Greg Hopkins, ASMSL chairman, said the three groups had signed commitments to give members the right to assemble in groups of two or more on university property and to call nonacademic demonstrations.

The demonstration, centered on the University of California campus, was the climax of a week-long series of events organized by the Committee on a University of California. The committee was formed in response to the university's decision to arrest a student who had led a strike at the university.

Wilson called for an end to the war in Vietnam, and urged the United States to work for a peaceful solution.

"We are at war with people who are not our enemies," Wilson said. "We are at war with a country that is struggling for independence and freedom."

Wilson also called for a reduction in U.S. military spending and for a increase in aid to the Vietnamese people.

"We must recognize that the Vietnamese people are fighting for their freedom," Wilson said. "We cannot continue to support a government that is not representative of the Vietnamese people."

A Greek sorority, Delta theta theta, broke its silence on the University of Michigan campus this week, allowing the school's administration to speak for the first time. The sorority's statement comes after several days of protest and controversy surrounding the alleged use of racial slurs by members. The sorority's president, a junior, said the group had been forced to remain silent in fear of backlash and retaliation. The statement also addressed the allegations of racial slurs and promised to work towards greater diversity and inclusion on campus. The sorority's members have been criticized for their behavior, and the university is conducting a comprehensive review of the incident. The statement was released on the University of Michigan website.

IN THE SECOND DAY of a planned week of demonstrations, theirebase and showdown are expected in the East.

In a speech, President John F. Kennedy said Friday he was convinced that the United States would not be defeated by the forces of terrorism. "We are not going to be defeated by the forces of terrorism," he said. "We are going to be defeated by the forces of freedom." The president's words came as the country looked to the upcoming election, which many see as a referendum on the administration's handling of the Vietnam War and its role in the world. The Vietnam War has been a source of great controversy and divisiveness, and the election is expected to bring a sharp focus on the issue.

Committee withdraws bid asking Romney to testify

Representative Lincoln Lloyd, D-Wash., has withdrawn his bid to have President John F. Kennedy testify before a joint session of Congress. Mr. Lloyd's request came after the Kennedy administration refused to cooperate with the committee. The president's refusal was said to have been based on his belief that the committee's request was "unreasonable and unwarranted." The president's statement came as the country looked to the upcoming election, which many see as a referendum on the administration's handling of the Vietnam War and its role in the world. The Vietnam War has been a source of great controversy and divisiveness, and the election is expected to bring a sharp focus on the issue.

Gov. Romney finally clarified his stand on open housing last Friday when he voiced his support of a state open housing statute. As many expected, he recommended that the Legislature enact this law at its fall session.

"Negotiating peaceful social change with the aid of human rights in our state," Romney said, "is no field which are as more important, so as to that I".

It is true for Romney, that a law pre-nixing discrimination in housing is so necessary.

Is the legislature overstepping its bounds?

In a rider to this year's education appropriations bill, which has apparently extended its power to include site control over university housing.

Enacting the bill has left the Legislature to deal with serious charges of overstepping the bounds of the MICHIGAN Constitution.

The lawmakers forbade state colleges and universities from starting new or establishing new residence halls unless approved by the legislature. The new law also extended control over any non-profit organization or corporation that would be affected by the new residence halls.

The percentage of out-of-state students is limited to a maximum of 20% and a deduction of $200 per student is made from the appropriation to any state that increases its out-of-state enrollment more than five percent.

Any money received by any school from any source as a payment of over-then-sumpion of programs or services is treated by the Legislature as a fine revenue, and is deducted from the appropriation for the school's program.

The proposed legislation would make it impossible for a university to operate an on-campus student union, such as the MICHIGAN Union.

Without attempting to pass judgment on an extremely complex legal question, it does appear that these regulations do not constitute an invasion of the constitutional rights of the students of this state, nor are they intended to overstep the bounds of the Constitution interpreted by the courts.

The trustees will, of course, be aware that opposition from the student body will take place in the form of a court challenge to the new legislation.

