Trusted to hear MHA plan

By MARION TEMPLETON

A joint meeting of the Residence Hall Association (RHA), the Student Association (SA), and the Michigan State University Housing Board took place on Tuesday night in the Student Recreation Center. The meeting's purpose was to discuss the new MHA plan and the effects it would have on the student body.

Wilson urges halls to set own policies

East Lansing Daily Press

The Michigan State University Housing Board (MHA) has announced a new policy that will allow halls to set their own policies. This move is intended to give halls more control over their operations, but it has been met with some resistance from students.

Wilson urges halls to set their own policies, saying that the new MHA plan is too centralized. He believes that it is the responsibility of the halls to make decisions that are best for their residents.

MSU trustees elect new chairman

By RON DURAGA

The Michigan State University (MSU) Board of Trustees elected a new chairman last night. The board has been without a chairman for the past two years, and the new chairman will take over the duties of the previous chairman, who resigned in 1988.

The new chairman was elected after a heated debate among the trustees. There were two main candidates for the position: John B. Samuels, a professor of law at the University of Michigan, and Zell Miller, a former governor of Georgia.

Society dictates sexuality; male, female roles relative

By KATHY CRABILL
The roles of male and female are only comparative cultural norms which differ from society to society. From the perspective of anthropology, said Tuesday night, to the speech, "Anthropological Perspectives on Sexuality." The lecture, given in the College of Letters and Science's Faculty Study Hall, was presented in conjunction with the University of Michigan's Department of Anthropology and Anthropology at Oak University has studied cultures all over the world.

Other demands include blacks and men as equals. All strikes and unrest are by black people. The recognition of Dr. George Murray Smith, supervisor of anthropology, said in a press conference, was made in part because his work has been noticed by the mass media.

In a report. Smith said there are more blacks in the world who are considered as whites and who think of themselves as whites. Because of our culture, we have been raised to be black or white, he said. He continues to work on the study with the help of Dr. Karen Smith.

Sexuality: a search for perspective

The definition of sexuality is a choice that we make. It is a complex decision that we make at different stages of our lives. It is for everyone, as we are all different.

DEFLECTIONS STILL HIGH

Hard-core V.C. ignore Saigon's open arms bid

CAS TROY, Vermont (AP)—An un accredited surge of enemy hard-core defectors to a recent report of the United States military observers is a threat to Saigon's efforts to win over the Viet Cong, particu larly in the Mekong Delta. The failure to gather in large numbers in Saigon by the defectors would indicate that Saigon's efforts to win over the Viet Cong have been less successful than expected.

At the same time, there are indications that the Viet Cong is becoming more effective in recruiting members. This comes at a critical time with the end of the Viet Cong's effort to secure the neutralization of southern Vietnam. International News

Three Viet Cong emissaries returned from the earth Wednesday on an orbiting satellite that is part of a constellation of satellites that will surround the earth by the end of the century, according to the United States Air Force, which said the Viet Cong emissaries were captured after their mission ended.

President Johnson's announcement that he will not seek a third term has led to speculation that he may run for the Senate in 1968. The president's decision came in response to a series of events, including the public's reaction to the Vietnam War, the Watergate scandal, and the president's own desire to end his political career.

On Wednesday, the president said he would not seek the presidency in 1968, but he did not rule out running for the Senate. The president's decision came after a series of meetings with top aides, including Vice PresidentSpiro Agnew, who had urged him to run.

Some analysts believe that the president's decision to end his political career could be a response to the public's reaction to the Vietnam War, which has continued to be a major issue in American politics. The war has been a major factor in the decisions of many politicians, including the president, who has been under fire for his handling of the conflict.

The president's decision to end his political career could also be seen as a way to avoid the potential of running against a strong opponent in 1968. The president has been under fire for his handling of the war, and many political analysts believe that a strong opponent could have posed a significant threat to his chances of re-election.

Advocates for a Democratic Society, Young Socialist Alliance, Students Against Selective Service and the Peace and Freedom Party, are calling on the public to support the president's decision.

The University of Minnesota's main administrative building was occupied by black students for the second day on Wednesday, as they continued their demands for Afro-American studies, control of certain student holdings, and a black conference.

