U.S. troops kill 195 VC, lose 15, in major battle

DONG TAM, Vietnam (P) - Troops of the U.S. 9th Infantry Division fought their biggest battle of the Vietnam war in sun-baked rice paddies near here Tuesday against one of the Viet Cong's legendary units.

American officers said the infantrymen killed 195 Viet Cong--189 of them in the heavy fighting and six more in policing up the area today. U.S. losses from the 2nd Brigade of the "Old Reliables," were reported as 15 men killed and 45 wounded.

"They didn't come to find us. We found them," said Col. William Fulton, 47, of Berkeley, Calif., the brigade commander. "It was a classic assault against fortified positions, something that is not done too much over here. It was an almost perfect combination of air, artillery, firepower and maneuver."

The enemy in this case was believed to be at least two companies of the Viet Cong's 514th Mobile Force Battalion. The scene of the fighting was a Mekong Delta area where the 514th has operated almost since the beginning of the war. It is the same area where the battle of Ap Bac was fought at the start of 1963 in what was 7th Army Division was badly battered.

Since 1961 there have been claims that the 514th had been wiped out, but it has consistently returned to fight again. The area, about 50 miles southwest of Saigon, is known as the Ap Bac Secret Zone. It is important as a Viet Cong stronghold, sheltering regional political and military cadres and providing a haven for Viet Cong moving into the Plain of Reeds west of Saigon. It has long been a home for the 514th.

Fulton and his officers weren't claiming that the Viet Cong unit was wiped out, but they were confident it had been hurt badly. Two American battalions plus artillery--about 1,400 men in all--moved out Tuesday on a search and destroy mission as part of Operation Palm Beach in Dinh Tuong Province. They ran into the enemy shortly after noon. One company was hit hard, taking most of the casualties suffered by the brigade.

The Viet Cong were in camouflaged bunkers along tree lines and canals bordering the rice fields. They fought with mortars, recoilless rifles, automatic weapons and small arms. "There was a tremendous fire fight going on through the afternoon," Fulton said. "And they stayed with it right through the darkness, instead of breaking off as they often do."

After night fell, one base position of the 9th Division in the operation area came under attack and a company from the 199th Light Infantry Brigade was flown in as reinforcement. The heavy contact ended shortly before midnight and this morning there was only sporadic sniper fire.

GEN. WHEELER CHARGES

McNamara slights Nike X; exaggerates Red ICBM ability

WASHINGTON (P) -- The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has directly challenged Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's basic reasons for opposing an antimissile defense for the nation.

Gen. Earle G. Wheeler told Congress the military leaders dispute McNamara's assumption that the Soviet Union could negate any antiballistic missile system by deploying more inter-continental ballistic missiles.

With McNamara sitting nearby, Wheeler also contradicted the Pentagon chief's position that an ABM defense would not reduce American casualties "in any meaningful sense" in time of nuclear attack. The four-star general said having the Nike X system might save 30 million to 50 million Americans in a nuclear exchange--"meaningful, we believe, in every sense of the word."

The Joint Chiefs' detailed case for building an antimissile defense--together with McNamara's opposing views--was presented last March in a closed hearing of the House Appropriations subcommittee.

Portions of the censored transcript of testimony were made public Wednesday night.

In an exhaustive question-and-answer session, the subcommittee quizzed McNamara and Wheeler closely on the need for--and the ramifications of--the Nike X system, a strategic defense which would cost billions.

Wheeler said Nike X deployment--which the administration is weighing--would deny the Soviets "an exploitable capability" of having an antimissile defense and continue what he called "the Cuba power environment."

This was a reference to the United States' ability to force the Soviet Union's removal of missiles from Cuba in 1962.

Without that same nuclear superiority now, Wheeler said, "we think it quite clear that we would have had even more hesitation" deploying troops to Vietnam.

Mollison's boat-rocking converts one professor

Not only did faculty members react vigorously to yesterday's article (where I asked them if they'd send their children to MSU), but one of them even changed his mind about something.

An amazed student called me to report that the day the results of the "no-cut rule" phone calls were printed, a Nat Sci prof spent half of a two-hour lab leading an open discussion of the whole system.

A whole hour spent on teaching technique, and the motivation behind them, is nothing to laugh at.

Also, it turned out that the prof took it seriously. He used to require attendance at both labs and lectures, but decided to take attendance only at labs. Even more important, as the student who called me pointed out:

"I had him pegged as a real conservative type, who wouldn't listen to what we said, or who would only want us to think as he did. It turns out he thinks we're human too."

Well now. Several faculty members called yesterday, and their answers tended to be about ten times as long as the average student's answer to my questions. So you'll have to wait until Friday, so I'll have time to write condensed versions of their answers.

Today's questions are for students. They were suggested by a faculty member. If people think before calling, the answer should tell you and me a little about what you think good teaching consists of.

The questions:

Who were your two best teachers at MSU?

How did they differ from other teachers?

Did they differ from each other?

'U' students to receive most aid for education

By STEVE GATES
State News Staff Writer

MSU students will receive more money under the Educational Opportunity Grants (EOG) program next year than students on any other college or university campus in the United States, according to an official announcement by the U.S. Office of Education.

