Teachers' union votes to end New York City School strike

NEW YORK (AP) — A teachers' union voted to end the strike that has closed thousands of public schools, ending the longest public school workers' strike in the city's history.

The strike, which started on September 17, 1960, was called by the United Federation of Teachers (UFT) and ended after 17 days, leaving 1.1 million students out of classes for seven weeks.

The union's vote was a victory for the city's 77,000 teachers, who had been on strike since September 17, seeking to improve pay and working conditions.

The strike was the largest in New York City's history and the longest in the United States.

Profs focus on equality

Equal opportunities for all in the University of Michigan (UM) will be the focus of the next meeting of the American Student Association's (ASA) board of directors.

The senate will hear reports on UM's academic programs, equal opportunity practices, and the state of the student body's finances.

The meeting will be held on May 25, at 7 p.m., in the Student Union building.

EDITORIAL
A reassessment of election merits

Now that elections are over and those in office are safe, at least for a time, there has been a great deal of discussion lately about Michigan's method of electing members of the four major educational boards.

Several modifications are possible either in the present method or in study.

Suggestions range from election on a non-partisan basis to appointment by the governor or the legislature.

A number of alternatives lie in between. Educational officials could be nominated on a basis similar to that of judicial officers. This would involve nomination by political parties, but election on a non-partisan basis.

One point can be raised if the names are listed on a non-partisan basis: the voter will not be able to distinguish one candidate from another. The real cause of this controversy is, however, that the voter would not be able to see whom he is voting for at the polling booth and begin pulling his ballot out of the box simply because he sees a name appear under a certain ticket.

The electorate must become a well-informed one if the future of the state is to be safeguarded. If the right is to be elected and informed is one of the basic necessities of a democracy.

To ignore this responsibility is to implant legitimate doubts as to the validity of free elections.

Another method, that of election on the spring ballot, has been favored by Leon Augenstein, chairman of the Dept. of Biophysics and a member of the State Board of Ed, alone, who brought the issue to the limelight.

The process of changing the method of selection is not as complicated as it might appear.

The Michigan Constitution states that Board of Education members must be nominated by party conventions and elected at large. It would not require a constitutional amendment to have the board members nominated by political parties, but appear on the non-partisan ballots. This would at least eliminate political riding by nominees, election merely because the name appears under the general column as national party members. All that would be required to facilitate this change would be legislative action.

A change in the electoral method of trustees, regents or governors could be accomplished as easily, since nothing in the constitution specifically states the manner that controlling boards of universities must be elected.

A constitutional amendment would be required only if the elections were abolished entirely, and the officials appointed by the governor.

It is apparent that state educational officials are not often notified about the public, and that they are not discussed on a non-partisan basis, the voter will not know whom he is voting for at the polling booth and begin pulling his ballot out of the box simply because he sees a name appearing under a certain ticket.

According to the November 1966 election results, the GOP had a majority on the Board of Education. If this were on a non-partisan basis, the election would have been very close.

It is conceivable that the voters would be more informed if the issue was put before them for a vote. It would not require a constitutional amendment to have the board members nominated by political parties, but appear on the non-partisan ballots. This would at least eliminate political riding by nominees, election merely because the name appears under the general column as national party members. All that would be required to facilitate this change would be legislative action.

Students axed by riot law

Imagine that a police officer killed a man and two children in a brutal home invasion during a week breaking into homes. Would the widespread publicity and the growing desire for more police officer accountability mean that the officer would be brought to justice? Would the community rally around the victims and their families, offering support and resources to help them through their grief? Would the officer even face charges?

This is the reality of what happened in Houston, Texas. The officer was never charged, and the victims were never given the justice they deserved. The community was divided and the officer continued to receive support and protection.

This is what happened in the case of the Houston Police Department's use of deadly force in 1990. The officer was never charged, and the victims were never given the justice they deserved. The community was divided and the officer continued to receive support and protection.

Vaccine producers strive to avert possible epidemic

Washington, D.C. (AP) - A temporary shortage of vaccine against chicken pox is one of the problems complicating efforts to produce a new-looked-for Hong Kong strain of the disease.

This was reported Monday to the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association (PMA), which said millions of vaccine eggs of high quality are required to produce the vaccine needed to protect the infants, which the strain attacks more readily than in the past.

Nevertheless, the PMA said the vaccines manufacturers are working toward that goal, with the vaccine in time for a possible national emergency in the event of an outbreak. The emergency is under consideration because of the recent Hong Kong outbreak.

Smaller quantities will be ready earlier, but much of this will not be available for the civilian population sometime in the second quarter of this year.

It added: "Since normal demands for vaccine products for the various strains in July, meet the demand for the new Hong Kong strain of the vaccine has been very difficult, and it has been necessary to expand production."

Some of them were very good indeed, but surely none of them were based on T.H. White's Arthurian experience. "Camelot," indeed, but surely none of them was the future King. The book has unity, a sense of time and place as art, a pastiche fantasy, briskly moving, and an importance of dramatic unity never extends beyond the middle of several movies. At its more realistic moments, Camelot is, of course, a rather bad film. Very few films can do as much any. The continuous unrealism of the color photography and the all-black singing group are more than made up for by the more intimate songs, like "How To Handle a Woman," and the significant satisfying of the central theme. It's a sound, moving film, and the significant satisfactions of the central theme.

Lovers meeting
But the significant important value in the film is the intimate singing groups, without which the film would not have found its true function. As for Franco Nero. . . Well, he's a great actor, but his lines are not always as clear as they should be. In the final chapters, he makes a very pretty Lancelot, "pretty" being the only word for it, something on the basis of his eyes. And when he takes these chances of action and lifts them together, things really start happening. But his voice and Nero deliver their tragic depths in everything he does, which is something.

As for Mrs. Logan . . . Well, what was Logan thinking of? Probably. He makes a very pretty Lancelot, "pretty" being the only word for it, something on the basis of his eyes. And when he takes these chances of action and lifts them together, things really start happening. But his voice and Nero deliver their tragic depths in everything he does, which is something.

'S' booters bomb Tar Heels, 5-0

By PAM BOYCE

ANN ARBOR, Aug. 30 (AP) - The Michigan State Spartans showed that the "S" is for streaking in every period of a game. The Spartans went into the game with an 8-1-1 record, while the Tar Heels sported an 8-0 record.

The Spartans opened the game with a 2-0 lead in the first period, and the second period saw another 2-0 score. The Spartans won the game 5-0.

Frank Waters: back of all trades

By DON KOPRIVA

Chapel Hill, N.C.--The champion cross country team on the wet and hilly five mile course was a success. The team's performance was almost a minute behind the Spartans, as senior Roger Merchant grabbed 29th in 25:59.

The Spartan crossing the line in 47th place was Frank Waters, a backup man to All-America squads.

He was asked to get the game on. "Defensive back is definitely the word, versatility, responsibility and more things to think about at defensive back," Waters said. "If you make a mistake it can really hurt the team."

Waters would like a chance to play. "I was always hanging around locker rooms and practice fields," he said. "I learned a lot of the little fundamentals of football from the players that helped me when I first played high school ball."
