Thant denies troop pull-out sparked Arab-Israeli war

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Amid continuing assembly debate, Secretary-General U Thant issued a White Paper Tuesday rejecting contentions that his speedy compliance with Egypt's demands for removal of the U.N. Emergency Force (UNEF) helped spark the Arab-Israeli war.

Thant issued a 10,500-word report to the 122 members of the emergency special session of the Middle East crisis that constituted a detailed reply to critics, who included President Johnson, Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson and Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

Outside the assembly, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Secretary of State Dean Rusk arranged a night meeting—their first since the summit conference of Johnson and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin. The emphasis appeared to be on disarmament rather than the Middle East.

Thant stressed these main points in his report:

To argue that removal of UNEF was a primary cause of the crisis is "a superficial and oversimplified approach" that ignored the "explosive factors which already existed prior to Thant's orders for withdrawal on May 18, the day the request was made. The war flared 19 days later on June 5.

Although President Gamal Abdel Nasser's request came as a surprise, it had been generally accepted in previous talks with the Egyptians that compliance was the only reasonable and sound course that Thant could take.

Nasser had made clear in advance that any request for a delay in compliance would meet with a rebuff.

Thant consulted in advance with parties primarily concerned. There was no request from his advisory committee that the General Assembly be called into session to consider the situation.

Most U.N. diplomats have not challenged the legal grounds on which Thant acted, but there has been criticism that he could have stalled for time in the hope of preventing actual hostilities.

Thant acknowledged that his decision has been criticized as hasty and precipitous, but added that he followed the only sound course open to him, and that the actual withdrawal "was to be carried out in an orderly, dignified and not precipitous manner over a period of several weeks." The withdrawal from Egyptian territory was completed on June 17.

In summation Thant declared that the 3,400-man U.N. contingent was only a symbolic force, incapable of preventing war and under mandate only to patrol 245 miles of border between Israel and Egypt.

Referring to refusal of the Communist and most Arab states to pay assessments for the force, he added:

"In recent years it experienced an increasingly uncertain basis of financial support, which in turn gave rise to strong annual pressures for reducing its strength. Its remarkable success for more than a decade, despite these practical weaknesses, may have led to wrong conclusions about its nature, but it also pointed the way to a unique means of contributing significantly to international peacekeeping."

While diplomatic consultations persisted in an effort to find agreement on assembly recommendations in the crisis, the tone of the actual debate gave little signs of change in position.

Arab delegates supported Soviet demands that Israel be condemned as an aggressor and ordered to give up Arab territory seized in the war.

Adnan Pachachi, the Iraqi foreign minister, rejected the U.S. resolution calling for direct Israeli-Arab negotiations. He asserted that "Arab disillusionment with American official policy is deep, bitter and unqualified."

Nicanor Costa Mendez of Argentina, whose country is active in search for a compromise solution, said that lacking proof Argentina "will not vote for a condemnation of Israel any more than she would vote for a condemnation of the Arab states, were we asked to do so."

Both Finnish Ambassador Max Jakobson and Nigerian Delegate Chief Anthony Enahoro expressed hope that some kind of U.N. force could be established eventually to keep peace in the area.

U.S., Soviets resume talks on arms treaty

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko sat down to dinner talks Tuesday night amid prospects for U.S.-Soviet agreement soon on a proposed nuclear nonproliferation treaty.

The session at the Soviet U.N. mission was ordered by President Johnson and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin as a followup to their Glassboro, N.J., summit talks over the weekend.

Johnson and Kosygin remained far apart on issues such as Vietnam and the Middle East, but U.S. sources reported the two sides were close to agreement on a disarmament project—a pact to curb the spread of atomic weapons.

Rusk had no immediate comment as he and top aides arrived promptly for their 7 p.m., EST dinner date at the Soviet headquarters in upper east side Manhattan.

Gromyko was smiling and cryptic with newsmen as the party posed briefly for pictures inside the Soviet mission.

"No politics, only poetry—19th century poetry," the Soviet foreign affairs chief said in response to questions.

Rusk summoned Adrian S. Fisher, deputy director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, from Washington to sit in on the parley with Gromyko.

Moscow and Washington long have followed a policy of not handing atomic arms to other nations, and for months the nuclear superpowers have been negotiating proposed wording for a nonproliferation pact to be presented to the 17-nation Geneva disarmament conference.

U.S. sources reported the two sides appeared to be near agreement on a draft treaty text to be presented at Geneva. Accord had been held up by U.S.-Soviet differences over inspection procedures to enforce a nonproliferation pact. The Soviets have opposed allowing the existing inspection system among the West European allies to do the European allies—to do the European policing job under the treaty.

Should the two great atomic powers agree on treaty wording, this would be only the first step in the proposed worldwide agreement. They still face the task of persuading the nuclear have-nots to sign the pact aimed at denying them atomic arms forever.