Gordon A. Sabine, vice president for special projects, added that more students at MSU -- about 2,000 -- are receiving these grants totaling $1,082,000, than at any other university campus.

He explained, however, that the money is budgeted by individual campuses, rather than by entire universities.

These grants, when combined with other loan and scholarship programs, will again make the entering freshman "the most aided freshman class ever," reported Charles W. Curry.

Curry, the associate director of admissions and scholarships, said that about 1,000 entering freshmen would be receiving the awards, and another 1,000 students would have grants renewed for next year.

Most of the 1,000 renewals are for students who are freshmen this year.

According to the terms of the Higher Education Act of 1965, explained Curry, the grants must be awarded first to those who apply for renewal and then to entering freshmen. A few awards are made to other students, however.

The grants are based almost entirely on severity of need, as judged by the ability of the parents to support the student, he said.

Grants range, depending on need, from $200-$800. However, Curry noted, the grant cannot exceed one-half of the student's determined financial need. This limits a Michigan resident to $750.

Out-of-state students may receive the full amount, however.

The grant program, which began last year, stipulates that the University provide direct financial aid, for as much or more than the grant.

MSU had some problems with this particular requirement, since federal guarantee loan and work-study funds could not be used to provide the University's half, and there was a possibility that National Defense Education Act (NDEA) funds, which MSU can use, might be cut for next year.

However, Curry said, MSU managed to match the funds with MSU scholarships, NDEA loans, State scholarships, other loans, and part-time work on campus.

Curry said that the only criteria for renewal of the grants was that the student remain in school. Grant renewal forms will be sent to them the next few weeks, he said.

Committee meets today on selective coed hours

By ELLEN ZURKEY
State News Staff Writer

The Associated Women Students selective hours proposal is headed for a joint student-faculty conference committee today.

Tuesday the ASMSU Student Board unanimously voted to reject the AWS proposal which would eliminate curfews for junior and senior women, as a tactical move to include sophomores in the proposal by next fall.

Under the Academic Freedom Report, a board rejection must be followed by the formation of a joint committee of two faculty members and two students to discuss the issue. John A. Fuzak, vice president for student affairs, must establish the committee.

Had ASMSU accepted the proposal no joint committee would have been set up and the chances of sophomores getting selective hours next year would have been slight, said Greg Hopkins, chairman of ASMSU.

Clinton Cobb, professor of education, and Vera Borsage, professor of home economics, are representing the faculty.

Jim Carbine, past vice chairman of ASMSU, and Cindy Mattson, member-at-large, are representing the student board.

The joint committee must formulate its final proposal on women's hours by Friday afternoon, when the Faculty Committee for Student Affairs meets.

The proposal must be accepted by both the faculty committee and student board before it is sent to Fuzak for his approval.

It must reach President Hannah and the MSU Board of Trustees by Tuesday so the trustees can approve it and implementation can begin fall term. The trustees meet May 17 and 18.

"This will get the entire proposal through much faster than if we had accepted the AWS proposal and then added recommendations," Hopkins said.

Hopkins pointed out that had the board passed the proposal with recommendations, John A. Fuzak, vice president for student affairs, would have to act on two separate documents instead of one.

End RA reports, ASMSU demands

The ASMSU Student Board has passed a resolution demanding that RA reports be discontinued and publicly destroyed.

The demand that evaluations by RA's be abolished will be directed to John A. Fuzak, vice president for student affairs, according to Greg Hopkins, ASMSU chairman.

When asked what effect the term "demand" would have, Hopkins said, "I don't know. This is the first time we've demanded anything; we've always requested or suggested. This time we'll get to see just how much power the student board has."

W.C. Blanton, senior member-at-large, introduced the proposal to eliminate RA evaluations of individual student conduct and emotional and social development.

An amendment that present reports be open to the students to which they apply was made by Jim Friel, OCC president. The amendment was accepted by a ten to one vote with Brad Lang, sophomore member-at-large opposing it as meaningless. The resolution was passed by consent.

Student affairs office gathers police records

By LAUREL PRATT
State News Staff Writer

University police records including "everything that involves a student" are sent to the office of the vice president for student affairs, Richard O. Bernitt, director of the Dept. of Public Safety, said Wednesday.

"If it involves University property," he added, "it goes to the secretary also. If it's serious, it goes to the president."

Typically the records are not put into student files, according to John A. Fuzak, vice president for student affairs. Police information is not included on the student's permanent record card, and there is no place for it.

No record is sent to residence halls or other University offices, Bernitt said. The record includes the complete investigation on report made by University police in a student case.

This is among the records classed as confidential which students may not see when they ask to see their files in the records office.

The Academic Freedom Report states that students have the right to inspect reports and evaluations of his conduct, except letters of recommendation and similar evaluations necessarily prepared in confidence.

The University has no authority to show a student his police record, Fuzak said.

He said police records are usually retained for a short time in case they must be referred to and then are disposed of.

The records would only be filed if his office became involved in the case, he said.

Three types of situations, he said might make this necessary:

--The complainant in some cases, even those as serious as forgery, may state that if the University will treat the case as a disciplinary matter, he will drop charges.

--The prosecuting attorney may ask the University to treat the case as a disciplinary affair.

