Besseley rally to celebrate anniversary of protest vigil

Gracie Power served as Deputy Mayor, London, England, to help organize the Besseley rally to celebrate the anniversary of the protest vigil. The event was held at Besseley Park, in recognition of the role played by Besseley in the anti-Vietnam War movement.

UNITED NATIONS, Nov. 17 — The United States and Britain appealed to the UN Security Council today for a 48-hour truce in the war against North Vietnam. The US delegation, led by President Richard Nixon, said it was in favor of a cease-fire proposal by the Soviet Union, and urged the council to act immediately.

"We must now take the lead in ending this senseless war," Nixon said. "We must do everything possible to end the conflict." The British delegation, led by Prime Minister Edward Heath, agreed, saying that a 48-hour truce would be a step toward a permanent solution.

The US delegation also called for an immediate withdrawal of all US troops from Vietnam, and for a peaceful settlement of the conflict.

The British delegation backed the US position, and said that a peaceful settlement was possible if the council acted quickly.

"We must act now," said Heath. "We cannot allow the conflict to continue any longer."

The council deliberated for several hours before voting 9-5 in favor of the US proposal. The US, Britain, France, and the Soviet Union all voted yes, while China, the People's Republic of South Vietnam, and two African nations voted no.

The US delegation was led by Secretary of State William Rogers, and the British delegation was led by Foreign Secretary James Callaghan.

In a statement, Rogers said, "We believe that a 48-hour truce is necessary in order to give the people of Vietnam a chance to decide their own future. This is a humanitarian gesture on the part of the United States, and we hope that other countries will join us.

"We will not allow the conflict to continue any longer," Rogers said. "We must act now to bring peace to Vietnam."

Although LSD could not be accurately traced to the U.S., it has experienced periodic use from earliest recorded times.

By the 19th century, the use of LSD-like drugs had been well documented in the United States, specifically in the context of religious rituals and spiritual experiences. These practices were often associated with Native American cultures and were considered to be sacred or spiritual in nature.

By the early 20th century, LSD-like substances were used in various contexts, including religious ceremonies, spiritual practices, and even in the treatment of mental health conditions.

By the 1950s, LSD gained significant attention and use due to its psychoactive properties. It was used in various contexts, including research, therapy, and recreational use.

By the late 20th century, LSD use became more regulated and controlled, with strict laws and regulations put in place to prevent its misuse.

Today, LSD remains a controlled substance with strict regulations and laws in place to prevent its misuse and abuse.

In summary, LSD has a long history in the United States, with its use dating back to the 19th century and continuing through the 20th century and beyond.

First Fatality
X15 Pilot Killed in Crash

Edward A. Force, base, Calif., is an X15 test pilot, one of three to die in the project's four years of operation, including one plane crashed in December, 1964. The accident occurred in the early morning of Tuesday, December 23, 1964.

Michael J. Schumacher, 37, was killed on his first flight since the X15 began flying in 1961-62 flights ago. Schumacher, on his 11th flight that day, dropped from a 15,000-foot altitude and was never seen.

Schumacher's death comes as a result of continued research flights into the upper atmosphere to gain information about the effects of high-pressure, high-performance vehicles. The X15 is designed to reach an altitude of about 30,800 feet, an altitude that is several thousand feet higher than any other piloted aircraft currently in existence.

Tax Boost Urged to Combat Inflation

In an attempt to address the high inflation rates, Congress may consider passing a bill to increase the income tax for wealthy individuals. This measure is expected to help in reducing the cost-push inflation that has been affecting the economy. The bill aims to raise revenue and stabilize the economy by ensuring that those with higher incomes contribute more to the tax base.

The proposed bill includes provisions that will affect both individuals and businesses. For individuals, it suggests an increase in the capital gains tax rate and the elimination of some deductions and exemptions. For businesses, it proposes raising the corporate income tax rate. These changes are intended to reduce the fiscal deficit and control inflationary pressures.

NAACP Will Seek Equal School Funds

New York City - The NAACP, the nation's oldest civil rights organization, has filed a lawsuit challenging the equalization of school funds in New York City. The lawsuit claims that the current system of funding is discriminatory and violates the Equal Protection Clause of the United States Constitution.

The NAACP argues that the current system of funding public schools is unconstitutional because it results in unequal educational opportunities for students based on their race and socioeconomic status. The organization seeks a court order to require the city to create a fair and equitable funding system that ensures all students have access to quality education.

VETERANS PETITION FOR PEOPLE, NOT POLICIES

The MSU Veterans Association has launched a thoughtful attempt to convey Christmas greetings to American servicemen. By signing a petition, members of the MSV community can show their support for these service¬ men as individuals.

Thomas J. Hassan, presi¬ dent of the organization, explained that the petition is not political, but an example of the expression of the support by the average college student for the men fighting in the far-away war.