Also passed on from the summit was some generalized talk about the need to reduce arms spending, plus a more specific review of the U.S. proposal to curb rival antiballistic missile systems, U.S. informants said.

Knapp's to open Mall store

By LINDA GORTMAKER
State News Staff Writer

Knapp's will expand its operation to include a full line department store slated for completion next spring in the proposed Meridian Mall Shopping Center.

Knapp's will be one of 40 stores in the enclosed Mall which will cost approximately $12 million. The store should attract a bulk of East Lansing customers, said Roger Benjamin, vice president of the M.H. Hausman company of Cleveland, financial backers of the shopping center.

With negotiations finalized Monday night, the first phase of the new shopping center, located at the southwest corner of Grand River Avenue and Okemos-Haslett Road in Meridian Township, is scheduled for completion in the fall of 1969. The second phase will include two additional department stores.

"The area west of East Lansing had such booming business that we decided to try the east area," Benjamin said.

He said that research studies conducted by his firm reveal that more population on the east side has caused the area to be "bulging at its seams."

"Unable to expand in East Lansing, we thought that this new shopping center provided a fine opportunity for growth," said Howard C. Grimes, president of the J.W. Knapp Company.

Grimes withdrew from the East Lansing Chamber of Commerce earlier this year, reportedly irritated by a lack of chamber support for his proposal to buy part of a city parking lot to expand to a full-line department store.

Benjamin said one of the reasons for Knapp's expansion is the need for more room to display goods. Departments can become too closely squeezed together, he said.

Asked if the new store in an enclosed, heated and air-conditioned mall would detract from business in the East Lansing store, Grimes said that there are no plans to expand this store.

"In the future we may have to gear East Lansing store merchandise to the University and cater strictly to the collegians," Grimes added.

Knapp's new store will employ 175-200 people and spend $2 million on goods and fixtures. Hausman is providing $1.5 million for the one-story building.

Besides carrying all the departments of the Lansing store, the 120,000 square feet of the new Knapp's will include a completely separate men's store adjacent to the main shop.

Other businesses in the first phase of the shopping center include a popular priced department store, to be announced in three to four weeks. Hausman is also completing negotiations with a theatre, major variety store, large women's specialty store, as well as a third department store. Only 15 per cent of the shopping center space not yet on contract remains available for stores.

Complementing the shopping center, over 100 acres controlled by Meridian Mall, Inc. will include several apartment buildings, a large medical building and several general office buildings costing an approximate $35 million.

"Knapp's addition to our development will lead the way to a quality shopping center," Benjamin said.

Grimes added that the "fine balance of industry, education and government of the Lansing area" aids his hope for success in this business venture.

"Also, there's a high saturation of charge accounts in the area east of Lansing," he added.

Benjamin stressed that Knapp's has had two-and-a-half-times its area growth in retail sales over the past ten years.

Pope dips into past, restores post of deacon

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul VI created the permanent rank of deacon Tuesday, reviving a practice dating back to Christianity's early days. Married men may become deacons and perform most of the offices of a priest.

The purpose is to help fill the gap caused by the shortage of priests in various nations, notably in Latin America, Africa and Asia.

Under the new regulations, married men over 35 with their wives' consent may be ordained as ministers to perform priestly functions except hearing confession and saying mass. They remain married.

Single men at least 25 years old also may become deacons but must not marry. Confessions and the Mass will remain the exclusive rights of priests, who cannot marry.

Four days ago the Pope rejected demands for changes in the 1,500-year-old celibacy rule for priests and reaffirmed that they cannot marry.

The new regulations were contained in a document titled "Sacrum Diaconatus Ordinem," Sacred Order of the Diaconate. It puts into effect recommendations made in 1964 by the Vatican Ecumenical Council.

In early Christianity permanent deacons acted as ministers, performing many of the duties of priests.

But in recent centuries in the Roman Catholic Church, the diaconate had become a temporary kind of order for advanced seminary students before ordination as priests.

The Pope now has in effect reestablished the ancient practice of having a permanent order of deacons made up of men acting as ministers but not priests for their entire lives.

Deacons will be able to administer the sacraments of baptism, Communion and matrimony. They also will be allowed to teach religion, preach, preside at funerals and burial services and conduct prayer services.

Some of these functions, such as blessing marriages and directing prayer services, will be permitted them only when a priest is available.

50 DROP-OUTS A TERM

Unwed mothers bear brunt of act

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a five-part series on student sexual behavior at MSU. Today's article deals with the increasing number of pregnancies among unmarried coeds.

By DOROTHY LASKEY
State News Staff Writer

Young unmarried couples who engage in sexual relations don't realize their actions involve a third party—the possible child, said Dr. James S. Feurig, director of Olin Health Center.

Feurig stated that each fall, winter and spring term 50 unmarried coeds withdraw from school because of pregnancy. This is by no means the total number of pregnancies.

