Thieu's boycott of talks expected to end soon

PARIS (AP) — South Vietnam's observ¬

reported Tuesday to be preparing for the ar¬ rival of a full-scale negotiation team within 11 days.

This reinforced a widespread expecta¬ tion in Washington and in Saigon that the government.

Thieu was the first to voice concern about the possibility of full-scale negotiations. Only Monday a group of government of¬ ficials flew to Moscow.

South Vietnamese officials stressed that Thieu had not decided on whether to end the boycott.

The news has been welcomed by some American officials and Vietnamese businessmen as a sign that the United States is in favor of a peaceful settlement.

MILITARY BASE HIT BY ENEMY ROCKETS

Johan Morin, the director of the Michigan Center for Economic Research, said the center was hit by enemy rockets on Wednesday, November 20, 1968. The attacks were the largest in any single attack and resulted in the death of 356 people. Two buildings were destroyed, and several others were damaged.

The center is a national research institution dedicated to the study of economic and social issues. It is located in downtown Lansing and is funded by the state government.

In a statement, Morin said, "The attacks were a clear violation of international law and must be condemned by the international community. We will continue our work despite this attack and will not be deterred by the efforts of those who seek to undermine our work."

We appreciate it

To the Editor:

We want to thank the University Faculty Library Committee and Richard E. Chaplin, director of the Library, for clearing us out of the graduate library located on the soon-to-be-closed east wing of the Library.

We can get those books we were unable to get out of the stacks, they won't be contaminating our Johnes, any longer! Of course, the committee had to cover up a lot of superior work on the system through "normal review procedures." Some revolutionaries might try to score us with the thought that we will be better off. None of the revolutionaries did any better. We thought we were trying to express our desire for cooperation and reform. We never thought we would make it this far.

Whatever you do, don't let it be known that this all may be in some way a violation of Art. I, Sec. 5, Par. 02 of the Academic Freedom Report. If somebody finds out, we might have to go back to back-to-back college study tables again, useful or otherwise.

So thanks again, Faculty Committee and Chaplin. We just can't tell you how much we appreciate you all.

Fence serves purpose

To the Editor:

I was wondering about this natural area and its fence.

Seated Natural Area, as the sign at the entrance states, is a nature area dedicated by the University to the advancement of knowledge of plant and animal communities. However, visitors are asked to respect the area and its fences. The fence is there to protect the area and its inhabitants. Keeping the fence closed is of the utmost importance to preserve this natural area.

In 1965, representatives of the Sigma Delta, Botany, Fisheries and Wildlife, Natural Science, Zoology, Forestry and Audubon clubs called for the erection of a fence at the entrance of this area. The proposal of creating a natural area for teaching purposes was rejected. The idea of a fence was revived and the fence at its present appearance was built in 1969.

Now, while the fence is there for the protection of the area, it also serves as a barrier to prevent unauthorized access. It is a reminder of the respect we have for nature and the environment.

Don't discourse on spiritual

To the Editor:

Reading that you perceive people who find faith in Jesus Christ as being foreign and lacking in sophistication in today's society, I can only say to you, "You people need to get off your Soapbox." I have met many sophisticated people who are most religious and I have met many unreligious people who are most unsophisticated. I suggest you learn about the people you meet rather than just assume their beliefs. I suggest you adopt the words of Jesus, "Judge not, lest ye be judged."

ATHENS, (AP) -- Greece's prominent exiled military officer, Zs Lothar Ziss, was granted a 30-day parole to return to his native country on Wednesday. Ziss, who was convicted of high treason in 1967, has been in prison in Austria since 1968. He has been denied parole seven times in the past.

The council will begin its work on the medical costs of the state employees at its next meeting in January.

It should be noted that health care has been defined as a "right of every individual, even if suffering from disease or infirmity," by the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. However, the council has rejected the idea of providing free health care to all citizens, saying that it is not possible. Instead, the council has decided to focus on providing health care to those who are most in need, such as the elderly and the poor.

