Journal seeking verdict in civil rights case

Jury seeking verdict in civil rights case

MICHIGAN, Mich. — In the last day of the federal civil rights trial against the University of Michigan, jurors have yet to reach a verdict.

The trial, which began in early October, has been fraught with controversy and legal maneuvering. The University of Michigan has been accused of discrimination against African Americans in its admissions process.

The university has denied the allegations and has said that its admissions process is fair and open to all qualified applicants.

As the trial comes to a close, the outcome remains uncertain. Jurors have been deliberating for more than two weeks and have not reached a verdict.

The case, which has been closely watched by civil rights groups and the legal community, has implications for higher education and the broader civil rights movement.

The case was brought by black students who claimed they were denied admission to the university on the basis of race.

In its defense, the university argued that its admissions process is merit-based and does not take race into account.

The plaintiffs, represented by civil rights attorney John Payton, argued that the university's admissions process is discriminatory and violates the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution.

If the jury finds in favor of the plaintiffs, it could have far-reaching implications for higher education and the law.

The trial has been widely covered in the media and has attracted significant attention from civil rights groups and the legal community.

The case is being watched closely by civil rights advocates and legal experts, who hope it will set a precedent for similar cases in the future.

MHA committee asks rule change

By PHILLIS ZIMMER

MICHIGAN, Mich. — The Michigan Health Association (MHA) has asked for a change in the state's civil rights law to allow women to enter men's lounges.

The MHA, a statewide organization that represents hospital associations and medical societies, has expressed concern about the impact of the current law on women's ability to access health care.

The state's law, which prohibits women from entering men's lounges, has been a sticking point for women's health advocates.

The MHA believes that the current law is discriminatory and violates the civil rights of women.

The MHA has asked the state legislature to consider adding a provision to the law that allows women to enter men's lounges.

The MHA said that the current law discriminates against women and violates their civil rights.

The MHA's request comes as the state legislature is considering a number of bills that would address civil rights issues.

The MHA said that it would support any legislation that would address the issue of women's access to health care.

LBJ and a nation of violence

For President Johnson to ignore the mood of the nation and the opinions of a growing number of his leading thinkers would be politically disastrous.

As disenchantment grows and the war lingers on, even the forces of political history and party power might not be enough to sustain Johnson from a nation that, given any sort of adequate alternative in 1964, just might decide that "all the way with LBJ" was a little too far.

Rivals after the conflict

In an effort to take the student pulse and put it to good use, AMUC will this year conduct the eight-week term course evaluation program. Hope- fully, it will work out better than last year’s spring term attempt.

"The purpose of the evaluation program is not to recommend or condemn, but last to explore student faculty and student opinions," explained Leigh Bur- stein, ASMC director of course evaluation. "It’s not just a benefit to the students; it should make instructors more conscious of course evaluation.

Course evaluation is one of those periodic projects of student government which, when successful, can give students the potential for success. The attempt last spring came too late and was too small, Response lagged behind expectation, apparently because of lack of interest.

This year, with better planning, the questionnaires will be distributed during the eighth week of the term in the four University College actions and possibly six other courses.

The course evaluation program, culminating in the publication of an information booklet, can be one of the most worthwhile ASMC undertakings. It cannot, however, be left entirely to ASMC. The project will require student support. Only with that support can a valid sample of student opinion be obtained.

Hopefully, this term’s course evaluation program will be the beginning of an important student service. After many years of floundering in the mire, it would be refreshing to see the project reach its goal.

SNIPER’S NEST

To: Professor Burton G. Gurney
Department of Psychology
Dear Professor Gurney:
Greetings. The Skipper

A country tragically split and sick at heart over our actions abroad, as hundreds of thousands of protesters join together in Washington, D.C. Much of the American fury and antiwar will be directed at President Johnson personally.

At the same time a more subtle movement is growing across the country to prevent Johnson’s re-election in 1968.

The ability of such a movement to actually “dump Johnson” is highly doubtful. Never in history has a incumbent been denied his party’s renomination, due primarily to the sheer political power at the president’s disposal. Certainly this is true in the case of Lyndon B. Johnson.

But the widespread dissatisfaction among the opposition party should at least serve to make the President more aware of the growing discontent.

In addition to the grass- roots movement against Johnson, Theodore Sorenson has recently joined the ranks of former administratio aides opposing Johnson’s Vietnam policy. Sorenson, writing in the current issue of “Saturday Review”, calls for a new approach to Vietnam, a total cessation of bombing.

Sorenson, one of President Kennedy’s closest advisors, joins John Kenneth Galbraith and Edwin Hirsch- chauer, former diplomats in the Far East, and Roger S. Mook, former State Dept. official, as arhars of U.S. Vietnam policy.

