

A total of $19,000 is needed to send STEP volunteers to Rust College in Holly Springs, Miss. The program has received $9,000, one-third in written and verbal pledges.

Until Wonders council initiated this program, fund raising responsibility rested on the 28 STEP volunteers alone.

South Wonders girls made and sold these paper flowers to benefit the STEP project. The flower sale resulted in a $57.75 profit for the STEP program. So far, the program has received $9,000 in pledges towards a $19,000 goal.

Fahrenheit 451 Campus Theater

Happiness and dehumanization are further enforced by the other drug and bottle-baby techniques which one expects from a Big Brother Utopia. Oskar Werner plays a government book-burner who becomes estranged from his robot-like wife (Julie Christie) when a girl (also Julie Christie) introduces him to the joys of "David Copperfield." To top it off, this tale takes place in the dangerously near future—far enough to have forgotten about rocking chairs, but near enough to still have grandfather clocks and fuzzy-lined television.

The plot retains enough of Bradbury's sense of the original and the bizarre to keep the audience intrigued throughout, yet the film stretches its basic premise, until it seems too incredible to be really serious—very much in the manner of "The Birds," where all Hitchcock's cunning and craftsmanship still could not make such a preposterous story seem logical.

Perhaps the trouble is that Truffaut is too innocent and too honest a director. His whimsical innocence, which worked so perfectly in "The 400 Blows" and "Jules and Jim," both of which are deeply personal films, seems like ignorance in a science fiction set-up, where viewers tend to be especially sensitive to the probability of the plot.

And Truffaut is such an honest director that he himself cannot take the story seriously. After spending most of his time building up the all-too-familiar plot of a young couple who resist onsetting dehumanization (as in "The Invasion of the Body Snatchers," "The Creation of the Humanoids," and countless others), Truffaut can no longer play it straight. Private jokes creep in. A boy mentions Bradbury's masterpiece, "The Martian Chronicles." The book-men burn a copy of "Cahiers du Cinema," the French film magazine which features Truffaut's articles and reviews. And finally, the film closes with a scene which parodies any serious point that the novel might have made.

But the strangest thing of all is that I loved every minute of the film. It's almost as dazzling as "Blow-Up," almost as fascinating as "The 400 Blows," almost as beautiful as "Cul-de-Sac," and it's almost as silly as "Winnie-the-Pooh." In spite of the deterioration near the end, "Fahrenheit 451" brims with excitement and originality of treatment. Truffaut could make "King Kong vs. Godzilla" exciting and original.

It is easily the worst of his five feature films, because Truffaut does not belong in the slick world of science fiction, which usually cannot withstand whimsical attitudes on screen, even though such authors as Bradbury and Clifford Simak write some very whimsical stories. But as John Russell Taylor wrote three years ago, Truffaut "belongs to that select group of artists whose failures are far more exciting than most other men's successes."

I apply this description to "Fahrenheit 451" and recommend the film without reservation. I had hoped that Truffaut, an extremely poetic filmmaker, could smoothly combine talents with Ray Bradbury, an equally poetic novelist. Their brainchild does justice to neither, but it's still worth seeing, if for no other reason than to see just how beautiful a burning book can be.

MISS ANDERSON

SHARI ANDERSON

Song recital revived

By FRED T. HIMMELEIN
State News Reviewer

We are told the song recital is dying, undermined by everything from recordings to plagues of locusts. This was belied by Shari Anderson's recital, a concert in the full bloom of health. Miss Anderson, an assistant music instructor here, presented Monday evening a program of unusual composition, texture and effects, extremely enjoyable, recalling the recital appearances of the great American soprano Rosa Ponselle.

Misses Anderson and Ponselle possess beautiful stage deportment, both bring to the concert a directly operatic way of looking at things. Miss Anderson paralleled one of Miss Ponselle's great operatics, "Pace, Pace, Mio Dio" from Verdi's "Force of Destiny."

Miss Anderson also gave a skillful performance of "The Blessed Virgin's Expostulation" by Henry Purcell. George Eliot once characterized Purcell's music as wild and spiritually tossing, and these qualities were dramatically captured by Miss Anderson in a rolling recitative.

Another beautiful interpretation was given to the "Willow Song" and "Ave Maria" from Verdi's "Otello." Here Miss Anderson projected herself in ethereal tones to the super-subtle Desdemona that lags lusted after. Also noteworthy was a series of five Russian songs expertly sung and artfully accompanied by Charles Greenwell at the piano.