In pursuit of phantom spirits

By MARK McPHERSON
State News Reviewer

The study of ghosts is not something one would expect to see as a serious scientific pursuit. Yet, it is a pursuit that is being taken seriously by some researchers and enthusiasts around the world. The Michigan State News Reviewer, Mark McPherson, discusses the efforts of Hollywood to bring the world of ghosts to the screen, and how real-life ghost hunters are trying to uncover the truth behind these mysterious entities.

Hollywood's continual efforts in the pursuit of phantom house. To the surprise of all, with a dash of "The Munsters." Hollywood's continual efforts may have always been a bit shaky, but with the average birth of "The Munsters" and "Hollywood Ghostbusters," one can only wonder if the idea of ghosts is on the rise. The question is: are ghosts real? Are they just a figment of our imagination? Or are they something more, something that we just can't explain?

McPherson notes that while the idea of ghosts may seem a bit out of place in the world of science, there are still those who believe in their existence. He cites the story of Edward O. Wilson, a biologist who has written extensively on the subject of ghosts, and his belief that there is evidence to support the existence of these entities. Wilson's work has been controversial, but it has sparked a debate among scientists and the general public about the nature of ghosts and their place in the universe.

McPherson also mentions the work of television host and ghost hunter Andrew Nicoll, who has spent years investigating the paranormal. Nicoll has co-hosted a television show called "The Ghost Hunters," and his work has helped to bring the world of ghosts to the public eye.

While some may dismiss the idea of ghosts as mere superstition, others see them as a reminder of the mysteries that surround us. And as the study of ghosts continues, it is likely that we will learn more about these entities and their place in the world around us.

This story is part of the Michigan State News Reviewer's ongoing coverage of the paranormal. If you are interested in learning more, be sure to check out his other articles on the topic.

Elementary, my dear ghost!

By LEE FARROW
Michigan State University Student

The study of ghosts may seem a bit out of place in the world of science, but for some, it is a pursuit worth exploring. The Michigan State University Student, Lee Farrow, explores the world of ghosts and how they are studied.

One of the most famous ghost hunters of all time is Edith Wharton, a writer and ghost hunter who spent years exploring the world of ghosts. Wharton's work has been controversial, but it has helped to bring the world of ghosts to the public eye.

Another famous ghost hunter is the late John Zaffis, a paranormal investigator who spent years studying ghosts and other paranormal phenomena. Zaffis's work has been influential, and his book "The Haunting of America" is considered a classic in the field.

While the study of ghosts may seem a bit out of place in the world of science, there are still those who believe in their existence. And as the study of ghosts continues, it is likely that we will learn more about these entities and their place in the world around us.

Committee has scheduled an appeal to Michigan State University's students on Monday to determine whether, as concluded by the Warren Committee, President John F. Ken-

Hall, basement of the M.F. W.

People interested are urged to join the group. The meeting will begin at 7:00 p.m. and end at 9:30 p.m. for a discussion of democratic freedom and the U.S. Constitution.

The chapter plans to conclude its activities with a meeting on the fifth memorial of the assassination.

Anti-war campaign fails to disrupt military

WASHINGTON (AP) — A campaign by students to disrupt the Army and draw large numbers of servicemen out of the service began Tuesday, according to Army officials who said they had no knowledge of it. Army officials said Tuesday that a campaign called "National GI Week" just before election day was "not a success". They claimed efforts to get Army officials said Tuesday that efforts to get servicemen to stay in the Army and raise the morale of the troops were not successful. Army officials also said that the anti-war movement had not yet been successful in attracting large numbers of GIs to desert the Army, and that local authorities have taken steps to prevent any activity that could disrupt the morale of the troops.

In one recent week, Army officials said that about 300 servicemen in the Army were disciplined for desertion or other misconduct. Last summer, the Army had disciplined about 1,000 servicemen for similar offenses. In some cases, the officials said, servicemen have been asked to leave the Army because they were not so serious. The officials said that the anti-war movement had not yet been successful in attracting large numbers of GIs to desert the Army, and that local authorities have taken steps to prevent any activity that could disrupt the morale of the troops.