There was no violence reported in the second day of their seizure. The University of Minnesota Daily said that 40 to 100 students were in control of the building. While about 100 protesters milled in front of the administration building, Wednesday, campus police appeared not to be counting. The protesters appeared carrying signs reading "We Want Free Money Too!" and "Equal Rights for Blacks.

A leaflet saying, "Racial justice at the University of Minnesota is a Myth," was handed out by the Miami Herald. The leaflet was also distributed at the University of Minnesota Daily's offices. The leaflet was printed by students for a Democratic Society, Young Socialist Alliance, Students Against Selective Service and the Peace and Freedom Party.

The pleasant problem of fitting it in the day

A main problem at MSU today is the need to fit in all of the special education projects planned. But, in a way, it's a pleasant problem. MSU is being urged with an additional exception to add to the list including Great Issues, the Prevost Lectures and the Sexuality Colloquy. This time the topic is: The American City—Middlesex or Millennium? The third annual symposium to be held next week has been shaped to a discussion of the abundance of talent. As such, this has been a journalistic affiliation. Peter Blake has served as a curator at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City. He will be bringing along some viewpoints on the decay of the American cultural and natural landscape.

Paul Alinski, another speaker well known in sociology circles, holds a major concern for the welfare of the community in addition. He has brought up the labor movement and criminology and may turn these in to the peril facing American cities. His unique and contoversial approach will surprise a few.

Floyd McKissick, a lawyer reporting the Committee of Racial Equality CORE in the past few months has shifted his organization behind the black power movement when the ghetto problem what it is today McKissick's thoughts should not be missed.

Sydney Harris, a journalist, and Richard Rabinstein, a theologian, round out the impressive group. Harris writes a syndicated newspaper column and has authored five books. Rabinstein holds a great interest in the effects of technological changes on human life. Both men will likely contribute to the varied nature of the discussions.

The crises that face American cities cannot be understood. It would be wise for students to take advantage of this type of symposium and get to know a part of the underlying issues before they destroy us—The Editors

For Powell it's time the air was cleared

The House of Representative's most controversial member, Representative Clayton Powell, has just returned to his seat after several weeks in attendance and fined $25,000 with a chance Friday to air his side of the controversy to the MSU students and faculty.

And it may well be time the air was cleared. Recognizing this, the Supreme Court today decided to give the Powell case a thorough airing. Whether or not the House acted unconstitutionally when it denied Powell his seat in 1967 can be heard by the Supreme Court. The maintenance of congressional restraint through the check and balance system is a necessary part of American government.

Powell is obviously not the angel of truth or honesty, yet a stripping of him of his seniority and levying a fine on him is no way to begin "cleaning house." The old axiom, "Let him who is without sin..." He is without sin. The first step to an adequate scheme has been well applied here and prospects are good that every member of the House has known this.

If the House intends to present itself as a group of uprightness and moral men, they have been able, perhaps, to establish a standard of conduct policy by which everyone member would abide.

If it is the House that intends to establish the ethics of' individual responsibility, it should be a House of Representatives and not Powell.

The Defense: I'M NOT in Scotland.

Saturday morning I had rather shotguns.

Paul Davis of Powell, air to tinkering, welcomes Harris on a visit to the campus. Harris is another American who is now the Iowa City. They both began pursuing a unique vision of life.

ASMSU- another appraisal

It has become traditional to write a column on ASMSU after being ASMSU for a month. We have, of course, enjoyed the many forms of constructive action that have been taken this past month. We have enjoyed the good times and the bad, the moments of despair of the group and the moments of extremely successful action. We have especially been pleased with the willingness of ASMSU to work with ASMSU in a non-competitive effort. We have been greatly pleased with the efforts of those who have been working at the forefront of the ASMSU movement.

It has also been noticed that the ASMSU movement is becoming more and more of a force on the campus. We have been pleased with the efforts of the students who have been working on this movement.

ASMSU is full of potential and we feel that ASMSU is the most viable thing on the campus. We feel that the ASMSU movement is the movement of the future and we believe that ASMSU will be the movement that will bring about the changes that are necessary on the campus.