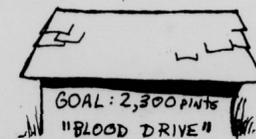

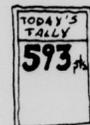

--In extremely rare cases (Fuzak said he has handled only three in six years) the vice president's office, knowing of special circumstances or problems, may request that it take action rather than the civil authorities.

In no case does the police record go (please turn to the back page)

Abortion: individual's choice

There is no way of knowing how many abortions are performed in the United States each year. Hospital reports show a figure of 8,000 to 10,000. Most reasonable estimates place the number of terminated pregnancies somewhere between a million and 1.5 million.

Because of vague and outdated statutes, women desiring abortion in this country have been forced to resort to extra-legal, and usually unsafe, means. Medical techniques and moral values have changed since 1800, but abortion has remained the same dirty backroom practice it was then.

Colorado, amid much hue and cry from conservative religious elements, last week became the first state to legalize abortion on three principle medical grounds. The Colorado law provides legal, medical abortion for several strict reasons, with approval from a panel of three physicians.

Just causes for requesting abortion are: 1) when a child is likely to be born with a "grave and permanent handicap"; 2) when the pregnancy results from rape or incest provided gestation is no more than 16 weeks; 3) when a girl under 16 is pregnant from statutory rape or incest; 4) when the mother would suffer permanent mental or physical harm resulting from childbirth.

Colorado is already being called the "abortion mecca" of the nation. But compared to the reality and needs of the situation, the law is merely a step in the right direction.

A serious need exists in this country for abortion laws that recognized the changing nature of both science and society--laws that will permit abortion for any woman who so desires. Practically, the chances of such laws in the immediate future are slim, but reasonably, their desirability should not be denied.

Abortion no doubt runs against society's traditional moral and legal codes. But in a changing society, it is time to realize that abortion is a matter for individual judgment and decision. It is not for a society which clings to these traditional values to force a woman to bear a child she does not want--to close all paths for escaping this burden. The inertia of collective society should not be permitted to stifle individual change in values within that society.

The great failing of the Colorado law is that, even if adopted nationally, it would not significantly reduce the number of criminal abortions performed each year. Over 80 per cent of those currently seeking criminal abortions are married women who simply do not want another child. These are women who, under the Colorado guidelines, are still left with no place to turn.

If a woman does not wish a child, that unwanted child will be at a disadvantage in today's pressurized society. Such children face the resentment of parents -- perhaps complete rejection. They start life with three strikes against them.

The laws prohibiting abortion are widely regarded as protection for society's sexual standards. But it's obvious that it is no more possible to legislate control over sex and abortion than it was to prohibit liquor consumption.

The fact that abortions are estimated to number upwards to 1.5 million points this out. The estimated 5,000 to 10,000 deaths caused by criminal abortion each year and the countless other women permanently maimed by abortion's shoddy practitioners are tragic evidence that society must find legal, sanitary means to provide wanted abortions.

Furthermore, a meaningful set of individual values should place more consideration on sex than the mere fear of pregnancy. It is a sad situation, indeed, that we are reduced to the unavailability of abortion as our only sexual guideline.

The decision to terminate pregnancy is not an easy one. But there is no reason why a panel of physicians, psychologists and educators could not advise every woman who gives serious consideration to such drastic measures. Such consultation would lead to an understanding and a meaningful decision in every case, whether or not an abortion is finally decided upon. The Colorado law has served to shake up some of the staunchest and oldest of society's values. But, though we wish every state went at least that far, Colorado has not gone far enough.

It avoids the central issue, and doesn't tackle the real problem. Only when people realize we do indeed live in a changing world, will they realize the necessity of eliminating our 150-year-old laws, and completely legalizing abortions.

Opposing viewpoints will be presented by other members of the editorial board next week.

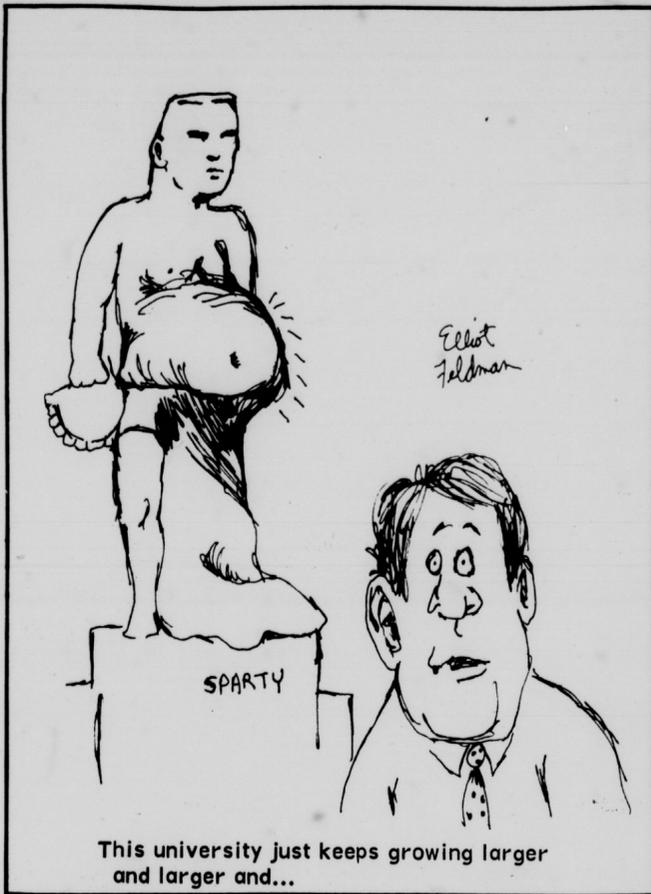

EDITORIAL DISSENT

Managing Editor Eric Pianin dissented from Wednesday's editorial calling for revisions in the summer freshman orientation program. Here, he explains his reasons for dissent.

