WASHINGTON (AP) - Republican Richard M. Nixon, who had just won his second try at the presidency, injected a new factor Wednesday in the expanded peace talks in Paris. He has said it can take part in expanded peace talks only as part of the North Vietnamese plan and said that he believes in "definite pensions resolution of Sept. 20 is concerned..." his administration at the outset," he declared.

Residents defeat annex proposal

The proposal to annex 165 acres of land northeast of East Lansing could not be defeated by the residents of the area. The proposal was rejected by a vote of 43 to 7. The residents of the area who wished to develop the land in the future posed for annexation by a resident of the area who wished to develop the land in the future.

Dear Mr. Don:

Business has cast itself in the role of the disturber, at least in the eyes of the people we represent and ask for a meeting with you. We don't know the answer to the question we can't answer—and this is what makes our work so difficult. What does, and what will, the future bring? The image that the corporate world portrays is one of progress, of a world that is changing and growing. The academic world is a slightly more negative image, one that has been sold to us by the business world. The question is whether business is really capable of carrying its share of the social burden.

A psychologist's association looks for new members, and finds them. Our society seems to be a collection of individuals who are willing to help each other. Yet, when we think of our social roles, we see them as being the responsibility of the individual. Yet, there seems to be a more collective responsibility that is needed. What do you think of this idea?

Sincerely,

Stan Chess

Fabrics of femme fatales

The rising hemline has finally hit the MSU campus but has been significantly curbed, yet in a more natural way than before. The short skirted was more interesting, but at least it got here.

When I first entered into University life some years ago, the most common form of femine attire was the skirt. Today, however, the skirt has been replaced by the short skirt. This change has not come about through the influence of Parisian couturiers, but has been brought about by the trend in fashion. Today, we see that the skirt is being worn in a more natural way.

The shorter skirts have a shorter hemline than before, and they are worn in a more casual way. People are beginning to realize that the skirt is not just a piece of clothing, but a symbol of femininity.

Richard Barnem, director of the G E D Program of the Department of Political Science, has stated that the changing of the hemline has been caused by the desire for a more natural look. He believes that the shorter skirt is more appropriate for today's society.

"People have come to realize that the skirt is not just a piece of clothing, but a symbol of femininity," Barnem said. "They have come to realize that the skirt is not just a piece of clothing, but a symbol of femininity."
WASHINGTON (AP) - The Democratic nominee turned control of Congress in Tuesday’s election, making Richard M. Nixon the first president since the start of the 20th century to turn off without his party’s majority in the House.

The Republicans scored a net gain of five Senate seats but lost two seats in the House and three in the Senate, keeping Democrats in control of Congress. Nixon upset Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, the incumbent. The Democratic nominee for Vice President, Sen. John F. Kennedy, went on to win the presidency.

In the House, the GOP barely retained the majority for the first time since 1955, giving it one of the few times in history when it would be in control.

The House is the likelihood that the Republicans will have a chance to take the majority in the future. The Senate, with two seats going in the other direction, has a slim majority for the Republicans.

L. B. DAYTON
WASHINGTON -- Richard Nixon's image has taken on a new look recently. The president seems to have been more relaxed, especially in understanding the ways of young people. His administration has even made some inroads into understanding student protest, especially in California.

On campus and off -- even in the White House -- Nixon's administration has been fielding new ideas from younger people, many of whom have been active in student protests. Nixon, it seems, believes that this new orientation is necessary to keep up with the times. The president's new approach is a clear indication of his interest in understanding the ways of young people.

In fact, Nixon's attitude towards student protest is a departure from that of his predecessors. Previous presidents have generally been hostile to student protest, viewing it as a threat to their authority. But Nixon appears to be more open to the idea of cooperation with student leaders, and has even expressed some support for student protest as a means of achieving his political goals.

The president's new approach is also evident in his recent policies. For example, Nixon has been more open to proposals for educational reform, and has even made some suggestions of his own. This is a clear indication of his interest in understanding the ways of young people.

In conclusion, Nixon's new approach to young people is a welcome change from the past. It shows that the president is willing to listen to the views of young people, and is interested in understanding their concerns. This is a positive development, and is likely to have a positive impact on student protest and on the future of higher education.

Biafrans work for homeland

To aid the starving masses in their homeland of Biafra is the main objective of the Biafra Inc. Association in the Americas, dentists at tonight's meeting of the organization. Members will meet the needs of children who do not require special attention or care for Tuberculosis -- this program was conceived by Dr. Henry L. Silver, the association's president.

The Biafra Inc. Association is the only organization in America that raises funds for the Biafran people. The Michigan chapter raised $3,600 to concentrate on student unrest in Latin America and specifically the University of Michigan internationals.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in 33 Union. The program will include dinners and other activities of the Biafra Inc. Association. The final event will be the appearance of the Ambassadors Highlife Band, led by Ekwe.

Two large video cameras will broadcast the musical and dance scenes from Biafra. A television camera will capture the students on the dance floor.

The Ambassadors Highlife Band, consisting of two large size congo drums, two bass drums, a twin-gong and a mahogany set, ekwe create the beat, while body gestures, unique steps and singing are also a part of the musical scene. The modern sound is akin to traditional music and complicated rhythm instruments from Biafra.

Medical societies in Colorado have approved the plan, and an advisory committee from these groups will take the issues to the Colorado legislature in January.

The pay is expected to start at $9,000 to $12,000 with increases up to $15,000.

Rescue squad serves "U"

Between the campus police and the East Lansing rescue squad, 222 and the East Lansing community are covered in case of accident.

The East Lansing Fire Dept's high and rescue truck supplements the two station wagons already assigned to the University's emergency service. The rescue truck serves the East Lansing Police, covering all fires and automobile accidents.

In 1962, the East Lansing Fire Dept purchased its own ambulance, advising the University to buy its own. The rescue squad is completely self-contained and carries enough equipment to provide medical service to any patient who needs it.

The East Lansing squad had only one ambulance car which was purchased several years ago. The University has had only one ambulance car since 1960 and also has a private ambulance service.

In 1966, however, the Lansing Fire Department bought its own ambulance car which was in use at the University. East Lansing then bought two more, including a special ambulances and a private ambulance service.

The first year of its operation, the East Lansing squad answered calls for breathing problems from heart attacks, strokes, and automobile accidents.

The rescue truck was purchased last year to serve as an ambulance and to serve in case of accident. The rescue truck has a special kit with medical supplies and is capable of providing medical service to any patient who needs it.

Brody experiences computerized dining

Brody cafeteria is the start of what could be an all-AMT computer system, according to Thomas A. Drenth, Brody manager.

Small computerized systems have been used at the end of the lunch lines to speed up lines and record the eating habits of the customers.

The computerized system records the number of customers and the items they select, and provides data on the food served and the number of customers served.

The system also provides data on the hours of operation and the number of meals served, and is used to calculate the cost of the meals.

The food cost of running the new system is initially about the same or lower, Drenth said, "but it won't take long for the system to pay for itself."

The computerized system provides a way to keep track of food served and to calculate the cost of the meals. This information is used to calculate the cost of the meals.