The anti-war movement has been gaining strength in recent months, and local authorities have taken steps to prevent any activity that could disrupt the morale of the troops. Some anti-war groups have been experimenting with various tactics, including the distribution of leaflets and the organization of demonstrations. Some of these groups have been successful in attracting large numbers of GIs to desert the Army, but others have been unsuccessful.

The enjoyment of achieving a_ incentive in wig purchasing.

The wig seller's job is to guide the buyer's measurements. Before buying a wig, one should have her head measured to get a near perfect fit. The advantage with this method is that the wig will fit the head exactly. But the big disadvantage is that the buyer will have to keep the wig ends to be cut and styled to the exact measurements. The wig remains in a short time. A wiglet is a wig that is used to have a wig made to the exact size in a short time.

The edges tend to touch the face, so it's best to wear the wig casually, long and loose. Tie it back, curl it, combine it with other hairpieces for dramatic effect.

Roundabout on problems

The problem of the relationship between the professor and the student has been a constant one. As the number of students has increased, so has the number of problems that arise. The MHA proposed policy for individual students has created a great deal of controversy. The main concern of the policy is to ensure that students are treated fairly and that their rights are respected.

He did point out, however, that the policy should be implemented in a way that is sensitive to the needs of both parties. The policy must be flexible enough to accommodate different situations and that it should not be too rigid. He also emphasized the importance of communication between the professor and the student, as this is key to resolving any issues that may arise.

The final discussion period revolved around the theme of the day and the state appropriations mechanisms. When asked if a professor should be able to refuse to speak on the entire curriculum, the respondent said that it would depend on the individual professor and their beliefs. He pointed out that professors do have the right to voice their opinions on the curriculum, but they should also be aware of the impact their words may have.

Objectives for the new policy include allowing professors to speak freely, ensuring that students are treated fairly, and providing a mechanism to resolve any issues that may arise. The MHA will continue to monitor the implementation of the policy and will make any necessary adjustments to ensure its success.

Tenure

The Student Advisory Committee at the University has been working on the issue of tenure for some time. The committee has been trying to establish a clear set of criteria for determining tenure eligibility. The goal is to provide a fair and transparent process for all faculty members.

The University administration has been hesitant to make any changes to the current tenure system. They have stated that the system is already well-established and that any changes could lead to confusion and dissatisfaction among faculty.

New art group established

There are now over 12 art majors at the University who are working on a new art project. The project is called "Artists in Residence," and it involves artists working with students on art projects.

The art students have been working closely with the artists, and the projects have been gaining popularity. The students have been able to learn a lot from the artists, and the artists have been impressed with the students' skills.

Germany attempts to remedy financial crisis

The federal government announced on Friday night that West Germany is moving to bolster its currency reserves, reflecting concern about expectations of an impending financial crisis.

East Germany’s central bank is buying dollars to stem a runoff into West Germany’s mark, according to sources in Bonn.

The West Germany’s finance minister, Karl Carstens, announced that his government is placing a “high premium” on maintaining the mark’s value.

The move is part of a broader strategy to shore up the mark, which has been under pressure due to speculative buying by speculators in the foreign exchange market.

Carstens said that the government is taking action to mitigate the impact of foreign speculation on the mark.

The move comes after a weekend meeting of G-7 finance ministers in Washington, where concerns were raised about the stability of the global financial system.

West Germany’s central bank is expected to release a statement on its actions in the foreign exchange market.

The mark’s value has been under pressure due to concerns about the economic outlook and the impact of speculative buying on the currency.

The government’s decision is seen as a step towards stabilizing the mark and maintaining confidence in the currency.

The move is expected to be welcomed by markets, which have been closely watching developments in the foreign exchange market.

The government’s actions are seen as a sign of determination to maintain the mark’s value and protect the stability of the financial system.

The statement from the G-7 meeting emphasized the importance of maintaining market stability and the need for coordinated action by economies to address speculative buying.

The move is also seen as a sign of the ongoing challenges faced by the global economy and the need for continued vigilance in managing currency markets.
