Kelley blasts Agnew on conflict of interest

By TODD WILLET
State News Staff Writer

Michigan Gov. George Ryan Kelley issued a stinging statement Tuesday afternoon centering on a conflict of interest involving former Vice President Spiro Agnew's business deals with a Michigan corporation.

The editorial charged Agnew with conflict of interest on the grounds that he was a director and stockholder of a Baltimore area bank,海湾国民银行, in the state of Maryland. Agnew is now responsible for the enforcement of Michigan's ethics laws.

The Times noted that as a county executive from 1966-1968, Agnew visited Michigan nine times. However, since Agnew moved to the city of Baltimore in 1969, he was also involved in a bank deal involving a profitable approach route of a new span of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge, and as governor he approved the route.

Kelley noted that Agnew's special duties of Agnew's business deals "makes a mockery of the ethics laws, and raises disturbing questions about the state's enforcement system."

Kelley said, "As long as we live, the public would be fair and honest in the business of the government."

Informed sources said Vance had worked "frantic activity" at the president's desk, and that North Vietnam would not take advantage of the U.S. air attacks.

In Paris, U.S. ambassador William Averell Harriman and North Vietnam's Xuan Thieu held their weekly meeting without any progress. Harriman said on Tuesday that the lunar new year had started and that he had not progressed. The main point of the meeting is recognized by two for an end to the U.S. air attacks.

He said Vance, "unfettered" defense of Agnew shows his willingness to bend the law when it comes to helping his political allies. Vance attacked the Senate for not investigating the Senate's affair. Vance himself was not at the event but at those who brought the matter to public attention.

The editor also accused the Senate with conflict of interest on the grounds that he was a senator and stockholder of a Baltimore area bank,海湾国民银行, in the state of Maryland. Nomination of Bond caused excitement

BY JEFFREY ALLEN

"Julian Bond! Julian Bond! Julian Bond!" the delegates chanted after the name of this young Negro leader was nominated for the vice-presidency of the United States at this year's Democratic National Convention.

As a Michigan page in this year's Democratic gathering, I can personally testify to the excitement that was generated by the nomination of a young Negro leader for the second highest office of the land.

There were several reasons why Bond's nomination created such excitement. First of all, the nomination was indicative of the changes that are taking place in the political parties and in the electoral system. Bond represented a new generation of leaders who were not afraid to speak out against the war in Vietnam.

Bond's nomination was also indicative of the changes that were taking place in the civil rights movement. He was a leader in the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, which was one of the most influential organizations in the movement.

Bond's nomination was also indicative of the changes that were taking place in the Democratic Party. He was a leader in the New Politics, a group of young Democrats who were trying to bring a new perspective to the party.

Ironically, George Wallace this week launched his presidential campaign at a time when he is building a new following in the South. His appeal to Southern voters is based on his opposition to desegregation and his support for the states' rights movement. However, the Southern strategy of George Wallace, as well as his policies on civil rights and integration, is likely to face challenges from other candidates and political forces. The campaign promises to be highly competitive, with a potential for significant changes in the political landscape. HHH

As a product engineer, you might work in one morning and find this assignment on your desk: "Fiberglass, what does this go in cars?" Or you might be asked to determine the manufacturing feasibility of this assignment: "Could you engineer this fiberglass into a unique approach to vehicle controls?"

As a manufacturing engineer, you might find the following: "We're planning to build a bigger engine. Can you design and manufacture it?"

As a marketing man, this week's problem might be: "Parking lots are places where people bang up their cars. How can we protect our automotive investments on the continent?" Tomorrow, we might be asked to probe the demonstration into the new "V-8" Ford Mustang and Thunderbird.

As a financial analyst, today's assignment might be: "Currency in a Common Market nation is devaluing. How can we protect our investments on the continent?" Tomorrow, we might be asked to determine the marketing feasibility of a new product idea.

East Lansing voters will get a third chance Tuesday to decide whether alcohol sales will remain the same, or go up, or go down. A new referendum will be held. Whether the voters decide for or against the proposal, it will be a boost to the city's pocketbook. There are several notable exceptions in which prospective builders have bypassed East Lansing because of this ancient law. Morals contend that on towns will be running wild on the streets if the law is changed. (To someone minu­

DAYLIGHT SAVINGS

Uniform time proposed for state

By PHYLLIS ZIMBLER

A "yes" vote would put the entire state of Michigan on Daylight Saving Time for six months during the summer period.

A "no" vote would put the entire state on Eastern Standard Time in the Eastern zone all year.

The state of Michigan is the only state to observe DST, effective April 20, 1967. The exception was if the state legislature specifically exempted the state from DST.

The Michigan Legislature enacted the proposal by passing Act No. 6 of Public Acts of 1967. The entire state would be placed in the Central time zone all year during the summer period.

The decision to change time was made to take advantage of the extra daylight hours. This could reduce the number of outdoor accidents, make it easier for children to find their way home after a day at school, and make it easier for young children to go to bed early when daylight lasts until late hours.

BERKELEY, Calif., Oct. 29 - In the wake of two protests that resulted in 60 arrests, University of California students have called for a student strike.

The striking students are members of the Social Analyses Group, an experimental social research project in which Black Panther David Hilliard lectures that the University expects to rejoin the NIST in a major test of the University's commitment to non-violence. The University, which has 125 students and one professor, is expected to open on Thursday morning after the meeting of the National Student Association.

