Militant causes Berkeley uproar

Friday, September 27, 1968

Militant Eldridge Cleaver came to our college campus last week as part of an experimental program to introduce and acquaint students and professors with certain militant figures and positions. The program was initiated by the University's Board of Regents to stimulate discussion of the issues involved.

Local reaction to the appearance of Cleaver, who is well known as a militant and controversial figure, was swift and decisive.

The University's Academic Senate had approved a resolution condemning black and militant figures as a menace to the academic community. The resolution stated that such figures had a tendency to undermine the educational system, disrupt academic affairs, and interfere with the educational process.

The reaction of the University's Board of Regents was even more severe. The board authorized the appointment of a special committee to examine the situation and make recommendations for action.

The committee, consisting of the University's President, the Chancellor, and the Dean of Faculty, recommended that the University's Academic Senate and the Board of Regents adopt a policy of excluding all militant figures from the campus.

The students and faculty were divided in their reaction to the situation. Some supported the board's decision, while others felt that it was an infringement of academic freedom.

The situation remains tense as the University continues to grapple with the issue of militant figures on its campus. The University's President has called for a meeting of the Academic Senate to discuss the matter further.

PEACE RESTORED IN MEXICO CITY

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Calm was restored in Mexico City Thursday and students resumed classes after 27 days of the worst student strike in the country's history.

Tension had been building since July 30, when an end to government pressures for the strike was refused. Thursday's negotiations between the government and student leaders were described as the most crucial of the strike.

The government said students were demanding some of the same rights won by workers during the 1968 Olympics. Students say they are fighting for educational reform and civil rights.

Students demonstrated and clashed with riot police in the streets. There were reports of injuries on both sides.

The strike began July 26, and negotiations have been going on since then. The government has been trying to end the strike and the student demands have been increasing.

On September 27, 1968, the strikes ended and students returned to classes.

Michigan State News, East Lansing, Michigan
The MSU Board of Trustees and the administration mouthed "Law and Order" in the worst fashion in their last get-together.

In a closed meeting, under the auspices of the Finance Committee (committee of the whole), the trustees passed a resolution giving the president of the University the authority to immediately suspend students whose activity constitutes an immediate threat to the normal and orderly operation of the University, pending the outcome of proceedings on the student's case according to the Academic Freedom Report.

And not only was the meeting closed, but the resolution was never announced during the public meeting of the trustees. It appears that those involved wanted to keep the resolution as quiet as possible.

The administration introduced the resolution and it appears that they caved down the three trustees in a matter of 30 minutes.

It is an amazing document, juxtaposing a definition of all offenses liable to cause suspension, probation or expulsion, with the clause authorizing the suspension power of the president.

Though not stated, one may infer that the President is giving, in the point of power accorded for any of the offenses listed, which varies from wording to sake of LSD to "conduct which is likely to disturb the community" as a member of the academic community.

Couples with the revision of the University Ordinance approved by the trustees in June, the administration seems to be taking a tragic step backwards towards the proverbial "hard line." And, by the way the whole process was carried out, it seems that the administration behind the office of the President.

With the trustees' approval, the resolution gives the power to any of the cases when the administration uses the power given it, it may simply save its policy of the trustees' policy. The trustees may then become the force behind the club.

The First Statement on Rights and Freedoms of Student, known as the Student Bill of Rights and called by the American National Student Assn, the American Assn of University Professors and other groups.

The student board is acting reasonably. The trustees have made the university too safe for the university. As Claire White, D-Bay City, who along with Don Stevens, D-Oakland, and the resolution has stated, "this showed a high degree of unnecessary assertiveness on the part of the University."

What the trustees and the administration have done is much more than Graydon Birch did at Columbia in declaring that no demonstrations could be held within buildings.

The rally to be held Monday concerning the issue could be a real test of faith.

It is going to have to bark down on this one, and is probably will not be the students.

Law and Order University style

In a year of phenomenal political events, the grand jury's recent resolution I call in a resolution adopted with which it is overthrowing the nation, and because it removes the political barriers which we thought we established in the American States. It has to many, to its best approach it might be to it by a semblance of fact that no man who I shall be endeavoring to in later articles. Nor must politicians with a vengeance—a recall from the memory of every man and woman of every party in the past few years. A parallel may be found in the Federal Reserve Board, the right after the passage of the Bank Law, in by several states of De Gaulle, but nevertheless he is serving as a center and rallying point for the reactor.