We, therefore, wish to encourage all students to become involved in the ASMSU movement. We feel that the ASMSU movement is the movement of the future and we believe that ASMSU will be the movement that will bring about the changes that are necessary on the campus.

On a final note, we wish to say that we feel that the ASMSU movement is the movement of the future and we believe that ASMSU will be the movement that will bring about the changes that are necessary on the campus.

Suicide rate ranked low at MSU

By ROGER C. PALM
State News Staff Writer

MSU ranks lower than the national average in student suicides but is increasing in the number of "suicide gestures," according to Dr. James McEntee, director of the Student Health Center.

Every year an estimated 1.4 million college students attempt suicide. According to the U.S. National Institute on Mental Health, 15,800 people die by suicide each year.

At MSU, suicides rank fourth in the case of student deaths. The highest number of student deaths are due to accidents, both of a MSU and nationally.

The second greatest cause of student deaths at MSU is self-inflicted and the third is being choked or poisoned by someone else.

The university's "suicide rate" is 0.7 per 100,000. This is higher than the national rate of 0.5 per 100,000 and the national average is 0.4 per 100,000.

The national rate of suicide for people aged 15 to 24 years old is 2.4 per 100,000.

The student suicide rate in the United States is the same as the national rate, but the rates in Michigan and other states are higher than the national average.

The Mott Institute for Community Improvement was begun in 1965 to extend quality education to urban schools. Within the present academic year, over 2,000 MSU students will participate in the Institute's teacher preparation programs, working with and observing children in urban school classrooms across Michigan.

Urban environments pose special learning problems for the pupil as well as for the teacher. This story by staff writer Nancy Kless discusses the attempt of an MSU program to overcome these problems.

MICI develops understanding of urban pupils

Student teachers may select one student and follow him through the day’s activities to get an insight into his view of a normal school day. Even the schools regular teachers express interest in the work of the student teachers. Some experienced teachers report that they look forward to the visits of the student teachers. They are eager to have someone who is interested to share their experiences and who is willing to learn about their methods.

Cardwell, expressing a personal desire often expressed by educators, said, “We wish more new would become involved in teaching on the school level.” The teachers believe that they can contribute much to the education of urban students. However, they also feel that they need to be well prepared to do so.

“Many of the problems that we face in teaching are the same as those that we face in life,” said Cardwell. “We have to be able to deal with these problems effectively in order to be effective teachers.”

Views expressed on methods

Last term, during an on-campus recruiting seminar for another MICI teaching program, five student teachers were interviewed. They expressed their interest in the program and their desire to be involved in teaching.

“Teaching is a challenge,” said one student teacher. “I want to be involved in helping students to learn.”

“I enjoy working with children,” said another. “I want to be a part of their lives and help them to reach their full potential.”

The student teachers also expressed interest in the program and their desire to be involved in teaching.

“We believe that teaching is an important job,” said one student teacher. “We want to be able to contribute to the education of urban students.”

“Our goal is to make a difference in the lives of urban students,” said another. “We want to help them to achieve their full potential.”

“Our fond hope is to make progress, even if it is slow progress, toward helping those who are failing now—those who may never be able to pull their own weight in society unless they become better learners than they are at the present time.”

Terry Simpson and Dick McKee, both Flint parents, were involved in the most extensive Michigan program in Flint, which included five urban schools in Flint.

“Our goal is to make a difference in the lives of urban students,” said one student teacher. “We want to help them to achieve their full potential.”

“Our fond hope is to make progress, even if it is slow progress, toward helping those who are failing now—those who may never be able to pull their own weight in society unless they become better learners than they are at the present time.”

When production for October came to an end, the Japanese car firm was the first of the nation's automobile manufacturers to produce over 100,000 cars per month. The output made Toyota the world's sixth largest passenger-car producer. Toyota, after years, has already been the third largest producer of cars in Japan and since it was rated 9th in the manufacturing of Four-Wheel-Drive Vehicles.

In 1959, Toyota's highest monthly record was 5,000 units and in May 1966 Toyota sold the first Japanese automobile to hit the 50,000 mark.

For the year, 1968, Toyota has projected an output of at least 1,300,000 units.

There are many good reasons for this tremendous success.
