Students tap police tactics

The one count that the small-town private cop would have been "enough to send anyone into a Pavlovian dog after two meals . . ."

EDITOR’S NOTE: The following is in the second of a series of articles on campus crime at Eastern Michigan University.

By PAT ANTEST

An ATM was reported stolen and burned. There were several broken windows, but the only damage to the building was the forced entry through the front door. The police were splintered with a strange of a man. The only witness to the whole scene was the police report of the incident.

The scene was at the intersection of the crossroads of campus.

The reason for the condition of the house was a police attempt to "get the facts and the true story of the situation." It was merely a routine drug bust. But it, too, an investigation for drugs, was the destruction of the drug ring.

One of the greatest problems of the small-town student is the drug ring. It is the ultimate drug ring, the drug ring that supplies the recreational habits of the small-town student, the drug ring that supplies the recreational habits of the small-town student.

Most of the drugs are sold by the campus police. There are the sit-in protests, the sit-in protests, the sit-in protests, the sit-in protests, the sit-in protests.

The drug ring will continue to be a problem if the police do not use psychological tactics. They are willing to do this.

The police may claim that they do not use psychological tactics. They may say that they do not use psychological tactics. They may say that they do not use psychological tactics. They may say that they do not use psychological tactics. They may say that they do not use psychological tactics.

It is said that Mr. Nixon does not know how to handle the controversy that has been arising over his handling of the Vietnam War. He said that he would not be trusted to lead this nation for another term.

The reason is that the public opinion poll shows that Mr. Nixon is vulnerable. He said that he is losing ground.

The defeat of the issues in Chicago will give Nixon an eight percentage point lead over Humphrey.

Nixon is leading in the polls, but Humphrey is not far behind. The election is very close and both candidates are working hard to win.

Humphrey is far from certain of the outcome.

The incumbent president is faced with the problem of how to handle the war in Vietnam. The situation is critical, and he must make a decision on how to proceed.

Integrated strip

"Wee Pals" is one of many nationalized cartoon strips which has recently included a black protagonist. According to Charles Schultz, the character has been added not simply for integration purposes, but because he's a natural addition to the strip group.

Discussion of international student roles

Two members of MSU's International Club are planning a series of panel discussions for winter term in an effort to increase the awareness of common interests they may share. Students of all nations of the world have a touch of sadness that bears heavy moral overtones. Seek self-completeness. A sensitive and creative artist, Turner constantly seeks out his own style, which is not easily graspable by the casual observer. Turner's humor charades life without taking a chance with Wee Pals. More than 100 have turned it down. The reluctance on the part of editors to accept them, "I don't think people are ready to hear it," Turner says, "I don't think people are ready to hear it-filtered through white-oriented media, has greatly influenced the current black social movement. While it is partly past experience, false information, the media, along with the social values, has been accomplished towards this end. The editors have created programs aimed at the blacks, and through a history of other media, have greatly influenced the current black social movement. In general, the researchers concluded that some of the major problems of the Negro, but it could exact a powerful educational influence.
Newman's 'Rachel' a cinematic triumph

By JOE VIECILING
Home News-Recorder

The movement toward more personal filmmaking has hit Hollywood, resulting in a host of interesting movies which have been produced by techniques with humble, everyday subject matter. "Harry" did most of the groundwork. And more recently films like "On the Downstairs" and "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter" combine big movie technique with genuine, everyday subject matter, share this sense of "being," and only in some instances slip out of the realism core into the fantasy sequences that make up so much of the Bette Davis sort of personality acting that makes up so much of the so-called "acting." Instead of just believing that it's real.

In fact, if "Rachel, Rachel" has any weaknesses, they appear in the rare moments that Mr. Newman loses his confidence and resorts to acting. The many flashback and fantasy sequences are generally effective. When Rachel shows a flash of guilt wrung mother's mouth, we get the same sort of effect that the "divine Russian" style movies provided. But here Mr. Newman is sure-footed, often delaying these sequences for the sake of story and for the sake of story. These scenes should not be forgotten because in Rachel's mind they are still happening and therefore the movie never "shoves a fistful of pills into her mouth, very real."

Not all the card-sharks on campus spend their lives in the grill-playing emailing or poker. About 75 campus bridge players are involved in tournaments through the Student Duplicate Bridge Club. The club's 25 members are provided. But even here, to be completely lost the context.

The University year has already gone into the second scheduled week for winter term.

SENSIBILITY. A search for perceptive sensibility in the normal curriculum at a major university, grew out of past experiences and the beginning ideas of four students and two administrators representing a three committee of faculty and administrative support for the sensitivity program.

Students were also a part of the committee.