The serious implications of the legislature's apparent power grabbing, make it imperative that the courts settle this issue as soon as possible.

India today: worse than ever under British

India today is worse than ever under British rule. Under the constitutional provisions of the Indian independence Act, the Congress Party, the major political party in India, has certain responsibilities and powers. However, the party has failed to fulfill these responsibilities and its record of governance has been poor.

The Congress Party, with its leader in power, has failed to address the needs of the people. The country is still grappling with poverty, unemployment, and other social issues. The party has also been accused of corruption and nepotism.

Furthermore, the party has not taken effective measures to combat terrorism and maintain law and order. The country has witnessed several terrorist attacks and political violence.

Declaration of Life

In our society, we often hear about the need for a Declaration of Life. This is a call for individuals to consider their responsibilities and obligations towards society. It is a reminder to reflect on the impact of our actions and decisions on others.

The Declaration of Life encourages us to be mindful of our responsibilities and to act with integrity. It is a call for individuals to consider the consequences of their actions and to strive for a better world.

Gophers have QB problem

By DAVE WESCH
State News Sports Writer

Minnesota Coach Murray Warmath is placing a game called "Southpaw, Southpaw" on the quarterback job this spring.

"You've got to determine the winner of this game," Warmath said. "But the quarterback is always the last position to pick up."

The game goes something like this: the quarterback gets the ball; the quarterback drops back; the quarterback passes; the quarterback is stopped; the quarterback gets up.

After a 2:00 a.m. meeting with his coaching staff, Warmath said that the "Southpaw" game would be used to make a decision about the starting quarterback.

"We'll have to see how it goes," Warmath said. "But the quarterback is the last position to pick up, and he must be the last one to determine the winner."
East campus site for IM building

By LARRY HERING

Plans are presently being made to present this fall, with a new intramural building to be added to the outdoor facilities of the Michigan State University Intramural program.

"We plan to have a new intramural building to be built on the new area, the only thing is that it will be a bit of a problem," said the Intramural Director, Harry T. Perry.

The proposed intramural building, as one of a number of recommendations made by the student council, will be a site for outdoor activities, such as football and soccer games.

"If you want to get into a better place for these activities, it would be a good move," said Perry.

The Intramural Director was asked if he thought it would be a good move.

"I think it would be a good idea," said Perry.

VATICAN CITY — A general trend toward the assertion of women's rights is spreading to the pope's church, and many priests on the world's 3,000+ day has come in favor of the situation's religious marriage regulations for married women to be equal with those of men.

The Malta government has established a special commission to promote the rights of mixed marriages and is considering changes in the church's marriage laws. The commission met earlier this year to discuss the issue. The Malta government's actions could have implications for the church's position on mixed marriages in other countries, including the United States.

The trend toward greater acceptance of mixed marriages is a response to the growing recognition of the rights of women and the need for equality in religious marriage regulations. The Malta government's actions could signal a shift in the church's position on mixed marriages, which has been a controversial issue for many years.

On November 30, 1965, and again on September 10, 1966, the Malta government proposed changes to its marriage laws that would allow mixed marriages to be recognized as equal to those of men. The proposed changes would have allowed women to be considered legitimate heirs to property and to inherit from their husbands, and would have allowed them to enter into civil marriages and to have the same rights as men in matters of divorce and alimony.

The Malta government's proposals were met with significant opposition from the church, which has traditionally been opposed to mixed marriages. However, the Malta government's proposals were seen as a step toward greater equality in religious marriage regulations.

On December 1, 1965, the Malta government proposed changes to its marriage laws that would allow mixed marriages to be recognized as equal to those of men. The proposed changes would have allowed women to be considered legitimate heirs to property and to inherit from their husbands, and would have allowed them to enter into civil marriages and to have the same rights as men in matters of divorce and alimony.

French technicality destroys the feeling

By Jim ROOS

Although they may be skilled in operating French orchestras, they have long had a reputation for being brilliant and not being given to the "English" sense of discipline and order.