In sum, Shari Anderson's recital was a listener's pleasure, well sung, excellently projected, and intelligently considered. Miss Anderson may not have single-handedly saved the song recital as an art form; neither did Rosa Ponselle. But both gave beauty and meaning to the form, and for this, if for no other reason, the two sopranos deserve favorable comparison and praise.

4 seniors win fellowships

An MSU history major has been chosen as one of the 24 college students that are honored annually by the national Marshall Scholar program.

Leslie Ann Medert, Toledo, Ohio, senior, received a $2,500 grant that will enable her to study for two years at the University of London.

Miss Medert, an African history major, had maintained a 3.8 GPA at MSU.

Three MSU seniors received Danforth Graduate Fellowships, a four-year award leading to a Ph.D. and a career in college teaching.

The winners are: Harvey Goldman, Detroit, comparative literature; Ellen Herscher, Midland, ancient history; and Donald MacKenzie, Houston, Texas, psychology.

Each university is allowed to enter five nominees in the competition. MSU's other two nominees, Laimdota Mazzarins, Macedonia, Ohio, classical studies, and Jennifer Winn, Dekalb, Ill., Soviet studies, received honorable mention designations from the Foundation.

Harvard and Yale were the only two schools to have more Danforth winners than MSU, with four each.

Brown University, the University of Chicago, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Princeton also had three winners each.

Careers '67 sets theme for fall program

"Tomorrow Today" will be the theme of MSU's 19th annual career program to be held in October, the promotional chairman of Careers '67, announced recently.

Scott Reid, Niles junior, said the purpose of the program is to disseminate vocational information to all students. Representatives from approximately 80 organizations will be available to answer questions regarding job opportunities and the qualifications necessary to fill positions in business, industry, education and government.

The MSU career program is the largest vocational information service of its kind on any campus, Reid said.

Careers '67 is sponsored by the Placement Bureau. The adviser is Thomas W. Early, assistant director of the Placement Bureau.

BUDDHIST-HINDU CONFLICT

Elections add tension

COLOMBO, Ceylon (P) — The 1967 general elections in neighboring India have added fresh fuel to the long-simmering fire of linguistic-religious conflict between Ceylon's mostly Buddhist Sinhalese and the Tamil-speaking Hindus of South Indian extraction.

At present the communal hatreds are confined to political speeches, editorials and sporadic neighborhood clashes. But these same tensions boiled into rioting that killed hundreds in 1958.

Extremist Sinhalese groups and some leftist politicians are capitalizing on the victory in India's Madras State of the Tamil-speaking Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam (DMK) party over India's ruling Congress party.

The DMK has been outspoken in the past in its attitude toward the Tamil language, toward the welfare of Ceylon's Tamils and in championing the secession of Madras from India.

Its leaders who now run the state government say secessionist ambitions have been forgotten. But the first thing they did on taking over was to start doubling out all English signs at government offices, on state-run buses and on city streets. Tamil signs replaced them.

Some Sinhalese leaders here see the Tamil upsurge in India as a danger sign.

Sirimavo Bandaranatke recalled at a political rally a pact she initiated with the Indian government when she was prime minister. If this had been implemented, she said, all Indian Tamils would be gone from Ceylon in 15 years.

Sinhalese comprise 70 per cent of Ceylon's 10 million population and Tamils 22 per cent. Half the Tamils are descendants of 11th century Indian invaders and enjoy full citizenship.

Phi Kappa Phi told survival depends on ingenuity

By DAYLE SCHWARZLER

State News Staff Writer

An MSU professor of geology said last week that the next 20 years are probably going to be the most critical in all human history.

Maynard M. Miller told over 300 MSU student and faculty Phi Kappa Phi initiates that survival in a world worth living in depends on ingenuity, creativity and a genuine concern for others.

"But what good is survival if what survives isn't worth surviving?" he asked.

"Because geologically the world is doomed and because evolution is irreversible, man has only one chance to work out his destiny, which is the realization of his highest potential," Miller said.

"The all-important qualities are best fostered by freedom," he continued. "I am optimistic. I believe in the higher destiny of man. This is where my optimism lies—in a free and open society."

To have a free society, men must be willing to think, to re-examine the very basis of their society, Miller said. Democracy is an example.