MSU's freshman orientation program does not need wholesale revision, as was suggested in Wednesday's editorial. Its "philosophy" is basically sound, and I suspect my colleagues are using orientation as a whipping boy for the real factors contributing to the anti-intellectual atmosphere they perceive.

The functions of orientation are threefold:

1. Subject freshmen to intelligence and placement tests.
 2. Help freshmen devise their first course schedules and register.
 3. Give freshmen the opportunity to familiarize themselves with the vast campus and sample dormitory living for two days.
- What orientation cannot do for incoming freshmen is obvious. It cannot provide them with an accurate description of the academic and social atmosphere at MSU.

Where the fault lies

Each student must necessarily structure his own academic and social reality, and this is done after several years--not two days.

Orientation can neither mold an individual into an ambitious scholar nor start him down the road to merriment, hell and damnation.

We make the assumption that the incoming freshman has the intellectual capacity to succeed at the University. The acid test of how well or how miserably he will do hinges mostly on the professors and courses he encounters, the opinion leaders he seeks out in the dorms, and the kind of intellectual dialog he establishes with his contemporaries.

This process embodies all aspects and forces at the University. Certainly the very least significant force or determinant of a student's destiny is orientation. I suspect it is also the least significant issue of our time.

Any student who indignantly claims he was duped by a smoothly-run PR snow job is a fool to begin with. Certainly orientation leaders attempt to make the freshmen feel wanted and comfortable, and attempt to help the students reinforce their decision to come here. What organization dealing with the public doesn't?

The charges that Spartan Aides or staff working with freshmen avoid revealing the "other side", denotes the bureaucratic, somewhat impersonal atmosphere of a multiversity; the late nights spent cramming for finals; and the sometimes inevitable loneliness one feels his first year away at college.

I can only base this belief on observation. These subjects were definitely discussed at the orientation clinic I attended, along with living conditions, difficulty of course material, football, sex and anything else the freshmen wanted to discuss.

If these discussions were "intellectual," then it was all the better. Yet it is most likely that any formalized attempt at intellectually stimulating or motivating the freshmen in an extremely short period of time would necessarily be superficial and forced.

If there is an anti-intellectual atmosphere at MSU, then the fault lies with admissions procedures, course content, and quality and methods of teaching. These should be the object of our concern.

POINT OF VIEW

Proposal to policy

By GREG HOPKINS
Chairman, ASMSU Student Board

Acting on the recommendation on the women's hours proposal submitted by the ASMSU Policy Committee, the student board reconsidered and rejected the AWS women's hours proposal. The proposal was rejected because the student board, indicating by their unanimous vote to reject the proposal, felt it was inconsistent with their philosophy and with the desires of the student body of the University. This rejection will not hinder the implementation of the women's hours proposal, but rather should aid in making the proposal a policy of the University by next fall.

The policy committee has spent the last two weeks discussing the women's hours proposal and the Academic Freedom Report with students, Dean Fuzak, Vice President of Student Affairs, and Dr. Reinhoel, chairman of the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs. Through these discussions, an interpretation of the Academic Freedom Report was made. It was decided by ASMSU and the policy committee, members of the Office of Student Affairs, that according to the Academic Freedom Report, ASMSU or the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs must reject the proposal if a major change in the proposal is made.

The second session of ASMSU made a major change in their recommendations. The rejection made by ASMSU facilitates the initiation of the ad hoc conference committee consisting of two students appointed by the chairman of ASMSU and two faculty members appointed by the chairman of the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs. Because there was disagreement between ASMSU and the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs, the conference committee will be set up this week. This committee will then make its recommendations to the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs and the student board. The Faculty Committee on Student Affairs will meet Friday afternoon to make their decision on the recommendations of the conference committee. ASMSU will hold a special meeting to discuss the recommendations of the conference committee.

From all indications, the final approval of the women's hours proposal will be made by both groups by the May 9 deadline established by Dean Fuzak so that this may be sent to the members of the board of trustees for discussion in their meetings of May 16 and 17. From the discussions held in the past two weeks, it is generally felt by members of the student board that the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs will approve the changes made by ASMSU. These changes include extending the selective hours to sophomore women, extending guest privileges to week nights, allowing guests to return at a time different from that of the return of the hostess, and liberalizing the sign-out policy.

OUR READERS' MINDS

Happy hippy frisked for LSD

To the Editor:

On Wednesday afternoon, April 19, Tom Thomas, Justin Morrill College freshman, was apprehended by the campus police for the offense of expressing his happiness in turning cartwheels, running, and singing on his way to Grand River Avenue. The alert policeman who spotted this young man radioed for help, and almost instantly three additional squad cars appeared on the scene. One of the officers courageously left his car and apprehended the culprit. All this without a single shot fired.