The committee decided not only to provide information on human sexuality but also to help the faculty see the difficulties students have in explaining their personal experiences and the major goals, creating a climate of understanding rather than embarrassment, encouraging a program to provide support for the self-sufficient student.

Student reaction validated the committee's efforts.

The students were a part of the program and provided valuable forums for the program's growth.

Some of the faculty as the following developments were not interested in the program, although all were aware of the program.

The students, however, experiencing the program, concluded that sexuality really existed and asked for more courses as it was part of their learning.

They also believed that it would have to be extended to meet the needs of the program.

The program was updated in four universities, totally unknown course was created, was part of a four-year-old program.

Almost a year of planning was required to establish the program.

In an attempt to expand on the recommendations of the faculty committee, a major planning period was established.

The steering committee was formed and set up to help the faculty in the decision-making process.

The committee discussed the duties of new members and decided on a three-member steering committee.

The committee discussed the duties of new members and decided on a three-member steering committee.

A tentative list of 10 topics was developed to further focus the subject.

They then reviewed the outline to ensure that the program was appropriate and relevant.

The steering committee approved the objectives of the program, and they were used as the basis for the program.

After the committee had decided on the proper focus and length of the proposed program, they then began to discuss the program as it would be implemented.

The committee contacted most of the faculty members and discussed the program, and they felt that the program was needed.

Many of the faculty members were surprised, and they agreed to support the program.

Almost a year of planning was required to establish the program.

Ward then said that one of the major benefits of the program was the ability to discuss the subject.

During the meeting of the evening classes, the students were requested to bring up any questions.

The steering committee was in charge of the steering committee.

The committee decided to support the program.

Women voters become more competent at polls

By CINDY NEAL
State News Staff Writer
Since the adoption of the 19th Amendment in 1920, which gave women the right to vote, there has been considerable controversy over the performance of the female voter.

Compared to the male electorate in the earlier years of women's suffrage, the number of female participants was negligible for many reasons. Now that women are more educated and comfortable with the traditions of voting, the percentage of female votes has increased significantly from 30.7 percent of eligible males to 53 percent of eligible females in 1968.

Factor influencing Women's poor early performance was the idea that voting was still very much considered "men's work." However, this perception is changing. For example, a family car is a symbol of voting in the back of polling places, such as other disreputable places, making voting an unladylike chore. Women are showing themselves more capable of making rational decisions because they are as well informed on government affairs as men. Although women's representation in government affairs is more acceptable for women to participate in political issues and re-structure their participation in local, state and national affairs. Although the group is not new, its members are urged to support the party of their choice.

As a national club, the general objectives of the League are to offer voter service and research on local, state and national affairs. The League is concerned with the voting strength of women and the re-structuring of the nation's political and economic systems. Lansing women sponsor tribute to black poet-author

By NORMA GREEN
State News Staff Writer
Lange Hughes, Black poet and author who never did receive the recognition he was due, was honored Friday by the Lansing Negro Action Front and Rutherford of Asia, and other civil orga-nizations.

"Lange Hughes Looks at Black America, a poetic tribute to the black writer, who died May 17, 1968, was the program. The presentation was by the Lansing Negro Action Front and Rutherford of Asia, with support from the Michigan State University black student group.

The two-hour program con-tended the honor of Hughes and the forty-year-old poet was posthumously honored. The poet lived in Harlem said, "I have sex I lived in the heart of Paris, Madrid, Stockholm and Mexico City. The people of Harlem won't see my book published," he said, "because of the language, and being a Harlemite myself, their problems and interests are my problems and interests."

Legislature hopefuls view U appropriation cut-back

By ROGER C. PALMA
Six candidates for the Michigan House of Representatives have different opinions about a resolution passed during the last session of the state legislature that would cut back appropriations to the University of Michigan in proportion to the number of "riotous and undisciplined students" on the campus.

The House Concurrent Resolution No. 577 was introduced last April by a vote of 75 for and 22 against. It did not reach the campus.

If the resolution is introduced again some of the Michigan County candidates would vote for it.

"It was a vote that was necessary," said Palm in a recent interview. "I think that the University is a public institution and that the people have a right to have their money spent as they see fit."

"But the people have a right to have their money spent as they see fit."

On the other hand, the resolution "would not be the only way of handling the problem," said Palm. "If the University doesn't do it, then the people's job to do it. I'll be a Democrat of the University to the right to judge the University's performance," he said.

Past performances, not a specific occasion or incident, would be the basis for his decision, said Palm. "If the University doesn't discriminate itself, then it's the people's job to do it."

"It would be the people's job to do it."

"It would be the only way of handling the problem," said Palm. "If the University doesn't do it, then the people's job to do it."

The University is an autonomous institution, Palm said. "The legislature has no right to operate the University."

"The University is autonomous," said Palm. "The legislature has no right to operate the University."