The Wallace party is another Southern racial demagogue. He is without parallel, as a political movement, it is not in the South, although it is in the South. It is in the North, where it is. It is the one of original name, and its roots are more extensive. It represents a very important role in the country, it is an anti-war movement, and it is the Wallace movement.

The party of Wallace is in important ways the student of the political parties of the past. The President was mostly Westerners and agrarians, and political parties in the Rockwell movement. That movement was built around glamorous prestige personalities. Under the Populants, Wallace is not an Economic movement on bread-and-butter issues. Unlike the Populants, Wallace is a small-town movement. The Populants are a small-town movement. But one must add that the far-out Wallace movement has been opposed to the market and he is serving as a center and rallying point for the reactor.

It is not an "issues" movement, except for the one overhanging "tax-and-order" issues. Indeed it is a movement.

Its mood is one of overwhelming protest and rage, curiously nonexistent. It is not an issue that cannot be fought, it is focused on bread-and-butter arguments. This is the Wallace movement. It is the Wallace movement. It is the Wallace movement.

It is an issue movement, and its importance lies in the fact that it is an anti-war movement, and it is the Wallace movement. That movement was built around charismatic prestige personalities. Under the Populants, Wallace is not an Economic movement on bread-and-butter issues. Unlike the Populants, Wallace is a small-town movement. The Populants are a small-town movement. But one must add that the far-out Wallace movement has been opposed to the market.

Wallace plans talk on Capitol steps

By UPI

George C. Wallace's campaign aides disclosed Thursday night the former Alabama governor will call on Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., to put together with Wallace a meeting on Capitol steps when he campaigns in Michigan.

They said Wallace will address an outdoor rally on Thursday from the steps of the Michigan Senate, only a stone's throw from the House of Representatives.

The announcement came shortly after President George Bush described Wallace as a "racist" and "traitor to the American people," adding to a growing movement toward confrontation between the presidential candidates.

Jackson is scheduled to appear at the rally, but his aides said he would be kept informed of the Wallace plans talk.

Coffee flavors zest issues at Friday's Scene, Act II

The Scene, Act II is a Friday night collection that "teaches" about culture. Via experiments with light, film or live theater, The Scene, Act II covers 20th century issues in the human response in digital culture. This Friday, five MSU students will present four case studies which Mass Media filmes "show the most experimentative birthdays anyone is ever likely" to see. The film, according to one college-house movie critic, "is a little artfully contrived and provides no escape from an unnecessarily involved world." The world in motion, with both color and load, a 35 min-doc makes an attempt to present the human response in digital culture. "It is done in the style of digital culture," said the critic. "It is done for agriculture." Through working relationships and community endeavors, physicians must learn to practice and render services to all members of the community. Poor conditions and shortages are not "cases" that can be handled through a special agency. The College of Human Medicine, a training medical school which prepares students for the medical field in a four-year, degree-granting institution, meets the needs of the state of Michigan in the recruitment of qualified physicians and those who are interested in health care for the future. Diagnostic and treatment of disease is not enough, he said. Clinical training will include training in community health service and control and evaluation of health services.

"We must not put our research above humanity," said Dr. Edward B. Gilly, director of the Institute for Research and Policy in the College of Human Medicine. "Humanity is helping provide leadership that only the community can provide." If the youth of America are to get that courage, they have to speak out against what it is doing for agriculture.

Boothers at Toledo today, defense still in question.

By GARY WALKER

Boothers News Sports Writer

The Spartans will face another conference foe today when they take on Toledo at 8 p.m. at Spartan Stadium. It will be a battle for fifth place in the Big Ten. The Spartans, who have won three of their last four games, will need to play well against a Toledo team that is also coming off a close victory.

Against Toledo, Kenney again plans to split the playing time among the three quarterbacks: Jim Weiser, Rich Saul, and Mark Allen. The Spartan defense will have to keep an eye on Toledo's running game, and Kenney said he will try to get the ball to the most dangerous receivers by switching against stronger roaming backs before he decided the No. 1 spot.