Further militant action and arrests were under attack. The violence of the protesters was quick to react to the protest.

"We want to begin," the demonstrators said, "by discussing the history of the University of California and its relationship to the Black Panther movement."

The strike is the first major protest at the University of California in the past year.

College elicits bravos on Bach, lacks in Mozart

If the Bach Collegium and Kantorei Stuttgart had ended Tuesday night's concert at exactly the right moment, they would probably have received a well deserved standing ovation. A slightly startled beginning gave way to a strong finish, but the over-enthusiastic audience would probably not have noticed. There was reverence, as though from a great, gothic cathedral. The soloist was clear, the rhythmically correct. The concertmasters would suffice for any of the world's orchestras.

In an equally thrilling violin duet, the solo voice was clear, the rhythmic emphasis a lovely, subtle, non-intrusive part of the duet. The Collegium's "Magnificat," a work whose form neatly suits Monteverdi's "Magnificat," was well done. Rilling emphasized a lovely, sustained note of the "Lacrimosa" and the last movement, dragged and desperately needed some order. It was done as an al- ternate, non-performance piece.

The Collegium and Kantorei are the best in the world, but they were quick to react to the protest. The voices saved the performance as an entire mass. The "Domine Jesu" and Hosanna were well-sharpened.

Sinfonia was well-sharpened. Monteverdi's "Magnificat," School of Bach-with-soul. There was reverence, as though from a great, gothic cathedral.

The Requiem was good at its most constant mezzoforte. The "Lacrimosa" and the last movement, dragged and desperately needed some order. It was done as an alternate, non-performance piece.

Strange: portrait of futility

Strange: portrait of futility. A novel of Albert Camus. Made in 1967, this version was produced by Dino diLaurentiis like novel. Algiers, 1939—but these are only alienation. adaptation of Albert Camus struggling with their own alienation. It was life itself. And his readers, directly confronts this in the form of a priest who visits his prison with sweating stone walls. Nothing. This movie projects the ridiculous. illusionment, and Meursault not conscious of life's absurdity. He is often asked for advice and understanding. He can no more than the priest trying to comprehend the feelings of another man—this feeling of impossibility of knowing his friend. A poignant lack in his work. But there is no lack of his admirers and his friends. She is not content of his absurdity and she loves Meursault. She wants to be happy with her lover and to make him happy by marrying. But he is honest with her and tells her that he has to leave graphic portrait of the ridiculous. Not a nihilist, however. Camus chose to clear away his own confusion and to discover the mystery of his own identity. The stranger is a highly defined plot. There is a theme, a poignancy, a style, a music, a dramatic and good programming adapted to our medium. Nothing. Students interested in broadcasting are invited to participate in this production. Floor directors, set organizers and writers are some of the positions necessary for these television productions. The best thing about these student programs, Wخشki said. "Is that the students are free to experiment. New ideas can be tried on film."

Because of the tremendous anxiety, hours, and misunderstandings concerning the draft and the selective service system, ASMSU is continuing its Draft Counseling Service that was established earlier this year.

The Warren, Mich., student counseling center has been in operation for a period of time. The center offers a wide range of services, including counseling on application in the lobby of the ASMSU offices, third floor, Student Services Building.

In the past, the Draft Counseling Department has advised students on the legal aspects of the selective service system. But the new center offers a variety of services, including counseling on application in the lobby of the ASMSU offices, third floor, Student Services Building.

Educators discuss pre-schoolers' care

The welfare of children—especially preschoolers—will be the basis of the state-wide conference on child care to be held at 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday in the Union Ballroom.

The conference, sponsored by the Michigan Association for Childhood Education, will consider a state-wide approach in care of preschool-age children and facilities available for child care throughout the state.

Alice Kellert of Whittier College in Boston will give the keynote address on the needs of children.

"She will charge the group to go into their local communities to see what the needs for child care are and to see how they are being met," Gladys Steward, past-president of the Assn. for Childhood Education, said. If the need is not being met, guidance from the association will be provided, she said.

Ben Hamilton, consultant for the Michigan Department of Education and Jeanneta Walker, Headstart training officer, will speak on the provisions for child care available on the state level.

Richard Purdy, superintendent of Kalamazoo Public Schools, and Jack Hamilton, director of public elementary education in Kalamazoo, will explain that city's program of child care.

Participants in an area program in East Lansing believe that they have experienced success in their work, he pointed out.

The conference is one of three this year held by the association. The 125 registrants file to be watched with the conference.

Student activists plagued by generation gap

The generation gap has become apparent in recent months. The gap is growing daily as the young, fed up with the status quo, demand more from society. The older generation, on the other hand, feels that the younger people are out of control and that they should not be allowed to do as they please.

Despite the protests, the older generation still holds the reins in many respects. They are the ones who have the power to make the decisions, and they are not willing to give it up easily.

The younger generation, however, is not willing to accept this. They want to make a change, to have a voice in the decisions that affect their lives. They are tired of being ignored and are ready to fight for their rights.

The gap is still widening, and it will take time for the older generation to accept the changes that the younger generation is demanding. In the meantime, the conflict will continue, and the generation gap will remain a prominent feature of our society.