"Many students find out on their own about their condition and leave school quietly," the physician continued.

"I don't like to say this but young unmarried girls, students here, come in off the street bleeding because of a miscarriage. It doesn't happen everyday, but enough times that it's not unusual.

"And because of the attitude today on freer living, cases of miscarriage and pregnancy are progressively increasing," Feurig said 70 per cent of the 85 to 100 miscarriages that are treated at Olin during the year involve unmarried girls. He added that 25 per cent of these miscarriages are induced, criminal abortions.

A young man overhearing subsequent conversation remarked, "Abortion? Most of the girls go down to Detroit to have that taken care of."

" . . . Everything is wonderful until the girl gets pregnant, then sex takes on a new meaning."
.....

From September to June two miscarriages per week are treated, Feurig said. During the summer the average is one a week.

"Coeds often don't realize they are pregnant, and because of active lives they lead the pregnancy is naturally terminated."

Feurig said incidences of unmarried sexual relationships have been increasing since the late 1940's. He said it seems since then "morality and tradition have become more and more old-fashioned."

He called MSU's increase in pregnancies and miscarriages more marked over the past two years.

Feurig charged that no matter what goes on along the Red Cedar the burden is entirely on the female if a pregnancy results.

He said it is the coed who is confused and frustrated as she lies on some physician's examining table.

"It is the girl who because of sheer physical make-up cannot fit into the lecture seats after her fifth month of pregnancy."

"It is the girl who is heckled by her

MSU retiree units planned

MSU Services Cooperative made an initial step Monday night towards construction of a $20 million retirement complex for MSU faculty and employees.

John Winburn, president of MSU Services Cooperative, headed a delegation making a presentation of building plans to the Delhi Charter Township Board.

The complex will be situated at the northeast section of Delhitownship bounded by Sandhill, Pinetree and Dell Roads.

Winburn, along with Vern Severance, president of the MSU Employees Credit Union, and Fred Fox, project engineer for the complex, plan to ask soon that the township rezone 80 acres to A-2 residential.

"It's a long process of meetings, studies and open hearings," Winburn said. "If all goes well we should have rezoning approval by October."

A role for students in changing times

"It was apparent that time had changed some of the once-firey demonstrators. Some had married and were parents; many seemed to have changed attitudes."

So said a recent Associated Press story describing members of the 1964 Free Speech Movement at the University of California when they appeared in municipal court after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review their cases.

Besides pointing up the obvious slowness of the judicial process, the incident graphically portrays the transient fate of today's college student.

The defendants had been virtual members of a mass movement only three years before. Now, the issues which they had been willing to undergo arrest and retribution are no longer issues. Most likely, many are no longer students; their grave concerns of three years ago are perhaps not even relevant to them today.

Such changes are not unique to student activists. Rather they typify the fate of students in general who become deeply involved with the academic or social policies of their institution.

Whether he be student leader, student activist, or student editor, his tenure is short, his service abbreviated.

Usually it takes at least a year or two for a student to learn the folkways of his college or university. This leaves at most two or three years of real participation at the institution. Then upon graduation, regardless of his prior interest and devotion, the setting changes, the horizons broaden.

Suddenly, the knowledge gained about the institution and the way it operates, about the faculty, academics, rules and administrators is locked up in a dark corner of his mind, perhaps never to be called upon again.

The college experience is then history. The contributions and service to the institution are ended. The changes sought so desperately are no longer important. And the continuity of leadership is jolted again.

This does not negate the progress students have wrought through their greater involvement and participation. Neither does it lessen the importance of the role of students in the educational process, including policy formulation.

But unfortunately for the individual and the institution, among college students, there is a new generation each year. --The Editors

AT JAYCEE MEET

Summit cynics chided

BALTIMORE -- President Johnson battled "the cussers and the doubters" at home Tuesday while declaring he believed he and Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin achieved better understanding at the summit in a search for peace.

Addressing an annual convention of the Jaycees, Johnson also said that he and his advisers "are going to do our dead level best to bring peace to every human being in the world." And he said they also are going to talk, plan, work, and pray for ways of "keeping your country and your families secure."

Johnson acknowledged, though, "Our problems are many. Our solutions are few."

But in a hard-swinging address that had a lot of the earmarks of a political campaign speech, Johnson lit into critics and protesters on the home front.

He appealed to the Jaycees for support and understanding along a rough-bumpy path ahead and hammered on the idea that if he gets it:

"Then the cussers and the doubters will be relegated to the rear; the doers and the builders will take up the front lines."

"Though our differences are many, and though they run very deep," the Chief Executive said, "we knew that in the world's interest it was important that we understand, if we could, the motivations as well as the commitments of each other."

Tax reform; big boom

To the Editor:

Governor Romney is beating the drum for fiscal "reform." Harold Lashlee, the distinguished representative of ASMSU, proudly jumps on the bandwagon and urges his followers to do likewise. As a matter of fact, factions of neighboring student government bodies have also been stirred by the "boom, boom, boom" of Romney's call for "reform."

