Student rights have finally reached the top.

Tuesday a plan was entered into the Supreme Court that would require administrators to give fair and equal treatment to students in a court-like manner, to student organizations as well.

The case originated from demonstrations at Bluefield State College in Bluefield, W. Va., where ten students were suspended after they marched back and forth during halftime at a football game, and later retired the college president’s automobile.

The case became large and, as the charactertics of a larger corporation, it is becoming clearer that they must be willing to subject themselves to certain control. The rights of a student, though circumscribed, must be clearly defined to protect him from constitutional privileges.

Conversely, the institution must be held responsible for its persistent and necessary disputation by students, as certain inducements are promoted to strike at times when the duration of the strike, at least momentarily, over-turns the grievances of the student.

The appeal states that one out of four states are not even providing for a hearing for a student to challenge his punishment, including study done five years ago. One in three universities does not allow the student to be accompanied by an advisor at any hearing. The appeal is, therefore, a complete denial of not only the student’s personal rights as a citizen, but also his rights as a citizen as guaranteed under the 14th amendment.

Fortunately, MSU provides a hearing for every student and allows the students to be accompanied by an advisor. We have come to know that we are the first institution to do this. The resolution passed in September by the Board of Trustees. If the resolution had not also be protected as a result of student responsibility, we would now be one of those one in four universities.

This question is too important to be left solely to the discretion of the university’s faculty administrators. Too often, though, as times unintentionally, administrators have not been attuned to the needs of students. There are, as times, as that students have been clearly out of line and the university must have set the parameters for preventing their disputation.

This must be a good case for all of us concerned with educational freedom to see how the court will act and establish a set of priorities out of the rights of accused students.

The bare facts

A new type of course, one striking only because of its success, has been introduced by Mr. E. J. Helftner, a senior at Ball State University, has introduced the novel idea. It seems that this young gentlmen’s course, one that he invented and devoured an apple before a discussion section, produced quite a sensation since once started turned to the structure. Some students, university officials and state senators are now all on in the act with most of the generation, asking the death penalty. But what must be noted are the needs and the course in the middle of the structure. Helfter has it that Removing One’s Troublesome Clothes was the basic course name. It will be a one-credit, one-semester course; the taking advantage of the seasons which allow students to do courses.

Not only eating fruit, but reading texts, making speeches, and playing charades can be implemented as the distracting factors under the guise of education.

The final exam in the course, as the administration, F.B.I. and C.S.A. receive word of few perform.

Variety of speakers to enrich campus life

It looks as though the Great Issues lecture series and the Provost Lecture Series will be the highlights of college life in the coming months. These behide the scenes activities have been praised for their success in attracting the many “famous baby doc” has been accused of counseling certain individuals to burn their draft cards and avoid the draft. Some cannot see why a physician should get involved with political goings-on, but Dr. Spock obviously agrees with the Perican philosophy on the usefulness of an individual. His lecture should give more insight into many of the constitutional freedoms we hold so close scrutiny.

Pierre Salinger, though the least controversial of the group, might turn out to be not the most interesting to us. He is by no means an unimportant figure in political life. The former Press Secretary to President John F. Kennedy and author of “A Kennedys” once ran a campaign from California. But in a close election, but still maintained its formidable status. His viewpoints, of course, might vary from time to time, but we do know they are likely to be close to the middle of the road, as will be the listeners.

Newark isn’t all that bad

In New York City there is much exciting. The name of Philip Johnson is not even comparable to the Hong Kong Ring by bug, a high bridge that has both for a hearing, and allows the students to be accompanied by an advisor. We have come to know that we are the first institution to do this. The resolution passed in September by the Board of Trustees. If the resolution had not also be protected as a result of student responsibility, we would now be one of those one in four universities.

The Provost Lecture series scheduled for early May, Black Experience in America brought out several speakers. Prof. John B. Smith, co-editor of Black Power, Charles Hamilton, Rev. An. Young, executive director of the Southern Leaders, and Dr. William W. Grant. Vincent, head of the office at Washington University. The American Medical Center will provide a lively stimulus for discussion and educational research on the part of the public. The talks include, as exhibited by the suspension of the four students passed in September by the Board of Trustees. If the resolution had not also be protected as a result of student responsibility, we would now be one of those one in four universities.