Tom, at first puzzled, rapidly deduced that the officer thought him an "acid-head." He broke into convulsive laughter, but our boys weren't ruffled a bit, and began the extensive interrogation necessary to break such hardened lawbreakers. Tom's explanation for his "peculiar" action was, "I'm just happy. It's a beautiful spring day, and I'm happy and in love and feelin' groovy." Our brave policeman was not to be taken in, and replied, (direct quote) "Why don't you stop BSing me and tell me what you've been up to? I know you've been up to something. Let's have it." But Tom held firm on this point, and the officer tried another line of questioning. He asked Tom if he had ever taken LSD or pot. When Tom replied that he had not, the officer said (direct quote) "You don't expect me to believe that BS, do you?" He questioned Tom further, asking if he would be interested in helping them (the police) obtain information about which students were using the drugs. He assured Tom that he would be safe and that his name would not be used. After about half an hour of questioning, Tom was escorted to his destination and released with the warning, "You know, if you keep running around acting like this you're going to get yourself into a serious bind."

Our campus police are always in the right place at the right time: on the spot for sit-ins, demonstrations, jaywalking infractions, and now "joywalking" violations. Only by "being prepared" (the motto of the next dangerous group of radicals the campus police are out to crush), were they able to forge ahead of all other police forces by courageously collaring an individual for displaying happiness. What next? Capital punishment for PDA? Wiretapping in the dorms?

Anti-music man

To the Editor:

This is dedicated to "Mr. Music Critic" for the State News staff. What a write up! This time you outdid yourself. Ferrante and Teicher may have played with "more than twenty fingers", but you evidently listened with a finger in your ear.

You couldn't find anything wrong with Ferrante and Teicher so you tore apart their musical selections. In fact you haven't said anything complimentary all year. Your idea of a critic is a little warped. You don't have to look for something wrong in every performance. If you can't find anything wrong with the performers, then don't look for something wrong with the material or better yet the audience.

There definitely is a difference between popular music and "good" music. I'm glad that you realized the fact. The music Ferrante and Teicher played Thursday night would not be classified as "good" music; as good, I take you to mean baroque, classical or romantic.

Popular music takes the same amount of practice and skill and has its own beauty. I am sure the audience was well aware that they were listening to popular music, which they obviously enjoyed and of which they would have liked more. Three cheers for the "trash", "super-sweet Sound of Music", and "stuffy theme from Exodus".

- Jean Paul Sartre, French philosopher, Wednesday invited Secretary of State Dean Rusk to Stockholm to testify at the International War Crimes Tribunal on Vietnam. Sartre wrote that the Tribunal would welcome U.S. speakers who could present the U.S. defense as clearly and succinctly as possible and which would help the Tribunal in arriving at the truth in their deliberations.
- The U.S. 9th Infantry division fought its biggest battle near Dong Tam, South Vietnam, Wednesday. American officers estimated 195 Viet Cong were killed when the 9th made a "classic assault against fortified positions," an unusual maneuver in Vietnam. "It was an almost perfect combination of air, artillery, fire power and maneuver," an American brigade commander said.
- U.S. Marines, with air strikes and artillery, repulsed more than 200 Red regular soldiers Wednesday in a battle over a third hill in northwestern South Vietnam. The Marines have only recently secured control of two other hills in the area after a nine-day campaign against North Vietnamese soldiers. North Vietnamese losses in the battle Wednesday were at least 78; the Marines lost 22 men.
- The French Cabinet took note Wednesday of the British desire to enter the Common Market but gave no indication of acceptance or rejection. But the Cabinet said only that the questions which arise will be presented and need to be discussed in detail by the French government itself and with its partners in the Market.
- U.S. troops in Vietnam have reported fighting against women in isolated clashes. U.S. sources said that the Viet Cong are recruiting up to 25 per cent of their replacements from women. Most of the women's tasks are non-combatant, but many are being used as sentries, couriers and intelligence agents. See page 1
- South Korean President Chung Hee Park rolled up a heavy lead Wednesday night in his bid for a second term as President of the country. Park was in front of former president Yun Po-sun by nearly two to one in the early returns.

Romney: Wallace's tactics veil racism

LANSING (AP) — Gov. George Romney accused Alabama's former Gov. George Wallace today of pushing himself for a third-party presidential nomination in a campaign that is a thinly disguised effort to bind discrimination in with a move to retain states' rights.

Romney is a contender for the Republican 1968 presidential nomination and has been sampling party sentiment in a series of speeches. Wallace, viewed as a third-party contender by some, also has been sampling sentiment, but, like Romney, has not formally announced.

"When you get right down to it, the distinctive thing about the Wallace campaign is that it's a racist campaign," Romney told a news conference. Speaking of Wallace's rights issue, Romney said: "One state right that he is pushing is the right to segregation."

Romney, however, said Wallace would be welcome in Michigan should he decide to come vote-hunting, but added he didn't believe "many people would be mised into supporting a third party," Romney said he felt a third party candidate would be more harmful to Michigan Democrats than to Republicans, but added that he does not think the Democratic party in Michigan is a "racist party."

No decision on more troops, Johnson says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson said Wednesday no decision is imminent on whether to send more troops to Vietnam. However, he indicated such proposals are in the works.