But as this self appointed, representative percussion group crescendos, one cannot help but ask, "What do they mean by 'reform'?"

The first meaning in the American College Dictionary defines "reform" as "... the improvement or amendment of what is wrong, corrupt, etc.; SOCIAL REFORM." But how does Governor Romney define the term?

One can only assume from the public position he has taken that reform is the furthest thing from his mind. Ever since Con-Con, Romney's gubernatorial launching pad, his opposition to a state graduated income tax has been patently clear.

But now when the state supposedly needs money, he doesn't fight the addition of this new tax to the polyglot of provincial personal state taxes already in existence. No, instead he welcomes this tax IN ADDITION to all the others. Romney is even more amenable to a flat, across the board income tax which alone is almost as burdensome as the 4 per cent sales tax on the middle and lower income brackets, but in addition to the existing chaotic tax structure, it would be intolerable.

This is not fiscal reform -- more straightforward and reform-minded citizens would have called the animal by its name: tax increase.

Romney's odious misnomer is obviously not just a deliberate misuse of terms. It is the substitution of a backward tax, benefiting only corporations and upper income groups, for a graduated state income tax which would replace the sales and sundry nuisance taxes that plague the middle and lower income brackets.

This is the issue that should be brought before the citizenry in a public debate and referendum and not held as the exclusive property of the legislature. Let the public decide if it wants a graduated state income tax, BUT let us also decide if the latter is to be an additional tax or one that replaces the antiquated tax structure.

THE NATION'S PRESS

Will Johnson listen to voices of sanity?

Some voices of eminent good sense are heard in the Senate urging a settlement of the two world crises: Vietnam and the Middle East. Senators Fulbright, Morton, Cooper, Mansfield, Mondale, Magnuson, Eugene McCarthy, Stephen Young are among those who have spoken out along these general lines. President Johnson is keeping his own counsel. He has given no indication of changing U.S. policy in Southeast Asia. He has stayed in the background in the Middle East situation and, when he finally held a press conference, told the reporters practically nothing of his plans. We can only hope that he is listening to the voices of sanity and thoroughly exploring the possibilities they suggest.

It sometimes happens, in the affairs of nations as of individuals, that one trouble coming on top of another makes both more manageable. Invention may be stimulated by multiplication of difficulties and the realization that earlier measures have failed. Mr. Johnson must realize with increasing concern that in Vietnam we--he and all of us, including the military leaders--are in dire trouble. The bombing targets are nearly exhausted; we are practically dependent on the North Vietnamese to rebuild or repair facilities so that we may have something to attack. Increasingly, reporters return from Vietnam with intimations that the war may not be "winnable." The pacification program has come to a standstill. A new report assesses "force levels" with nothing but dark prospects--more men, more materiel will be needed, and results are doubtful no matter how much more blood is spilled.

In short, we are in trouble, with force no longer offering any prospect of a way out. In the Middle East everybody is in trouble, but the Russians even more than the United States. Their role in support of the Arabs has been ludicrous. These firebrands evidently hoped that when it came to a showdown the Russians would come to their help with military tangles; instead, Kosygin talked with Johnson by teletype and limited his support to verbal expostulations in the Security Council. These demonstrations will continue in the Assembly, but in the meantime Israel holds large swaths of Arab territory which neither the Council nor the Assembly can make it relinquish. Militarily the Arab defeat has been ignominious and the Soviet Union must share the Arabs' discomfiture. The United States and the Soviets may supply token replacements of arms in that region but neither is likely to engage in a full-fledged arms race again.

When Premier Eshkol speaks--and he is by no means the most defiant of the Israelis--whose example is he following if not that of the great powers? He says Israel will decide what is in Israel's national interest, just as big countries decide for themselves, letting no considerations of morality or equity interfere. We are surely the last ones to be in a position to remonstrate with him. If the Israelis fired the first shots after Nasser told the UN to get out of Sinai, filled the desert with men and tanks and blockaded Aqaba, who shall say they were the aggressors?

If Mr. Johnson ponders on these facts, he can scarcely fail to see that the Middle East crisis offers his Administration a kind of psychological cover for a settlement in Vietnam. In somewhat the same way, the proceedings in the UN Assembly provide a cover for a Russian effort to reach an understanding with the United States for a relaxation of tensions in both areas of conflict. Either side, if it wishes, can find insurmountable obstacles to agreement, but the dangers and frustrations that confront both may give both the vision that can lead to a peaceful solution. --Nation, June 26

ECON. HEADS AGREE

Ackley says U.S. needs hike in taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) -- President Johnson's chief economic adviser told Congress Tuesday that income taxes must be raised this year to safeguard prosperity.

Gardner Ackley, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, gave this policy statement to the Senate - House Economic Committee. He based it on the state of the economy and the danger of inflation or tight money, rather than on the need to reduce deficits which other sources have forecast as high as $29 billion.

