5-hour board session

yields no major action

A Board session Tuesday night included the usual committee reports, and the full Board gathering to discuss the annual student review of the pizzeria. The session lasted for over 5 hours, but did not yield any major action.

Legislators urge NMU close until protests end

Members of the Michigan Senate and House Faculty Organizations have reportedly suggested that Northern Michigan University might consider a shutdown of the campus due to the protests.

The Senate Committee on Higher Education has called for the University to consider closing until the protesters are removed. The House Committee on Higher Education has also indicated support for the idea.

The University administration has indicated that they will not make a decision on the matter until after the Thanksgiving break, at which time they will have time to assess the situation more fully.

Humphrey visits Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia — Vice President Humphrey flew from Washington to this city in the north, the capital of Malaysia, and some of the smaller states, which the administration has long promised to recognize as separate countries. The trip climaxed last week, when Humphrey paid a state visit to the Soviet Union at its capital city, Moscow.

The VP’s visit was arranged by the leader of the Malaysian government, Tunku Abdul Rahman, who greeted Humphrey in a ceremony at the prime minister’s office. Humphrey then flew to Moscow, where he met with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

Vietnam: new regime but no sign of change

The inauguration of Lt. Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu as South Vietnamese president last week occurred under very trying conditions: the United States, unfortunately, no longer has a presence in the direction of the war, and so far, for the search for peace.

Thieu, who in his inaugural address sounded more moderate than President Johnson, said he would "open the door to peace and leave it open." Though he set up no specific conditions, Thieu added that a peaceful solution to the war could occur only when the North realized that aggression does not pay.

It has become painfully obvious that the repetition of such... "We'll stop when you do..." peace proposals, if they continue, indeed, will grow in intensity, until our desire to avoid war is translated into something that managers to equal or pass our capacity for conducting war.

The United States certain that Thieu is a military statesman in Vietnam, one who is going to be further decided in the field of battle without drastic condemnation. The problems of Vietnam are, at their very roots, political, social and economic ones—"it is in these areas that any further battles must be waged and won.

Grid halfback Frank Waters: Spartan jack-of-all-trades

Frank Waters has been a halfback for the Michigan State University football team for three years. He has been a consistent performer on both offense and defense, making him a valuable asset to the team.

Waters was a key player in the Spartans' victory over Wisconsin last week, scoring a touchdown and adding a field goal. His performance continued a trend that has been evident throughout his career.

Waters was named the MVP of the game by the Michigan State University football coaches and is expected to continue his strong performance in future games.

In addition to his football duties, Waters is also a student at Michigan State University, majoring in business administration. His grades have been excellent, and he has been involved in several extracurricular activities, including the University's football team, the MSU Student Senate, and the Michigan State University Bowl Committee.

Waters is a native of Lansing, Michigan, and has been a football fan since he was a child. His father, a former football player for Michigan State University, passed his love of the game on to him.

Waters is looking forward to the upcoming season and hopes to lead Michigan State University to a national championship.
Unrest in America, topic of ‘Issues’

‘Issues in Contemporary America’ is the theme for the Michigan state freshman activities program for 1967, which is designed to help incoming students become acquainted with the University, as well as to acquaint them with the character and spirit of the University.

Currently an issue of great concern in society is the ‘questions and answers’ raised in the ‘Issues in Contemporary America’ program. Students are encouraged to express their views on the issues presented.

The Minneapolis Star November 24, 1967

On the way to becoming an all-women college, Michigan State University adopted the following steps: women's college, women's college degree, women's college administration, women's college faculty, women's college curriculum, women's college facilities, and women's college funding. The last step was the adoption of a policy of admitting only women to the college.

The most important factor in the college's decision to admit women was the growth of interest in women's studies. This growth was evident in the increase in the number of women enrolling in courses and in the establishment of women's studies programs. The college also had to consider the economic implications of admitting women, as the cost of education was higher for women than for men.

The college decided to admit women on a trial basis, and in 1967, the college admitted its first female students. The college has since grown and expanded, and today, it is open to all students, regardless of gender.