Johnson told a surprise news conference he is not even considering at this time any recommendations to boost Vietnam troop strength beyond the 470,000 men already contemplated for the end of this year.

However, he said the Pentagon is evaluating "comments to the Joint Chiefs" from Gen. William C. Westmoreland and others.

Troop levels attracted renewed public attention following publication Wednesday of a New York Times dispatch from Saigon that reported Westmoreland had asked Johnson for 600,000 men.

On the rail situation, Johnson ruled out seizure or compulsory arbitration. But he said he will ask Congress to authorize a new 90-day no-strike, no-lockout period.

Transfer of credits poses problem in int'l studies

By LARRY WEINSTEIN
State News Staff Writer

More extensive programs should be established abroad; more overseas credits should be transferable here, and the University should help make more students aware of present offerings.

These were the suggestions made by students Tuesday at an open hearing of the International Programs Review Committee.

Only six students and two fraternity advisers attended the meeting. Faculty members will have a similar opportunity to present their views from 7:00 to 9:30 Monday in the Con room of the International Center.

The principal student speaker was Larry R. Kohler, Rochester, N.Y., junior. Kohler is president of Delta Phi Epsilon, a professional service and honorary fraternity in international relations.

Kohler suggested that MSU establish a junior year abroad program. "This program is needed over and beyond that which our University now sponsors," he said. The American Language Educational Center (AMLEC) program is a good one, but it is only a summer program.

"Three months is not enough time for one to really see the culture and feel the mood of a new country. Many of us who have to work during the summer find this program impossible."

Kohler objected to the practice of directing international programs primarily to the graduate student.

He also said that a visiting professor program would be of great value to the student. "It could give a general overview of world affairs with emphasis on the area from which the professor came," he said.

A major complaint of all the students was the lack of information they could obtain from the University on international programs and on the matter of transferring credits.

Neil Mullally, Muskegon junior, criticized the dearth of information available on whether overseas credits would transfer. He criticized the Registrar's office for slowness in making such information available to him.

Nancy Owen, Riverside, Conn., junior, said that the University had informed her that summer classes were not being conducted at the University of Madrid, but that when she went over there she found classes in full session.

Mullally hoped that special majors could be established and degrees granted in Asian, African, European, and Latin American-South American relations. He stressed that fluency in a language is only obtained by living in the real culture. The other students agreed, saying that the language labs were inadequate in providing real life experience. Ellen Herscher, Midland senior, said that meeting only three times a week in class after the freshman year does not provide intensive training in a language.

Mullally also hopes to see a resident program established in conjunction with foreign universities. Students not fluent in the language could attend for a term abroad for instruction in the language and then complete a regular class schedule the rest of the year, he suggested.

The purpose of the hearings is to determine student and faculty evaluations of MSU's internationally-oriented academic programs. The general interest of the committee is the University's responsibility to enlarge the student's international awareness.

State News Staff Writer

Since its inception nearly two years ago, the MSU Cycling Club has tried to introduce cycling to interested students.

Saturday the club will hold its first intercollegiate invitational bicycle race with contestants coming from the Midwest area.

Students will get their first look at the state spring champion, Neil King, Mt. Morris senior, and the Michigan road champ, Fred Beckwith, Dearborn junior, in action. Two other MSU students participating in the race are Karl Pearson, Midland junior, and Mark Palmer, Farmington freshman.

The race, covering 35 miles, will begin at 1 p.m. at the corner of Chestnut and Wilson Roads. The course follows Chestnut to Stadium Road to Wilson Road and back to Chestnut.

During the race there will be five sprint laps in which contestants will be awarded a certain number of points. A bell will ring at the starting line to announce a sprint lap.

The first five cyclists to finish that particular lap will be given points in descending order; that is, seven for first, five for second, three for third, two for fourth and one for fifth.

"The sprint laps will add much action to the race," said Paul Meier, Kenosha, Wis., sophomore and vice president of the club. "We don't want it to be just a dull race where the first one across the finish line is the winner."

"It is conceivable for a cyclist to accumulate many points on the sprint laps and still win even if he doesn't finish first," he added. "However, even though a man may win every sprint, he still has to finish the race to win."

The field of contestants is expected to be around 20 to 40 cyclists.

The race is sanctioned by the club's governing group, the Amateur Bicycle League of America. Six trophies and $100 worth of cycling equipment will be awarded to the winners. The equipment is donated by a Detroit bike shop that is providing judges for the race and co-sponsoring it with several East Lansing merchants.

"The bike shop in Detroit also gives discounts to club members on bicycles and equipment," Edward Frey, Dearborn Heights sophomore and president of the club, said.

The club is divided into two sections, the racing and the touring divisions. The touring division is concerned primarily with day trips.

Coach of the racing team is Karl Wettberg, a former international cycling competitor and a member of the 1955 Pan-American cycling team. He serves without pay.

Daily practice consists of 30 to 40 miles of road riding. Many members ride their bikes home for weekends. "The average time to Detroit is three hours," Frey said.

"Racing bikes are ultra-light," he added. "They are stripped down to make them as light as possible."

Three members of the club, King, Beckwith and Meier, are preparing for the Pan-American games July 22-August 7 in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada.

The club meets at 7:30 every Wednesday night in 208 Men's I.M. Building.