Ackley's statement was almost precisely parallel to views set out Monday by William McChesney Martin Jr., chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Martin, who has backed from the start President Johnson's call last January for a six per cent surcharge on income taxes, suggested an even bigger boost now might be in order.

Still going right along with Martin, Ackley testified under questioning that the six per cent Johnson proposed might be a minimum--"it seems to me unlikely a smaller increase would have the effect required."

But Ackley got indications of some congressional resistance to the across-the-board increase.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., said he was serving notice "that, unless I am convinced to the contrary, I'm not going to vote for such an increase on moderate incomes when the administration is not willing to come to Congress with some proposal on plugging tax loopholes."

Powell indignant at censure

BIMINI, Bahamas (AP) -- Adam Clayton Powell said Tuesday the censure of Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., "magnifies the obscene distinction between justice for white men and justice for black men in America."

At a news conference he called on this tiny island where he has been in self-imposed exile for six months, Powell said he was willing to "reluctantly compromise" and take the same punishment meted out to Dodd.

And although he said he definitely will not return to Washington as a freshman congressman, Powell said he might attend a black power conference next month in Newark, N.J.

Powell called Dodd "an old and good friend," but he said that in Dodd's case the Senate showed a compassion "badly missing in the case of Adam Clayton Powell."

Dodd was censured for converting political funds to private use. A second resolution, later killed, accused him of collecting twice on expense accounts.

Tax negotiators still dead locked

House Republicans and Democrats were still bargaining Tuesday over the particulars of a tax reform program that can be passed by the House before the July 1 deadline.

Both sides reached a stalemate over a ceiling for corporate income taxes with the GOP going no higher than 51 1/2 per cent and the Democrats calling for 5.8 per cent and a $3 per person credit on sales taxes. Republicans are strongly opposed to the sales tax credit.

Gathered in Gov. George Romney's office, where they have been meeting since last Thursday after a second GOP-sponsored fiscal reform program was defeated 50-56 in the House, the negotiators were no closer to settlement Tuesday afternoon than they were Friday night.

The defeated GOP program called for corporations to pay 10 per cent of the taxes to the state while individuals payed the remaining 90.

But the Senate-passed program has a 70-30 split, and House Minority Leader William A. Ryan, D-Detroit, insists that he will not go below a split of 26.1 per cent for corporations and 73.9 per cent for individuals.

His insistence on that tax split brought the impasse among the bargainers.

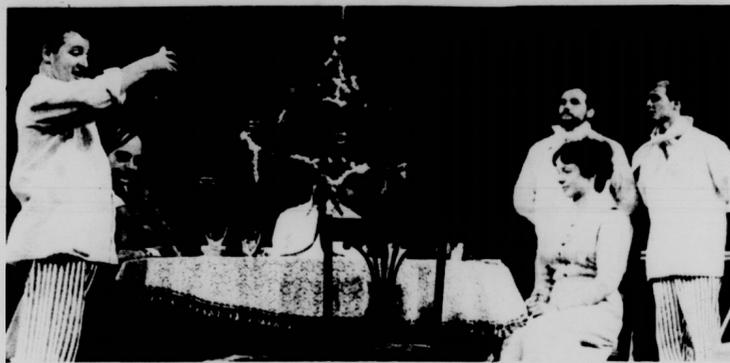

While bargaining was taking place in Romney's office Tuesday, MSU President John A. Hannah appeared before the House Appropriations Committee. He spoke to the committee on the financial needs of higher education, ranging from community colleges to universities.

Marx Bros' films on tap

A festival of many Marx brothers films will begin with the comedy "Cocanuts" at 7 p.m. Thursday in Parlor C of the Union.

Others on the schedule are "Duck Soup" on July 13th and "Monkey Business" on July 20th. The festival is co-sponsored by the Student Religious Liberals and The Exploring Cinema Society.

Donations will be accepted.

Striped angels take command

Christmas Eve, 1910, in French Guiana, three convicts take charge when a small store proprietor is faced with bankruptcy in "My Three Angels." The opening comedy of the 1967 Summer Circle season will play Wednesday through Saturday in Demonstration Hall with four faculty members in the cast.

SORE FEET, BACK

Meredith march hobbled

ENID, Miss. — The "walk against fear" became an endurance test Monday for civil rights figure James H. Meredith, plagued by sore feet and an aching back.

The New York law student, rediscovering muscles he hadn't used since he was a Mississippi farm hand, hobbled painfully through the third day of his planned symbolic march of 200 miles.

ample of courage for Mississippi Negroes. He contends generations of inbred fear hobbles the Negroes effort to vote and change the system.

Meredith, 34, started the walk from the point where he was gunned down a year ago. He said he was determined to set an example of courage for Mississippi Negroes. He contends generations of inbred fear hobbles the Negroes effort to vote and change the system.

