WASHINGTON, D.C. — The United States announced Tuesday that it would not attack three military bases in the Middle East in response to Egyptian demands, but that its 140-mission list was being reviewed. The move was described as part of the United States effort to ease tensions in the region.

The announcement came hours after President Richard Nixon met with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in Jerusalem. The two leaders discussed the possibility of a cease-fire in the Middle East conflict.

While the United States had not attacked the bases before, the move was seen as a significant step in efforts to defuse the tensions between Israel and Egypt.

Ferency hints of movement to find a 'better candidate'

Ferency hinted that a national organization might soon make contact with the student council to discuss the future of the campus newspaper. He also said that a national organization might be interested in taking over the newspaper and making it a national publication.

Ferency stated that he was interested in a national publication because it would provide a forum for the students to express their opinions and ideas on a national level.

He also said that a national organization would be able to provide the newspaper with additional resources and support.

First UAW locals ratify new contract

Detroit is the battlefront in the first major struggle to test the limits of the new contract and some of the first major breakthroughs will be signs of the new era. Plants that have been closed for weeks and have been brought back to life again are now operating at full capacity. Plant operations have been intensified, and the new contract is now in effect.

The battle for the new contract began in Detroit, and it will be won or lost in Detroit. The company has a history of being strong, but it is not invincible. The union has a history of being weak, but it is not powerless. The battle is not over, but it is far from over. The union is still fighting, and the company is still fighting, but the outcome is not decided yet. The battle is still raging, and it will be remembered for years to come.

Progress reaches across the Mississippi border

For the first time in the history of Mississippi, a white man has been convicted in a major civil rights case.

Friday all white jury brought in a verdict of guilt for seven of the eighteen defendants on charges brought under a reconstruction-era civil rights law.

The fact that any convictions resulted was a landmark first step in the long road to equal justice in Mississippi.

The conclusions reached by the jury were not lost sight of the fact this trial was concerned with the murders of three civil rights workers. The federal government is a party to the prosecution, since the crimes were not committed on federal property.

But what sort of "civilized society" it in which we live is a question for a maximum of ten years, because the state wouldn't last that long.

Be careful of CIA employment

Enter no one unarmed

To the Editor:
The Central Intelligence Agency recently announced plans to conduct field interviews in several states to determine the desirability of your personal life and potential for future espionage activity. Although the Agency claims to be interested only in obtaining professional experience, CIA agents are not exactly trained in this area, and the agency's efforts are being bolstered by former enlisted personnel.

For example, a friend of mine, who is a recent graduate, was approached by the CIA. He had no Ph.D. to offer them, nor had he any published work, but he did possess a master's degree in a field related to our national security. This student was approached by the CIA because of his expertise in a field related to our national security.

We do not have their personal information in our system, but we can readily see that a common thread emerges in the lives of the CIA doctors who serve in our offices. They are primarily and consistently interested in our system's ability to conduct their work.

The CIA's argument that its operations involve a high rate of actual agencies and field operations needs to be examined more closely. The roles of the CIA in the midst of our current activities and government procedures of our own children employed in the CIA. At present the CIA is able to build the proper legal barriers to the CIA.

To the Editor:
I meant to call your attention to a recent observation about the CIA. As a faculty member of the university I have observed the phenomenon of the CIA and the students who are affected by it. I present this phenomenon in the interest of understanding the situation.

I present this phenomenon as a model of how to build a legal barrier in any society, whether it's the public or the students in the CIA.

I presented the phenomenon of the CIA and the students who are affected by it. I present this phenomenon in the interest of understanding the situation.

With the approach of midterm elections, there seems to be an upsurge in activity in the area of newsworthy programming. Certainly this marks the year. When the pro-Senate bills had not yet been introduced, the ABC evening newscast, in its feature story, would likely be the next major event in the campaign to win the Senate. For the Senate, the feature story would be a key to understanding the political climate and the key role played by the Senate. In the Senate, there are several key issues that need to be addressed. One of these is the Senate's role in passing legislation. The Senate has a significant role in the legislative process, and its actions can have a major impact on the outcome of legislation. For example, the Senate's approval of the Senate's role in passing legislation is important because it is the body that has the power to override a presidential veto. Another key issue in the Senate is the role of the Senate in confirming appointments. The Senate is the only body that has the power to confirm presidential appointments, so its actions can have a significant impact on the outcome of appointments. The Senate's role in confirming appointments is important because it is the body that has the power to confirm the appointment of key officials in the federal government, such as Cabinet officials and ambassadors. Therefore, the Senate's role in passing legislation and confirming appointments is an important issue in the Senate. In conclusion, the Senate's role in passing legislation and confirming appointments is an important issue in the Senate. The Senate has a significant role in the legislative process, and its actions can have a major impact on the outcome of legislation. Neither Notre Dame's defense nor its offense was as effective as hoped against the Michigan State team Saturday. Drubbed by 7-30, the Irish were not able to stop the Spartans from scoring at will.

But this defeat doesn't mean that the Irish defense was completely inept. In fact, the Irish defense was able to stop the Spartans in three quarters of the game. The difference was mainly in the Spartans' scoring ability in these quarters.
