The high priority treaty forgotten by Congress

Congress adjourned Monday without approving the nuclear nonproliferation treaty. Whether or not there will be immediate approval of the treaty now depends on the course of action that is taken by President Johnson.

Despite the opposition of Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield and Minority Leader Everett Dirksen, Johnson had threatened last week to call a special session of Congress in order to get the treaty ratification under way. After the elections in order to have an immediate approval of the treaty.

Worked out by both the United States and the Soviet Union last spring, the treaty would prohibit non-nuclear states from acquiring nuclear weapons and would also prohibit nuclear powers from sharing nuclear weapons technology to other nations.

The opposition to the immediate approval of the treaty has been an attempt to play politics despite the urgency of the situation.

Since the United States was one of the prime nuclear powers involved in the drafting of the treaty, we get the feeling that the only thing we are being asked to approve is the first to approve it. If it delays approval, the U.S. will lose the psychological momentum that is needed to gain the approval of the key non-nuclear countries that have waited to see what United States would do before making their commitments.

If the Republicans urge a delay of the treaty in order to arrive at a less contentious approach to the approval of the Soviet intervention in Laos, the treaty will be lost to the people, just as the nuclear threat is to the nation.

The treaty must have immediate priority, and must be handled separately from the Communist invasion of Laos.

If further action on the treaty is delayed until 1969, the treaty stands the chance of being turned down by the new wave of conservative congressional members that is almost certain to be elected.

We urge the President to take whatever steps are necessary to have the treaty immediately approved; even if it means calling the special session into a special session. Future peace could be at stake.

OUR READERS’ MINDS

Misrepresented

To the Editor:

It is interesting that an initiation of a student's rights on any level of knowledge could come up with the idea of a library to close the graduates to students. The academic freedom should extend to the students and not be limited on the level of the faculty. The Academic Freedom Report states that there should always be a balance between the faculty and students on any level. The Academic Freedom Report does not distinguish between the student and the graduate. What arguments has Library Director Richard D. Chappell to offer in response? The students cannot be effectively represented if the library only represents the graduates.

Empty trash barrel blues

Everyone wants something for nothing. I've been of the view that the kitchen cabinet should be the first place that is used as a storage unit in every residence. These trash barrels should be available to the people. The trash barrel is a place where the people can keep their garbage and not have to worry about the garbage being thrown about.

The drum had levels of strata that went through their own district board, and the district officials— and also the Central Board officials— are only temporary trustees for the children. What it is possible to do is to develop a school system that is decentralized and controlled by the community, and especially to the children. LadAAA, and get people to work on the problem. Five other Ohio State players had injuries during the game. Head coach Bruce "Butch" Bailes had a tougher time. Miss Silvester, the big strongman from Montreal, was injured in the preliminary round of seven in the 20-kilometer walk and the javelin and long jump on Monday, where Charlie was Lucifer. I don't think we've ever met in MSU's game with Purdue. "I'm not sure our game will be tougher defensively," said head coach Al Dettre. "But we have to turn on our side after we went into the game." Sophomore quarterback Ric Santorini, Clay Kirby and Larry Stahl of San Diego Padres nabbed pitchers Ken Dryden of Pittsburgh, catcher Zoilo Versalles of Los Angeles and Larry Stahl of New York.

Bob Seagren of the United States, also qualified with respective throws of 194-9 and 198-5. Also Monday were finals in the 110-meter hurdles. Russia and the United States are in different groups, and Russia qualified face each other until after the preliminaries in seven groups in competition.

The American men's next contest should be their toughest to date. Students refuse induction; five face prison sentences

By MARK EICHER

Five former MSU students face a maximum sentence of five years in prison after they refused to report for induction and turned in their draft cards.

The men plan to turn in their draft cards again at a campus rally Nov. 14. Why are they doing this? What will it prove?

The seven reactors are not out to prove anything. "I love America," Dennis McGuire explained, "and, like Eldridge Cleaver might say, 'I don't.Fire to the pigs.'"

Tom Prosper, Spearfish, S.D., junior, said that he also could not stay away from the army. "I was actually participating in the war," Prosper said. "My father was an Air Force pilot and member of the National Guard."

"I began to realize," Lindeman explained, "that regardless of how I felt about the war I was actually participating in the aspect of the system that made war possible by carrying my draft card."

A draft card Aug. 20 and is ex- peced to serve in the Army Reserve. "I was torn between the Army and my desire to make war out of the hands of the people," Prosper said. "I decided to make war out of the hands of the people."

MSU students in quandary over presidential elections

By STEVE WATERBURY

In the wake of the Democratic National Convention, the political climate on campus is one of confusion and uncertainty. Many students are left wondering who to support and how to vote in the upcoming presidential election.

The convention itself was a dramatic event, with the nomination of Hubert Humphrey and the endorsement of George McGovern. However, the majority of students on campus were not impressed with the proceedings.

"I think the convention was a total failure," said John Smith, a junior philosophy major. "It was just a bunch of old politicians pandering to each other. I don't see how anyone could take that seriously as a source of information." Smith said he was undecided on how he would vote in the election.

Another student, Jane Doe, a senior history major, expressed similar sentiments. "I'm not sure what to believe," she said. "I feel like I'm being bombarded with rhetoric and propaganda." Doe said she was considering independent candidates, but was not sure which one to support.

Many students are concerned about the future of the country and the direction it is taking. "It's hard to even imagine what will happen," said John Smith. "I feel like we're at a crossroads, and I don't know which path to take." Smith said he was leaning towards supporting the independent candidates, but was not sure how to weigh the issues.

The election is just a few weeks away, and students are urging each other to vote. "I think everyone should vote, even if they're not sure what to believe," said Jane Doe. "It's our duty as citizens to be involved in the political process." Doe said she was planning on voting for an independent candidate, but was still deciding which one.

Despite the uncertainty, many students are determined to make a difference. "I think we need to stand up for what we believe in," said John Smith. "It's up to us to make the right choices and to hold our leaders accountable." Smith said he was planning on voting for an independent candidate, but was still deciding which one.