"Man, I wish I were young and strong again like you," he told three young Negro companions during one of the frequent rest stops along old, narrow U.S. 51.

The controversial Negro frequently at odds with other civil rights spokesmen, set out to walk to Jackson, the capital. He said Sunday he might stop at Canton, 25 miles short of Jackson, but later added that the change was not definite.

Canton is the point where Meredith, recovered from his bird-shot wounds, rejoined the 1966 "March Against Fear", which was continued by other civil rights leaders after he was shot.

Situation comedy fails despite talent

By STUART ROSENTHAL

"Eight on the Lam," currently at the Gladmer, seems to herald the arrival of the television situation comedy series to the theater screen.

Last summer, Bob Hope released a strip of celluloid entitled "Boy, Did I Get a Wrong Number", "Lam," following the television axiom of always reworking a previous success, is almost identical to its predecessor.

The Bob Hope character, of course, never changes, and Phyllis Diller persists unmercifully. Elke Sommer has been replaced by Shirley Eaton, the gilded gold "Goldfinger" girl, and seven little brats, a dog, and Jonathan Winters have been added.

The plot finds bank teller Hope, a widower with seven children, accused of embezzlement and attempting to evade the hot pursuit of police detective Jonathan Winters. The story line, however, serves only as a skeleton onto which are pasted the required constituents of a Hope-Diller debacle.

Everything is stock, from the dull repartee which passes as dialog to the sappy forced on family sentiment and the final chase scene. Everyone, as expected, lives happily ever after.

Eight on the Lam

Gladmer

"Lam" is a lamentable calamity, though. It is sad to see a comedian of Hope's stature working with such a trivial vehicle. Presently, he seems to be satisfied with a series of walk-through monologs, more appropriate in a television sketch than in a motion picture.

The best thing that can be said of Phyllis Diller's performance, is that the frizzle-faced fop is unusually subdued.

'My Three Angels' opens Summer Circle

The 1967 Summer Circle Theater season will open tonight with the play "My Three Angels." Written by Samuel and Bella Spewack, "My Three Angels" is a comedy about three convicts who "take over" a family. The action takes place in French Guiana in a colony of convicts on Christmas eve of 1910. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. tonight through Friday.

Frank C. Rutledge, instructor; Edward Andraesen, assistant professor; and Dr. John J. Baldwin, assistant professor, who will direct as well as appear in the play.

Others in the cast include Michael Oberfield, Oak Park senior; Laverne Hagenbuch, Haslett sophomore; and Dale Rose, Taylor graduate student.

Summer Circle productions are presented in Demonstration Hall. Tickets are available at the door.

ELSA ENTERTAINS

At home in the jungle

By STEVE PETERSEN, State News Reviewer

Born Free

To most people, a movie about an animal immediately brings to mind a sentimental "boy-and-his-dog" type story. There is the clever dog/cat/horse who, after tearing up the lawn/eating the parakeet/trampling the ranch-hand/ saves the young hero by rescuing him from a forest fire/abandoned mine shaft/gang of desperadoes. After that the animal is accepted and loved.

"Born Free" has avoided these pitfalls and others which also are particular to African movies. It has combined the traditional shots of the grandeur of the African countryside with a different type of animal story.

since they were not thrust at me, I had to look for them. Elsa, the lioness, is the main character. She is not a main

Church holds Japanese film series

"Alakazam the Great," featuring the voices of Sterling Holloway and Jonathan Winters, will be shown at 7 tonight at East Lansing's Edgewood United Church, 469 N. Hagadorn.

The film is the first of a program of Japanese feature films for children.

The other films include "Sinbad the Sailor" on July 12, "The Littlest Warrior" on July 19, "The Phantom Horse" on July 26 and "Panda and the Magic Serpent," a Chinese fairy tale on August 2.

character of the "Fury" type of TV. She is the main character because the story is about her. The lioness is not a foil for developing the story about her protectors, the Adamsons.

With the natives and their bush country stripped away, the movie has an unusual parallel to (of all things) the Wizard of Oz. Elsa is the self-deprecating lion, Joy Adamson (Virginia McKenna) is Dorothy and George Adamson (Bill Travers) is the Wizard. The three work together to bring out what is already in Elsa, i.e., her ability to fend for herself. They achieve success equal to any Wizard's.

There are spots where the quality of the film was compromised by carelessness. The natives, although they seem to have graduated from something more than virtual slaves to the safaris, still learn their English from Tarzan. "Bwana George, sick--come quick" the camp boy pants to M'Sahib Joy.

It's also strange that Hill would spend an extra million shooting on location in Kenya and then buy a ten year old film from Ethiopia to be able to show elephants. As they stampede, the sky alternates between blue and grey-blue as Elsa and the elephants appear on the screen.