"These ideas must be re-examined and revitalized, or they will almost certainly degenerate into slogans," he said. "And slogans can be repeated almost indefinitely without any strain on the mind."

The role of education lies in providing a perspective by which long-range trends can be seen. Therefore, education should not always conform to the needs of any one time or any one place, he said.

He pointed out that no one knows whether man's evolution so far has been progress, because the time has been too short. Life itself has existed for only about four million years—a very short period, geologically speaking.

Miller has been leading expeditions to the arctic and sub-arctic regions since 1946. In 1963 he was chief geologist on the American Mount Everest expedition. As a result of the expedition, he and his colleagues were awarded the National Geographic Society's coveted Hubbard Medal.

Strategic hill taken over by Marines

SAIGON (P) — U.S. Marines claimed possession of the south ridge of Hill 881 Tuesday night and battled on to drive North Vietnamese regulars from other high ground overlooking enemy infiltration routes from Laos. Heavy action in the hills below the border demilitarized zone, in the central highlands and in the Mekong River delta coincided with an announcement of the war's biggest blow by U.S. fighter-bombers against North Vietnam's MIG fleet—destruction of 11 of the Soviet-built fighters.

Bill would let city police ticket cars on campus

A bill passed by the state Senate last week would give police in cities where universities are located greater authority in bringing campus traffic violators to court. The bill is now pending in the House.

Senators Gilbert Bursley of Ann Arbor and John Toepp of Cadillac, co-authors of the bill, said visitors to Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant and Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti are ignoring campus traffic regulations.

MSU's Dept. of Public Safety said Monday that the new bill, if passed, would probably not affect traffic and parking violators here. Lt. David E. Stormer said the MSU Board of Trustees has the power to pass University traffic regulations similar to ordinances of municipalities. Presently University police are not hampered by having to track down persons who have violated campus regulations.

MSU police can issue warrants to persons not connected with the University because an or-

Africa Night set Saturday

African students at MSU are sponsoring an "Africa Night" from 6:30 to 11 p.m. Saturday in the Crossroads Cafeteria of the International Center.

"Africa Night" will feature a banquet of African food prepared by African women on campus. A stage show, informal dancing, and exhibits of African art will follow the banquet.

Tickets are $2 per person or $3.50 for couples. Tickets may be purchased at the Union and the U.N. Room from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. They are also being sold at 1412D Spartan Village and at the African Studies Center in the International Center.

dinance violation is involved, Stormer said.

Other universities in the state govern both university and non-university drivers only by school regulations, which don't carry the weight of an ordinance.

If an MSU student receives a parking ticket, it is a violation of a regulation, Stormer said. If a non-university driver receives a ticket he is in violation of an ordinance.

Vernall Davis, chief of police security at Central Michigan University, said Monday that CMU's present policy is to void tickets for known off-campus violators.

He said the only violation for on-campus parking is failure of students to have their cars registered. The policy is lenient toward non-university drivers parking and driving on campus, he said.

MANAGER OVERPAID?

City budget debated

By LINDA GORTMAKER
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing citizens questioned the quality of the city's proposed budget in a heated two-hour public hearing at Monday night's City Council meeting.

Calling for an increase over last year of $270,981, the budget drew sharp criticism from four East Lansing property owners who addressed about 50 citizens attending the meeting.

Franklyn Kircher, 636 Hillcrest, presented an extensive list of facts and figures to prove that East Lansing has "the most overpaid city manager" and "the most underpaid city clerk."

Kircher estimated that the salary of City Manager John Patriarche averages $5,029 above the salary of city managers in 21 Michigan cities of equal or greater population.

Kircher also said that the proposition of MSU might affect the police and fire chiefs' salaries, but not the city manager's.

"Ann Arbor's city manager only receives $800 more than Patriarche, and Ann Arbor's non-student population is three times greater," he added.

Max R. Strother, councilman, noted that the turnover in city managers in many of the cities used as examples by Kircher, such as Birmingham and Flint, has been great during the past years. Patriarche has served East Lansing for over 20 years.

According to Kircher, Mary J. Slavik, city clerk, is the third lowest paid city clerk in the state.

Mary P. Sharp, councilman, called Kircher's salary evaluation "unethical and unfair" when Kircher asked why Charles Pegg, police chief, has not also had a salary increase since he has been employed 25 years.