Few could dispute the good intentions of the Veterans Association. Unfortunately, certain local stations, newspapers, and other media associations are constructing the signing of the document as signifying sup¬ port for the war itself. This activity may serve to de¬ ceive the many number of sign¬ ers by alienating many who oppose present policies in Vietnam. The servicemen in Viet¬ nam have a large degree suffered individually because of the general unpopular¬ ity of the war. Personal feats that ordinarily would be highly publicized and glorified in time of war, have gone largely unnoticed against a background of growing dis¬ trust.

But no matter how an indi¬ vidual feels about the war, have, or somewhere in between, he should be willing to sign the Veterans' petition of non-political sup¬ port.

Evaluation in action

MSU's course evalua¬ tion project swung into ac¬ tion last week with the initia¬ tion of a questionnaire dis¬ tribution in the four basic University College courses and eight other courses in the University. The success of the program now depends on two variables, in both of which students play a large part.

The course evaluation project, revamped after last spring's flimsy attempt, is independent of ASMSU funds, which are made up, among other sources, of student fees. The tight financial situa¬ tion of ASMSU has necessitated a tax increase, subject to approval by the student body in a referen¬ dum next Monday. If the increase is not approved, the course evaluation project may be cut. While the ASMSU will do its best, the evaluation is still a strong possibility.

Students will most direct¬ ly be affected by the system when they do, or do not, respond to the question¬ naires. Only with a large student response will the findings of the study be valid. And, thus, a student's student.

Our Readers' Minds

ASMSU budget lacks logic

Dear Greg,

Recently the point has been made that ASMSU is receiving a large amount of funds. It has been said that the tax is not fair and that the students should vote against it. They have pointed out that the ASMSU offices budget is very small, and have asked why it is necessary. It appears to me that the students are really asking for a cut in the ASMSU fees.

I think that the students are right, that the ASMSU fees are too high. However, I do not think that the students should vote against it. What the students should do is to form a committee of students, and work with the faculty on the ASMSU fees to make them more reasonable.

Sincerely yours,

Erica L. St. John

1967-68 MSU Student Government Treasurer

ASMSU Budget

The ASMSU budget is a complex document that requires careful analysis to understand its various components. The budget includes funds for a wide range of activities, including student services, media operations, and other programs. The budget is approved by the ASMSU board of directors, which consists of student representatives from each college and school at MSU.

The budget is typically reviewed by the ASMSU board of directors each semester to ensure that the funds are being used effectively and efficiently. The budget is also reviewed by the Michigan State University Board of Trustees, which oversees the financial operations of the university.

The budget is important because it provides the financial resources needed to support student activities and programs. It also helps to ensure that the university is able to provide a high-quality education to its students. Without a financial plan, the university would not be able to meet the needs of its students, and the quality of education would suffer.

Overall, the ASMSU budget is a crucial component of the university's financial planning. It is important for students to understand the budget and to participate in the budget review process to ensure that the funds are being used effectively and efficiently.

TV majors run ‘Gamut’ to learn

By STUART ROSE THAL
State News Reviewer

Midnight, students produce student cinema, whereas you get it 10 in Insta¬ matic. "Gamut" takes its name from the group's goal to explore the world of television and film, utilizing such equipment as light¬ ing, sound and camera work.

The production is an attempt to handle lighting comedy scenes, looking and editing rough-hewn techniques. The only 20 minutes are limited by students to the 30-minute running time of the production's duration. The production is divided into four sections:

1. The Saturday Night Special
2. The Radio Hour
3. The Mid-Week Comedy
4. The Thursday Night Special

The first section, "The Saturday Night Special," is a musical production with a series of three songs, "The Saturday Night Special," "The Sunday Night Special" and "The Monday Night Special." Each song is accompanied by a dance routine.

The second section, "The Radio Hour," is a collection of radio shows. The shows include: "The Saturday Night Special," "The Sunday Night Special" and "The Monday Night Special." Each show is accompanied by a dance routine.

The third section, "The Mid-Week Comedy," is a collection of comedy sketches. The sketches include: "The Saturday Night Special," "The Sunday Night Special" and "The Monday Night Special." Each sketch is accompanied by a dance routine.

The fourth section, "The Thursday Night Special," is a collection of music and dance routines. The routines include: "The Saturday Night Special," "The Sunday Night Special" and "The Monday Night Special." Each routine is accompanied by a dance routine.

In conclusion, the production is a successful attempt to explore the world of television and film using basic equipment and techniques. The production is a valuable learning experience for students interested in pursuing careers in the television and film industry.

The production was held at the Michigan State University Auditorium on November 16, 1967.

President Johnson's aides, including Gen. Earle Wheeler, have been trying for months to convince the South Vietnamese to accept a cease-fire plan that the Americans believe is the only way to bring an end to the Vietnam War. The president's aides have been told that the plan is the only way to prevent a split in the South Vietnamese government and to keep the war from spreading to neighboring countries.

Lang opposed to tax increase

Lang, a proponent of lower taxes, argued that the tax increase would not be enough to cover the government's needs. However, his position was challenged by other politicians who believed that the tax increase was necessary to fund the government's programs and services. The debate over the tax increase highlighted the differences in opinion among politicians regarding the role of government and the appropriate level of taxation.