"Everyone is welcome to our meetings and outings," Frey said. "and we encourage anyone interested in cycling as a sport, a hobby or a general conditioner to join the club."

4 'new' events in Big 10 track

By NORM SAARI
State News Sports Writer

Big Ten track competition this spring finds athletes competing in four new conference events, the 440-yard relay, 3000-meter steeplechase, three miles and triple jump.

"They aren't exactly new events," MSU Track Coach Fran Dittrich said. "It's just that they have not been practiced as much. The conference decided to add these events to conform with distances in the National Collegiate meet and the 1968 Olympic Games."

MSU athletes have turned in credible performances for the races in meets this early in the season, and if the leg of the Spartan's top triple-jumper, Don Crawford, holds chances will be greatly improved for successful defense of MSU's Big Ten championship.

Crawford is a transfer student from Grand Rapids Junior College and placed second in the triple jump in the National JC Meet last year. His total distance was 46-3.

He strained a hamstring muscle in practice earlier in the season and is not in top form yet.

The Spartans also figure to be strong in the 440-yard relay as Bob Steele, Rick Dunn, Das Campbell and Gene Washington have been timed in 0:41.7, one-tenth of a second off the best in the conference, Minnesota.

"The race is all speed," Dunn said. "It is over so fast you haven't realized you have already run. The baton exchange is what makes the race because there will be five schools in the conference with about equal times."

In the two longer events, Dick Sharkey and George Balthrop will be the MSU runners most strongly relied upon.

Sharkey won the indoor two mile this year and has already run a 14:11.2 in the three mile. Balthrop took fourth place in the steeplechase at Ohio Relays two weeks ago with a 9:29.0.

The steeplechase is run with four hurdle-type barriers and one hazard for the runners to jump on each of seven laps.

Sharkey and Balthrop agree strength and endurance, with some hurdlng ability, are the key factor: involved in the steeplechase.

WHAT MAKES A HAPPY FAMILY?

It's something we all want, for ourselves and for the world. But if we work within the limits of human frailties, a happy family may seem a difficult goal. What we need is a new approach . . . a spiritual dimension that puts God at the center of all family relationships. Hear this lecture "What Makes a Happy Family?" by HARRY S. Carnival tickets going, going . . .

Ticket sales for Water Carnival, May 19-20, are going faster than in previous years.

One-third of the tickets have been sold already, according to Dan Bzovi, Trenton senior and general chairman.

The 45th annual Water Carnival will be dedicated to President John A. Hannah in recognition of his 25 years as president of the university.

This year's theme is "The ABCDarian: the building blocks of knowledge." The "precocious prodigy," an old man looking back on his experiences at MSU, is the symbol of the carnival, Bzovi said.

Seventy living units will make 35 floats with a men's and a women's unit working on each. The floats will be judged by five different judges each night.

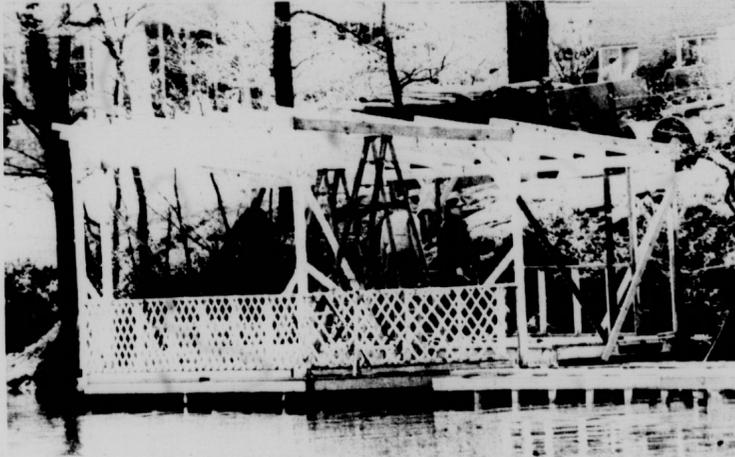

On the basis of the combined scores, three trophies will be awarded to both on and off-campus units Saturday night.

The judging criteria will be mechanical complexity, theme and overall impression, Bzovi said.

Excalibur, senior men's honorary, will tap new members during intermission on May 20.

Water Carnival began 45 years ago as an all-university event to give living units the opportunity to display their work. Plans for this year's carnival were formulated last year, Bzovi said, with actual preparations beginning fall term.

Tickets are $2 for Friday night, $2.50 for Saturday night and may be obtained at the Union ticket office and Campbell's Suburban Shop.

Frosh to meet today with former teachers

More than one thousand principals, counselors and teachers from Michigan high schools will be on campus today to interview over 3,000 MSU freshmen.

The annual follow-up conference is sponsored by the Office of Admissions and Scholarships.

The all-day program, to be held in the Auditorium, will provide for an exchange of viewpoints between MSU freshmen and their former high school counselors and principals. Over three hundred Michigan high schools will be represented.

Freshmen who entered MSU this past summer or fall have been assigned appointments with their counselors or principals. Spartan Aides will be stationed in the Auditorium lobby to assist the freshman interviews.

High school representatives will begin interviewing students at 8:30 a.m. and conclude their activities with a luncheon at Kellogg Center.