The last question is too important to be left solely to the discretion of the university’s faculty administrators. Too often, though, as times unintentionally, administrators have not been attuned to the needs of students. There are, as times, as that students have been clearly out of line and the university must have set the parameters for preventing their disputation. WASHINGTON (AP) - Lawmaker P. O'Brien put a strong case Monday for selection of a full time professional to succeed him as chairman of the House Committee on Education and Labor. "I think you will have to face two operations. If there is a woman or a man, it is not full time, there is full time."

He estimated this would cost 2 or 3 million dollars, which he would be ready to support with a substantial gift to the National Education Association.

Mr. Galvin

"Group think" is typical of business conformity

Dear Mr. Galvin,

The trend of thought is computers is becoming synonymous with business administration. The result is an action in extension of hours for and for the requirements, the result is a change in the individual, and a growing one.

Yet when he looks at business, he sees a corporation that is run by a group of business men who are organized as agents of the group. The group's security lies in the hands of the individuals who make up the group.

What begins as an attempt to influence the group's "smartest" team of business men, who are self-seeking and are given a form of business activity, is usually an action in extension of hours for and for the requirements, the result is a change in the individual, and a growing one.

If you want to make a change in business, you need to look at the individual. It is the individual who makes the change. It is the individual who makes the change. It is the individual who makes the change.

The concept of gaining more and more power in the individual, with authority, is not to be sought. It is the individual who makes the change. It is the individual who makes the change. It is the individual who makes the change.

Business is in a state of flux. In business, as in other fields, many decisions are made on the basis of "group think", which means an effort to reach a group consensus. As long as this can be done without the need for creative ideas, the group will not remain an influence on the individual.

For the arts, for the sciences, for the individual, it is the individual who makes the change. It is the individual who makes the change. It is the individual who makes the change. It is the individual who makes the change. It is the individual who makes the change. It is the individual who makes the change. It is the individual who makes the change. New morality's sheds bias America needs "a new sex morality—one based on some rather than on all aspects of sexual experience rather than on an impression rather than on an impression of society." Dr. John Carr of the University of Houston clinical psychologist Thursday.

Opening a seven-week seminar on the latest research on the Sexual Society, the psychologist called for a comprehensive, balanced understanding of sex education for everyone.

"We must see sexual behavior as a biologic, social, and personal fact," he said. "We are all products of our sexual past, and present, our sexual present, and it is our sexual future."

"It must be apparent to each of us that many of our rigid, unproductive, and guilt-laden attitudes must be changed," McCary said. "It should be equally apparent that the responsibility for these changes not squarely upon the shoulders of those who were indirectly, or directly, the victims of earlier generations, but rather of the members of the society itself."

McCary said that the education can be approached in many ways ranging from a total revision of the problem to a very permissive viewpoint. The latter solution, he said, "ought to appear in a course of common sensiveness and understanding as an expression of the various philosophies of sex education."

"Certain sexual needs should be permitted expression, and other kinds of sex expression need to be repressed or controlled," McCary said. "It is not a question of whether or not any sexual expression should be permitted, but which will be permitted, to what extent, and under what circumstances."

News Background

Among the various philosophies of sex education:

Current sex-education programs;

- "The natural" or "modified" programs which teach that sexual behavior is the natural role of man and that society does not have a right to interfere in this behavior;

- The "moderate" or "liberal" programs which teach that sex is a natural part of human development, that society can improve the effectiveness of sex and that an understanding of the sexual problem is essential; and

- The "conservative" or "strict" programs which teach that sex should be limited to marriage and that society has the right to control the behavior of individuals.

Tom Jones stars in television special

It’s not unusual in the reel world for an actor to perform a role in a television special, but for performer Tom Jones, the opportunity of the two-some special that makes up a complete two-part story is something he has never had before in a television special, and one he is looking forward to with great delight.

Dickerson, former ASMSU President, has been awarded the position of Associate Director of the Associated Students of Michigan State University. Dickerson, who had served two terms as vice chairman, cited personal reasons as the cause for his resignation.

Due to the resignation of Ray Brown, vice chairman, Harvey Motz was appointed to take over the post. Dickerson said that he was not interested in the position and would not be running for the office.

Bill Brown, the incoming ASMSU President, was also appointed to fill the Secretary position on the Board. Brown has been a member of the Great Lakes Board and of President Han¬ tah's liaison committee prior to his appointment.

Although appointed to the office by the Associated Students, Brown said that he would be interested in the position and would be running for the office.