The trials are, at least for the humans, more subtle than the forest fire, but we find at the end that everyone has undergone a change. Fighting is limited to natural fighting for existence which is neither offensive, as in "The Naked Prey" nor prudishly covered over. Life is warm and close.

Frosh prospects like campus life

By JOE MITCH
State News Sports Editor

Gary Parmentier and Art Berry got a taste of college life the past few days while going through MSU's orientation program--and both liked it.

But Parmentier and Berry will have to wait until fall before they'll find out what football--college style--is like.

The two are enrolling freshmen who have been signed to football athletic tenders by MSU.

They were to leave campus today after two and a half days of orientation--of testing, scheduling courses, shaking hands and walking.

"It was a hectic couple of days. We went to bed pretty early--we were that tired," they said. "But we liked what we saw. Orientation was very well organized," they added.

Parmentier and Berry are a couple of prized high school backs. Both are from the Detroit area--Berry from Chadsey and Parmentier from Denby--and both have an abundance of high school honors to support their bid for a successful athletic career at MSU.

"They have the opportunity to be great football players--even All-Americans," said backfield coach Danny Boisture who escorted the players around campus.

Parmentier, a 6-2, 195-pounder, was the top choice of the few backs recruited by Spartan coaches. He was an all-state and all-city selection at Denby where he led his team to the east side Public League Championship. He scored 17 touchdowns and was elected the east side's most valuable player.

Berry, a 6-1, 185-pounder, was an all-city selection at Chadsey and was named to the all-state's honorable mention list. He was chosen the west side's most valuable player.

MSU was one of several schools vying for the football talents of both. Each were contacted by most of the Big Ten schools and others like Notre Dame and Nebraska.

Parmentier had nearly 40 offers from schools around the country.

Both said they chose MSU over other schools because it offered them the best opportunity to get a good education and a chance to play for a top football school.

"Playing for a team that has a history of being strong in football was a big factor in my decision to come here," Berry said. "But that was not all. I want to study medicine and I hope I can get into the medical school here," Parmentier plans to teach when he graduates from college. He said MSU's educational facilities and student teaching program attracted him.

"But I also liked the friendly atmosphere here," he said, "and I wasn't pushed into signing or nagged by the coaches like other schools tried to do."

Parmentier and Berry indicated that MSU alumni were also instrumental in bringing them to MSU. Former Spartan players Ed Budde and Mitch Newman were from Denby. MSU's present freshman coach, Ed Rutherford, was once the football coach at Denby.

Berry will be the first player from Chadsey to play for MSU. "They're all (Michigan) Wolverines from my school," he said.

Neither Parmentier nor Berry expressed that they would have much difficulty adjusting to college life and football in their freshman year.

"Probably the biggest problem is coming from high school where you played seven or eight games to here where you can play only one or two freshman games," said Berry.

Freehan, Kaline are All-Stars

NEW YORK (UPI)--Rod Carew, the slender 21-year-old second baseman of the Minnesota Twins, was the only rookie selected Tuesday for the starting American League All-Star team on which the front-running Chicago White Sox failed to place a man.

Only four teams -- the Twins, Detroit Tigers, Baltimore Orioles and the Boston Red Sox -- were represented on the starting team for the 38th mid-summer classic, to be staged on July 11 at Anaheim (Calif.) Stadium.

Carew has been hitting over .300 for the entire season. He received 160 of a possible 243 votes in the balloting by players, managers and coaches. No one is allowed to vote for a player on his own team.

Carew was joined by teammate Harmon Killebrew at first base, third baseman Brooks Robinson of the Orioles, shortstop Rico Petrocelli of the Red Sox, catcher Bill Freehan of the Tigers and outfielders Carl Yastrzemski of the Red Sox, Al Kaline of the Tigers and Frank Robinson of the Orioles.

SURGERY NECESSARY

Injury sidelines gridder Zindell

MSU's football team suffered a blow Tuesday when it was learned that Jack Zindell, who was an occasional starter as a defensive guard in spring drills, will be lost to the team in the fall due to a knee injury.

Zindell, East Lansing Junior, tore a cartilage in his right knee while working on a summer construction job on campus. MSU team physician Dr. James Feurig said surgery is necessary and will be undertaken soon.

Zindell also is on the wrestling team, and he could be lost to the team next winter. He was expected to be the No. 1 heavy-weight or 191-pounder on the team.

Before the accident, Zindell planned to attend the U.S. Pan American team tryouts in Minneapolis, July 3-5.

New faculty travel regs ok'd

New travel regulations which somewhat liberalize reimbursement procedures to faculty members traveling for educational or University business purposes have been approved by the MSU Board of Trustees.

The new rules make all faculty travel subject to availability of department funds and the approval of the department chairman and dean of the college.

Faculty members of the rank of instructor and above may be reimbursed for transportation "at the lowest available rate for the class of transportation authorized and for subsistence to professional or scientific meetings . . . within the continental U.S. or Canada."