Radical rightists use politics as a weapon to elevate their sense of self worth, according to Ira Rohter, instructor in political science at the University of Wisconsin.

Rohter said that radical rightists are drawn together by common feelings of alienation from contemporary American society. They feel powerless in their situation, and right wing politics provides them with a vehicle for overcoming their frustrations.

These frustrations, he said, may be based on declining occupational or economic situations, status frustrations, or changes in traditional moral values, beliefs or customs.

In general, radical rightists believe that their frustrations are the result of Communist conspiracies, Rohter said. By means of the political vehicle, they perform "patriotic acts" of destroying the reputations of their opponents by labeling them communists, he said.

Rohter pointed out that adherents to the right wing condemn their opponents without feelings of guilt because they see themselves as patriotic Americans protecting the country from threats to traditional values.

Another psychological appeal of radical right philosophy, he said, is that the conspiracy view of history offers individuals a simple way of understanding a confusing and changing world.

Police records

(continued from page one) law to send their public record information to the State Police. If a person is arrested in Michigan for a felony, he is fingerprinted and the prints must be sent to the FBI in Washington, D.C., a State Police officer said. Fingerprints are sometimes taken on lesser offenses, depending on the arresting officer. In a dismissal or acquittal, an East Lansing officer said, the complaint report would be kept but would include the fact of dismissal or acquittal. In a record check later, police would check the name file (arrest cards), and since the arrest card would have been destroyed, the police would have no record of the arrest.

Parking ban

(continued from page one) trustees, according to Bill Lukens, residence hall representative on the committee, deal with student wives who are full time employees, resident assistant permits and graduate employee permits. Student wives who are employed full time by MSU and their spouses if enrolled will be eligible for Faculty-Staff permits, according to one proposal. This permit allows driving and parking anywhere on campus. Another recommendation would permit resident assistants to drive anywhere on campus but park only near their own residence hall. Lukens said that the recommendations were given to Hannah about two weeks ago. Hannah then presents the report to the Board of Trustees for final approval. "The Board will probably consider the recommendations at their next meeting (May 18) so that the rules and regulations can be printed this summer," Lukens said.

Placement Bureau

Students must register in person at the Placement Bureau at least two days prior to the date of an interview. Thursday, May 11: Addison Public Schools; early and later elementary education, business education, German/English, and girls' physical education (B,M). Fowlerville Public Schools; early and later elementary education, mathematics, earth science, arts and crafts, home economics, business education (shorthand) and English/French (B,M). Hudson Public Schools; later elementary education, mathematics, English, business education, remedial reading and industrial arts (B,M). Charles P. Davey, New England Life; all majors, all colleges (B, M). Remington Office Machines Division, Sperry Rand Corp.; marketing and all majors of the college of business (B).

150 Greeks run

An estimated 150 men from 22 fraternity houses braved 39-degree windy weather to participate in the Greek Week track meet preliminaries Tuesday. The Greek Week track meet finals will be held at 7:30 tonight at the East Lansing High School track. In the 12 pound shotput finals, Don Wilson, Belleville, Ill. senior, Kappa Sigma, placed first with a toss of 48 feet-9 1/2 inches. Others who placed were: second, Jim Mantey, Southfield freshman, Sigma Chi; third, Bill McCracken, Milford sophomore, Phi Gamma Delta; fourth, Bob Aloe, Ann Arbor sophomore; and fifth, Chester Godley, Detroit freshman, Alpha Phi Alpha. In the high jump, Bill Szalay, Dearborn Junior, Triangle, won with a jump of 5 feet-10 inches. Behind Szalay were Chuck Lepley, Rochester senior, Theta Chi, second; Mike Suthers, Flossmoor, Ill., freshman, Delta Chi, third; Kirk Faber, Greenville sophomore, Phi Gamma Delta, fourth; and Gary Spade, Grosse Pointe Junior, Sigma Nu, fifth.

Meeting on coed selective hours

(continued from page one) The Faculty Committee on Student Affairs passed the proposal without change last term. After the joint conference committee discusses student board's recommendations and comes to a decision, the new proposal will be sent back to the faculty committee and to student board for ratification. Both Fuzak and Hopkins expressed great optimism that the student-faculty committee would have a proposal ready by Friday so the faculty committee could act on it immediately. Hopkins indicated that a special student board meeting would be called over the weekend, should the faculty committee approve the new document. Fuzak said that if the joint conference committee did not come up with a solution by Friday "then we've really got a problem." Hopkins emphasized that the attempt by ASMSU to gain selective closing hours for sophomores in no way hampers the chances of getting selective hours for junior and senior women by fall term. Fuzak said that he has "no strong opinion" on whether or not sophomores should have hours. He said that results of the Women's Inter-residence Council (WIC) survey (co-eds thought sophomores should have selective hours by a vote of 1,523 to 971) was not a strong majority. Fuzak said that his signature on whatever proposal is finally submitted to his office does not guarantee that it will be passed by the Board of Trustees. He indicated, however, that he would strongly advise the trustees to approve the final proposal without a referendum. Student board is also requesting that coeds not be required to sign out when leaving their residence. Provision has been made, however, for coeds who wish to sign out. The board is suggesting that coeds be allowed overnight guests anytime during the term and that these guests may return to the residence hall at any time.