Hicks called the 25 per cent increase in the pay of engineering and sanitary department employees "almost a fraud on the people of East Lansing."

Carl Goldschmidt, 1546 Cahill Drive, asked that the budget be placed on display in a more accessible place, such as the library, for citizens to read.

Willard White, 532 University Drive, accused the city council of having a defensive attitude and being unresponsive to any citizens' criticism at the public hearing.

Mayor Gordon L. Thomas denied White's accusations and said that the council would review suggestions for adoption of the budget by May 15.

Other council action included voting 3-2 to extend the time necessary to file a bond to permit Thomas W. Taylor, MSU student, to assume duties as East Lansing constable.

Elected to the post April 3, Thomas told councilmen that illness and hospital confinement kept him from filing bond within the required 10 days.

Taylor told the council in a letter that studies might interfere with job performance until the end of spring term. As a result, the council re-appointed East Lansing Police Officer Robert Foster to carry out the constable duties in his off-duty hours.

Time schedule books for summer school courses can now be picked up in Registrar's Office in the Administration Bldg. Monday-Friday between 8:00-12:00 and 1:00-5:00.

S. Korea ready for heavy vote

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A turnout of about 10 million voters — nearly 80 per cent of the electorate — is expected in South Korea's presidential election Wednesday. Advance indications are that it will be the nation's most peaceful postwar election.

Forecasters say President Chung Hee Park, 49, an army general turned politician, will be re-elected to a four-year term. They say he will win by a margin of 500,000 votes.

Park's main opposition is from Yun Posun, 69, a former president, and four splinter candidates who are not expected to come close.

Winding up a bitter one-month campaign, Park told a news conference Tuesday he needs to be re-elected to complete his economic programs for the country.

His major achievements have been political and economic stability — things South Koreans have not had since independence from Japan in 1945. On the international front, Park sent Korean troops to South Vietnam and helped set up a regional grouping known as the Asian and Pacific Council.

Yun's attack against the ruling Democratic Republican party has been based largely on alleged corruption in the government. Tuesday Yun renewed his charges that the government was planning to rig the election.

EEC leaders meet in Rome May 29.

Wilson took pains to present the British bid in a way that would make it hard for De Gaulle to resist this time. He spoke not of British conditions for membership but of major issues he said would have to be negotiated.

These included a transition arrangement to permit Britain to phase out its trade preferences for Commonwealth nations, terms to protect Britain's partners in the European Free Trade Association and safeguards against devaluation of the British pound.

There was no sign of an open welcome from France, although sources in Paris said de Gaulle may be somewhat more favorable to Britain than he was in 1963.

Bottles, bricks fly in fracas

He compared the incident with what happened in Ft. Lauderdale this spring when college students rioted.

"You can't very well call this a racial thing because it only involved the youth," he said. "It was not planned. It happened spontaneously with maybe 25 while the rest just went along to be in the action."

Most of the youths were between 14 and 16 years-of-age, he said.

Letts said some of the boys involved in the violence came into his office Tuesday morning.

"We talked about why this thing happened and many couldn't say why," he explained.

He said the boys indicated they went along with what was happening because "the rest of them were doing it."

Letts said perhaps the recreation programs like the talent show need to be examined to determine if more adult supervision is needed.

"What happened is an indication of unrest," he said. "But it has opened the community's eyes as to what has been done and what still needs to be done."

Letts said he didn't know if Monday's violence is an indication of real race riots like the ones occurring on Lansing's west side last summer.

"We do have a better chance of it not happening if we really examine what has happened," he said. "We certainly can't sit back and wait because these things happen so quickly."

Milk famine in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — A quickly developing milk famine gripped Chicago Tuesday with no relief in sight.

Milk refrigerators in virtually all stores were empty. School cafeterias substituted orange or other fruit juices. Worried mothers stocked up on formula or evaporated milk for their babies.

The shortage spread like wildfire Monday when the Chicago Milk Wagon Drivers Union struck a single dairy, and other dairies retaliated with a lockout.

The union sent 11 telegrams to government officials including President Johnson, Gov. Otto Kerner of Illinois and the federal Mediation and Conciliation Service in Washington charging the dairies with "bad faith" in calling the lockout.

Morgan F. Murphy, Jr., attorney for the Chicago area Dairymen's Assn. and the Associated Milk Dealers, Inc., accused the union of breaking off collective bargaining by walking out of the three-day-long negotiations Sunday evening.