A section on reimbursement to faculty members below the rank of instructor, though approved by the trustees, is still being discussed, said William H. Combs, dean of university services.

This policy gives the department head and dean, rather than the dean of University Services, the responsibility for making the decision in each travel funds request, Combs said.

The office of University Services will disband with Combs' retirement Saturday.

In the case of a faculty member traveling under contract, gift or grant funds, the board of trustees, which accepts the contract, gift or grant, is responsible for its expenditure. It must be made clear in the forms that the travel is closely related to the gift, grant or contract.

Student participation in field trips is still defined as voluntary and the student must bear the cost. Staff members who transport students on field trips may be reimbursed from funds collected from the participating students.

Interviewees, lecturers and consultants coming to MSU may be reimbursed for mileage "or for the equivalent of tax-exempt transportation and normal expenses if such travel funds are available in the budgets of the respective units."

Actual and necessary expenses, "including transportation, lodging, meals, business telephone calls, limousine, taxi and local bus fares, toll road and parking charges," may be reimbursed to persons representing the University at the request of the President; the same is true for attending meetings of organizations of which MSU is a member; negotiating for gifts, grants or contracts; conferring on arrangements or programs with federal, state and local governments; and traveling on business normally required of their positions.

Approval from the president's office is no longer needed for out-of-state travel. The new rules state that the travel authorization form must be signed by the traveler, the department chairman, the assistant dean or dean and the office of the provost (the last only for overseas travel).

The provost's office has final authority of review of all faculty travel.

Home Ec. meet opens

High school girls who head Michigan's 307 Future Homemakers of America chapters will participate in a leadership workshop here today through Friday.

Out of the workshop will come a printed 1967-68 calendar of activities--local, plus regional and national--for the 12,000-member Michigan association.

The FHA program, slanted toward strengthening families and the improvement of the individual, the home, the community and world relationships, is an adjunct of homemaking education in the state's high schools.

Workshop sessions will deal with interchange of ideas, program planning and student-adviser-parent cooperation.

Leadership will be the topic of Richard K. Arnold, farm editor, MSU broadcasting, a former state president of the Future Farmers of America, and strengthening family life, the theme of the Rev. Wallace Robertson, pastor of Peoples Church, East Lansing.

roommates, sorority sisters and housemates. It is the mother-to-be who is eyed suspiciously by her off-campus landlady and who gets exhausted standing on her feet during lab period."

The university medical director said babies rarely are born in Olin because campus society has forced the mother to leave before the child is due.

An assistant to the dean of students, Laurine E. Fitzgerald, felt campus society today would reinforce rather than ostracize the pregnant coed and accept her despite her condition.

Feurig said birth control pills are not readily available to coeds who want them. Pills are prescribed to married coeds or for medical reasons only, he stated.

Miss Fitzgerald asserted that birth control pills "just complicated things."

Feurig said there are about 20 different oral contraceptive compounds and all of them will not be compatible to an individual's system. Some, he explained, will nauseate women. Others may have adverse future effects.

"We are still dealing with a relatively new thing,"

Sex education would be the answer to achieving more respect and restraint in sexual matters, Feurig said.

He said a sex education course on the college level wouldn't be feasible, but that sex education must eventually begin in the low grades.

"It will have to be conducted on a high class level. And not everyone will be able to teach it. This fact puts the burden on our colleges of education.

"Today you can tell them over and over what will happen if they continue having intercourse, but they won't listen. They already know," he said. "Everything is wonderful, until the girl gets pregnant, then sex takes on a new meaning."

Tomorrow: Sexual deviancy and venereal diseases how much is there at MSU?

Retirees

After the township and the Tri-County Regional Planning Commission coordinate rezoning details and the public participates through open hearings, the township board will take a final vote.

Slated to include five 10-story units with 100 apartments each and more than 200 single homes and duplexes, the privately financed project is sponsored by the MSU Credit Union.

In January of this year Winburn announced that the project, first formulated in October, 1965, had been formally incorporated as the MSU Services Cooperative.

Also in the plans are a health center, administration building, dining and social facilities, greenhouses and a nine-hole golf course.

"It's unique," stated Winburn. "There's nothing like it in the world for retirement facilities."

The health center and first 10-story unit are scheduled for completion by the summer of 1969. Winburn estimates that the entire project accommodating 600 to 800 families will take eight years to finish.

MSU's credit union has 8,000 members and $9 million in assets, according to Winburn. He said that the Ann Arbor Trust will handle financial arrangements.

Residents of the complex will be expected to pay a $10 membership fee and $1-per-month dues to start the project and a $1,500 rent deposit per person prior to taking occupancy of an apartment, he said. Monthly rent has not yet been determined.

Scots to meet

MSU Scots Highlanders will meet at 7 tonight in 12 Demonstration Hall for Drum and Fife Corps rehearsal and Piping of Scots dancing lessons.

The meeting is open to all area college and senior high students.