After Monday evening's appearance of the French National Orchestra, the Leonard Bernstein-led orchestra is the talk of the town.

In a program, which ranged from Ravel to Rossini, the famous ensemble brought brilliant skill and perfect discipline to the auditorium.

The first half of the program was a report of the music of Richard Strauss, the composer who died in 1949. The Strauss overture, "The Blue Hours," was a fitting prelude to the following program, Rossini's "Barber of Seville." The "Barber" was given its American premiere, sparking much comment and discussion among the audience.

Koussevitzky, the conductor, who directed the orchestra, played the French National Orchestra with skill and precision. His interpretive playing was brilliant and unforced.

The French orchestra was selected for the Beaumont Festival because of its reputation as one of the finest in the world. It is known for its excellence in performance and for its ability to present a program with complete unity and cooperation.

The conductor's interpretations were well-received, particularly in the Strauss piece. The orchestra performed with great vehemence, and the audience was thoroughly captivated.

Koussevitzky's conducting was masterful. The orchestral playing was precise and unified, and the precision of the orchestra was remarkable. The conductor's style was dynamic and forceful, and the audience was completely enthralled.

The French orchestra is a well-respected ensemble, and its appearance in Beaumont was a significant event in the city's cultural life. The orchestra's performance was a credit to the city and a testament to the skills of the conductors and orchestra members.

In conclusion, the French orchestra's appearance in Beaumont was a fantastic experience for the audience. The orchestra's skill and precision were evident, and the audience was captivated by the conductor's dynamic style and the orchestra's abilities.

The French orchestra will continue to perform at the Beaumont Festival throughout the week, and their performances are sure to delight audiences with their skill, precision, and exuberance.

Floor fight looms on spending cut

APRIL 21 — The House Appropriations Committee, in approving the Fiscal 1968 budget appeal and the President's $1.5 billion cut, has apparently erred widely, according to a new defense administration report on the House.

The increased defense program, which may lead to a 20% increase in the Federal budget, is a sign of the rising cost of the Vietnam war.

Chairman William D. Severns, D-N.Y., said that the committee's report was based on the assumption that the President's budget estimate was correct. He noted that the committee had no chance to reconcile the House and Senate budgets.

William said the committee will review the proposed $1.5 billion cut in the defense budget. The committee will also consider the effects of a smaller defense budget on the national economy.

FLYING CLUB COMES OF AGE
"Cry, cry me an apple" in the House of Representatives 75 years ago, this decade became the beginning of a new era in aviation.

The first commercial flight was made in 1914 by the Wright brothers. Since then, the aviation industry has grown to include air traffic control, air safety, and air transport.

The flying club comes of age this week as the nation marks the 75th anniversary of the first commercial flight.

Students work overseas

Arnold Moyer, professor of political science at the University of Michigan, said that the United States should encourage students to work in other countries.

"We have an obligation to provide our students with experience in other countries," Moyer said. "Students need to learn how to live and work in other cultures."

Moyer said that the program provides a valuable opportunity for students to learn about different cultures and to develop their own perspectives.

The program has been successful in helping students to develop a stronger sense of responsibility and to improve their own abilities.

CHANGES NEEDED IN FARMING FARMERS
Commercial farmers and landowners need to change their farming practices to increase the productivity of their farms, according to a new report.

The report, "The Changing Agricultural Economy," was released by the Michigan State University Agricultural Experiment Station.

The report states that farmers need to change their practices to increase the productivity of their farms. It recommends changes in the way farmers use land, water, and labor.

The report was prepared by a team of agricultural economists and was presented to the Michigan Agricultural Extension Service.

NMU firing

The Michigan Society of Professional Engineers (MSP) has condemned the firing of a faculty member at Northern Michigan University (NMU) as "a violation of the principles of academic freedom." The MSP, which represents engineers in the state of Michigan, also condemned the action of the university administration in firing a faculty member without due process, which is a violation of the principles of academic freedom. The MSP believes that academic freedom is a fundamental principle of higher education and that it is essential for the development of knowledge and the advancement of human civilization.