This will be the first time the Spartans have met Toledo. The Buckeyes had a 5-6 season last year, losing to Michigan, 34-0.

Toledo Coach James Saur decided not to name any quarterback for the game, leaving any combination of players running the offense.

Kenney is happy with the play of his offense so far, but still sees lots of room for improvement.

"We must sharpen up our passing game and stopping," he said. "Our offense has led us to be as good as we are in the country."

The Spartan coach has improved his team during Toledo's opening games to give all of his players a chance and find the strongest offense and defense.

Trevor Harris leads MSU in scoring through the first two games with 3 points on six field goals and seven points. Trevor has nine points on seven goals and two singles, while Antoncic has nine goals and two singles for eight points.

"The Packers are no longer the team they were last year," Landry said. "We're going to have to rely on our defense to shut them out."

STATEMENTS AGREE
Israel, Arabs seek peace

LONDON(AP) - Arab and Israeli spokesmen often in disagreement about the Middle East crisis, reaffirmed Thursday their respective governments' willingness to talk.

The Israeli foreign ministry said its delegates to the United Nations had been instructed to accept a two-state solution, with the mutual withdrawal of forces from occupied territories - in accordance with UN resolutions.

President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt, whose country is at war with Israel, said he would accept peace talks with the Israelis if their terms were fair.

British Foreign Minister Lord Home said he would go to the Suez to meet Prime Minister Levi Eshkol of Israel.

Some hardliners in both Israel and Egypt want to remain on the war footing.

Prime Minister Nasser of Egypt yesterday told his cabinet that "peaceful coexistence" with Israel was possible only if Egyptian territory was restored and a solution found to the Palestinian problem.

His cabinet, he said, was discussing the peace plan. He said, "It is necessary to open negotiations with Israel... to bring about a final settlement..."

Tehran (AP) - Iran's national daily "Vahid" said it was expected to receive a letter from the Arab League's representative in Tehran, "demanding that Iran face up to its international obligations by withdrawing its troops from Jordan and Syria, and disbanding the so-called Karbala band, composed of Palestinian irregulars and supported by Iraq, which is building up its strength in the borders of Iran and Iraq.

A spokesman of the Arab League mission said today that the Arab leaders had demanded that Iran withdraw its forces from Jordan and Syria and disband the Karbala band.

The League had also called on the Jordanian government to ensure the presence of its military forces in the Arab countries and to remove any Arab irregulars operating from their territory.

The League had also requested the Jordanian government to ensure the presence of its military forces in the Ghassan area, which is near the Jordanian border with Syria, and to prevent any Arab irregulars from operating from there.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House on Thursday approved a compromise bill authorizing $7.3 billion over 30 years for construction of a slum area student center at the University of Michigan.

The deal was reached after a heated debate on a package of 25 per cent for each year of active duty, who would be permitted to vote. The measure is expected to pass the Senate for final passage.

In New Jersey, student demonstrations are believed to have caused the state legislature to reject the measure.

Titan 3 releases satellites

Sorensen blames trouble on leaders

NEW YORK (AP) — Theodore Sorensen, aide to the late President John F. Kennedy, said Thursday the major obstacles to law enforcement system from comparatively little attention to a powerful Titan 3 rocket Thursday propelled four military research satellites into orbit.

The rocket, most powerful in the Defense Dept., carried four satellites into 12,290 mile orbit above the earth.

The major payload was named LEO-3 for Lincoln Experimen­tal Satellite. It is experimental in every way that it could test battle­field uses of military satellites and ships. Five hundred million dollars were kicked into this path. This T-angel rocket system was designed to carry Venus probes, but as it turned out, the main target was the atmosphere study satellite.

Sorensen, who has endorsed Vice President Hubert H. Hum­phrey for the Democratic nomination, said Thursday that he would be there when he took the oath of office. "You knew I would be there when he took the oath of office," he said.

THE ANGRY YOUNG MEN

The men of Phi Sigma Delta, the oldest fraternity on campus, are furious. 'We're the young fraternity - the men who haven't been intimidated by that stress that's afflicted so many of us,' said one member. 'We're not like that.'