"If you can build bridges and not walls, if you can build deals and not destroy, if you can win at meetings not with guns,-you can win at politics.

"Everything, Mr. Johnson, is a political question. If you can build bridges and not walls, if you can build deals and not destroy, if your are a statesman and not a warlike, you can win at meetings not with guns, but with your mind.

"Thank you, Mr. Johnson, but you deserve a lot of credit too. I’ve been reforming to keep us from the day."

The Senator Fulbright stance

Sandusky, not noble

Not noble words, but certainly sandusky in political life, the first important human actions of home. Senator Fulbright made his mark and took his place. Like Gato, he is building a new type of politics that will live on.

Senator Fulbright is in the mold of those old-time politicians who built the country with their brains and their hands. He has been a leader in the struggle for improved education, and a force in the fight for social justice in America.

BALLAD OF THE BOY CHILD DENNIS

To the Editor,

Miss Moyer has voiced center stage, but I would like to add a voice of reason to the political hubbub. As a student at the University of Michigan, I have been following the political scene closely. While I agree with her concerns, I feel that the situation could be handled in a more constructive manner.

Firstly, I would like to bring to your attention the recent developments in India. The Indian film industry has faced criticism for its portrayal of violence and bloodshed. As a nation, we should strive to promote a culture of peace and nonviolence. The film industry, being a powerful tool, should take responsibility for its impact on society.

Secondly, I would like to propose a solution to the issue of student protests. It is important to ensure the rights of all citizens while maintaining order. The use of force by the police only exacerbates the situation. Instead, dialogue and understanding between the authorities and the protesters should be encouraged.

In conclusion, I believe that by promoting peace and understanding, we can address the concerns of Miss Moyer and also contribute to the development of a more peaceful society. I urge all concerned parties to work together towards a common goal.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

FDA official hit on marijuana view

NEW YORK—Dr. Robert R. Wilson, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, has pulled out of consideration for the post of ambassador to West Germany. It was announced here yesterday by James C. Denvin, deputy director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The decision was a surprise in the wake of Wilson's reported candidacy.

Wilson told a conference in Manhattan, N.Y., Wednesday, that marijuana use was more dangerous than drinking and driving and that action was needed to stop the spread of illegal drugs.

"The administration is fully aware of the problem," Denvin said. "We have acted on it and will continue to act."

Wilson had said that his major preoccupation was to "get the message" to the public about the dangers of marijuana. He said that the administration was preparing to announce a "similar message" to the public on the dangers of alcohol.

"We have been talking about the dangers of alcohol," Wilson said. "We have been saying that alcohol is not a problem and that it is safe to drink alcohol. We have been saying that alcohol is a problem and that it is not safe to drink alcohol."

Carmichael book advocates social reform, not hate

NEW YORK—A recent book by civil rights leader Stokely Carmichael, "Black Power: Bobby Seale, the Black Panthers, and the New Revolutionary Action Movement," has been controversial in its views regarding social reform and the need for a "new revolutionary action movement" in the United States.

In the book, Carmichael, who is a member of the Black Panthers, argues that the traditional methods of social reform are no longer effective and that a new revolutionary action movement is necessary to bring about real change in American society.

"We must have a new revolutionary action movement," Carmichael writes. "We must not only change laws, but we must change society."

'Folk Music Mass' breeds student critics, supporters

B. PAULLETT BISEN

The effects of the Catholic Church's recent Vatican II council are evident in a growing interest in folklore among the world's young Catholics. The folklore is being practiced in many local schools and churches. In the Diocese of Lansing, Michigan, a program known as the "Folk Music Mass" has been successful.

The program has been introduced at the University of Michigan, and it is now being taught in many local schools. Students have been participating in the program for the past three years.

The program is designed to help students understand the world of folklore and to encourage them to participate in the program. The program has been successful, and students have been very interested in it.

The most important news tonight is the finding of the nation's leading laboratories in the Michigan State News, and the Michigan State News, that the atomic bomb is a highly dangerous weapon and that the United States government should immediately institute a program of research to develop an effective defense against it.

In the latest development of the bomb, scientists have found that the atomic bomb is a far more powerful weapon than had been anticipated. The bomb was tested in the desert of New Mexico, and the results have been reported to the President of the United States.

Scientists who have been studying the bomb for many months have found that the bomb is capable of destroying entire cities and that it is a threat to the safety of the world.

The President of the United States has been informed of the results of the bomb test and has ordered a full investigation of the device. He has also called for a conference of the world's leaders to discuss the implications of the bomb.

The United Nations, which has been working on a program of disarmament, has been informed of the results of the bomb test and has called for a special session of the General Assembly to discuss the implications of the bomb.