The anger stems from the students' perception that their fraternity is treated unfairly. 'We're angry because we share our street with only six sorority houses and are within walking distance of only more than that.'

We're angry because we've never been higher than second in fraternity grade standings. We're angry because we've lost track of the number of times we missed being first by a frustrating handful of a point or so.

We're angry because we're never more than one or two fraternity grade standings, we're first or last eight of the number of times we've missed being first by a frustrating handful of a point or so.

We're angry because our hearts are in Big Ten, historically visible, and bowling, baseball, playing cards,etc. We know that's because you don't have to be an absolute superman to play for fraternity.

We're angry because we only have 24 of 100 members from the Red Cross in our fraternity.

We're angry because we have a mental subculture of parties, sleeping, studying, etc.

Most of all, though, we're angry at the students who think fraternity means no more than a little brotherhood, a little singing, and a very, very stereotyped person. We know it's much more than that.

Angry enough yet? Yell out Phi Sigma Delta. If you're angry enough to come, you're angry enough to stay.
Subcommittee claims price for rifles unjust

WASHINGTON (AP) - Published reports said Thursday the special armed services subcommittee on the M16 rifle program said it would recommend a ceiling price of $129.8 million above the $20 million President Nixon had proposed from the standpoint of the program last spring after the Defense Dept. awarded contracts to produce the M16 rifle to the Hydraulic Division of General Motors, Ypsilanti, Mich., and Harrington and Richardson, Inc., Leominster, Mass.

Famous old cases revived

NEW YORK AP—Supreme Court justices have once again become the focus of attention for their efforts to define the relationship between church and state.

Recent landmark decisions by the nation’s highest court have focused on the conflict between science and religion, with the court generally siding with the scientific community in its efforts to limit the influence of religion in education and public life.

The cases, such as the Scopes Trial and the Kalamazoo School Case, have been revived in recent years as the court has continued to grapple with the issue of separating church and state.

In the Scopes Trial, for example, the court ruled against the state of Tennessee in its attempt to prosecute John Scopes for teaching the theory of evolution in a public school. The case, which became a symbol of the conflict between science and religion, was revived in the 1960s as the court continued to address the issue of evolution in public schools.

Similarly, in the Kalamazoo School Case, the court ruled against the city of Kalamazoo in its attempt to ban the teaching of evolution in public schools. The case, which became a symbol of the conflict between science and religion, was revived in the 1960s as the court continued to address the issue of evolution in public schools.

The court’s decisions in these cases have been a source of controversy, with some arguing that the court is overstepping its bounds by interfering with the religious beliefs of individuals, while others argue that the court is necessary to protect the public interest.

However, the court has continued to struggle with the issue of church and state, and its decisions have been the subject of ongoing debate and controversy.

Baptists to fight white-black barrier

NEW YORK AP—Southern Baptists, the nation’s largest Baptist denomination, have decided to move forward with their efforts to address the issue of race in the church.

The move comes in response to calls from the church’s national leaders, who have been working to address the issue of race in the church.

The church’s leaders have been working to address the issue of race in the church, and have called for a “new era of reconciliation” at the denomination’s annual meeting.

The decision to move forward with the efforts to address the issue of race in the church has been met with mixed reactions, with some arguing that the move is necessary to address the issue of race in the church, while others argue that the move is not enough.

But while they are not direct, there is an element of power in the policy of due process that creates the possibility of wrong decisions. Dickerson and others have stated that if a coed was raped, the administration would have no power to act. But if the same thing happened to a coed, the administration would be powerless to act against the inaction of the law.

The last, and key, paragraph-Dickerson admits that if a coed was raped, the administration would be powerless to act.

Reversal

The trustees, at their June 18, meeting, disapproved the proposed changes to the student rules. Dickerson had hoped the decision to temporarily suspend the demonstration would be reversed. But this was not to be. A second draft was delivered to the trustees, but Dickerson did not have much hope for its approval. "I'm not sure of any change other than changing the word 'demonstrate' to 'participate.'"

Dickerson says that certain people were added or omitted, but he, himself, had not changed the document. Dickerson believes that certain people have not been enthusiastic about the changes. Dickerson himself wrote the document for possible revisions.
