Gasoline giveaways distress dealers

By KENNETH COWDELL

"I don't know of any service station operators around town that is desperate for gas."

"Some people spend only 30 cents or $1 just to get a stamp in a book. When I'm in the market for gasoline, I spend more money than I would spend on a haircut. I suppose I'm a gasoline addict, but I'm sure a lot of people do."

"I don't think the giveaway is going to be the reason the gas stations close down."

"It's not like they're going out of business because people aren't buying gas."

"I keep hearing about how the gas stations are going to have a hard time making ends meet because of the giveaway."

"I don't see how they can make ends meet."

"I think they're just trying to make a quick buck."

"Some dealers admit that by hanging the giveaways, they can make more money."

"Others say they're doing it to help the community."

"I think they're just trying to boost their sales."

"We need a new approach to keep business growing."

Get Nixons OK

Nixon's Press Secretary

By ROBERT J. REED

There is no doubt in the minds of the presidential staff that Nixon is prepared to make a strong push for re-election in 1976. The White House is in high gear this week with an intense effort to project an image of a strong leader.

The president, according to his aides, is working long hours to prepare for his upcoming trips. The White House is also working on a series of press conferences and television appearances.

The goal is to present a positive image of Nixon as a strong leader who is capable of handling the challenges of the presidency.

The president is expected to make several major speeches in the coming weeks, including a major address to Congress on the state of the union.

The White House is also working on a series of ads and other media campaigns to promote Nixon's message.

The president's aides are also working on a series of background investigations into potential foes for the 1976 election.

The inaugural speech: best in the greenhouse

Monday's inaugural speech is now two days old. One can imagine the consternation of political analysts around the world, attempting to vivi-fy the ball they found on their laboratory tables. How to cut it without expelling its air?

Of course this is a quadrilateral dilemma, since most inaugural truths lack in generalization. In the best tradition, Nixon's speech was couched in brave new words, carefully selected from the finest in the green house.

There was an olive branch extended to the nation's youth. We are a more educated, more committed, more passionately driven by conscience than any other generation that has gone before.

Nevertheless, the President still seemed surprised to find his (branch) battenberg, brought to the attention of the Reading Pennsylvania by Budweiser cars on Pennsyl

Virginia Avenue.

He promised that "government will listen to all voices and ideas as people made it a noble promise accomplished by an administration to "stop shouting at one another". One hopes the promise is as noble as the words: that it is not, in fact, a smokescreen aimed at "choke down".

The President says that "we are political powers who would turn their backs on the high costs involved in achieving freedom from poverty for all Americans. We will hold Mr. Nixon solidly to his promise "to give life to what is the law".

"Greatness comes in simple trappings", the President has said, brave new words with which he summomed us Monday to greatness. Brave new words that, he must realize, require brave new deeds by him and all America.

OUR READERS' MIND

Two-fold responsibility on Library

To the Editor:

If we are going to assure that the UN is not a club for academic snobbery and that the US library "belongs" to students, faculty, and in the average course of activity, we must be sharply committed to the welfare of the student and faculty. This must be done in the interest of the student, to prevent the consequences of the library's failure to achieve the stated goal.

The problem is simply expressed in this manner: "We must have a key to the lock. For this key, we must have a library."

I have observed that the key is not yet in the lock, and the library is still a place for students and faculty to go and get information on their projects. Society requires, for the future, a library which will provide needed information for the student and faculty who wish to pursue a course of study.

Not yet are dried the tears

To the Editor:

Last Wednesday, Jan. 16, I would have been the first of the 1,667 students of the United Methodist Church, who were students in the Chicago and Minneapolis area. I was sent from the area by the University of Chicago, who gave me the opportunity and the good fortune to attend school in the Midwest and the Mid-West. Now the University of Chicago will have to pay for the lessons of the future, the knowledge of the future, the values and the social science of our campuses. HOW COULD WE EVER FORGIVE?

Planets at the center of the solar system

I suggest that the entire solar system is not at the center of the solar system. By this I mean that the center of the solar system is not the sun, but the planets. The sun is the source of all energy, but the planets are the ones that create the environment.

Medicine raises moral problems

By MARTY LORV

"New York is not large enough to accommodate the growing population of patients requiring surgery." Dr. Lewis A. Bernard, chairman of the Department of Surgery at the University of Michigan Medical School, told a group of medical students gathered at the University Club Monday night.

Dr. Bernard, who is also the director of surgery at the University of Michigan Hospital, was one of several speakers who addressed the topic of medical ethics at the University of Michigan. The topics included the ethical implications of medical research, the rights of patients, and the role of the physician in society.

Dr. Bernard said that the ethical implications of medical research are "of utmost importance" and that the physician must be "aloof from the patient's personal needs." He also said that the physician must be "prepared to make decisions that are in the best interest of the patient, even if it means sacrificing personal gain." Dr. Bernard added that the physician must be "able to make decisions that are in the best interest of society, even if it means sacrificing personal gain." UCLA, Tar Heels still 1 2 in ratings

NEW YORK—(UPI)—The nation's major college basketball programs remained the top two teams in a pair of familiar powerhouses, UCLA and North Carolina, despite the victories of the week, although the National College Basketball Association (NCBA) continued to screen its poll of 31 sports writers.

UCLA, ranked first in the NCBA poll for the 27th straight week, improved its record to 15-2 with a victory over North Carolina, which dropped to second place.

The Tar Heels, ranked second, made it a clean sweep for the Tar Heels, who have been ranked second for the past 27 weeks.

Dave Rose, the one president of the Penisulakers, and Tuesday, the choice of a head coach "has narrowed down to a few candidates," according to a recent survey of the field.

The candidates include former UCLA star John Wooden, who has been named Head Coach of the Famous Rumors and Clairol University of Miami football program.

Mike Happy, another candidate in the coaching search, is expected to be named the new head coach of the Famous Rumors and Clairol University of Miami football program.

UCLA is the No. 1 team in the NCBA poll for the 27th straight week. North Carolina, ranked second, moved into the top spot in the NCBA poll for the first time in its history.

The UCLA Bruins, ranked first in the NCBA poll for the 27th straight week, improved their record to 15-2 with a victory over North Carolina.

The Tar Heels, ranked second, made it a clean sweep for the Tar Heels, who have been ranked second for the past 27 weeks.

SPARTANS ON THE MOVE

Stitches can’t stop skaters

By PAM BOYCE
State News Sports Writer

The MI State hockey team is in a tight situation after a recent setback. The Spartans skaters returned to the ice this weekend with one win and one tie from games over the past two times over where they have even left the Gopher woods without losing a game.

The team was victorious over the Gopher woods in the first game but could not hold onto their momentum in the second. The games were played in front of a sellout group of fans who had been waiting all week for the chance to see their team back on the ice after an extended break.

The first game was a close one, with the Spartans leading 2-1 at the end of the first period. However, the Gophers were able to tie the game back up in the second period and force overtime. The extra session was scoreless, and the game was decided by a shoot-out. The Spartans were able to win the shoot-out, 3-2, to secure the victory.

The second game was more lopsided, with the Gophers scoring 4-1 in the first period and adding two more goals in the third. The Spartans were able to score twice, but it was not enough to overcome the large deficit.

Despite the losses, the team remains optimistic and continues to prepare for their upcoming games. The next game is against the University of Minnesota, and the team is looking forward to getting back on the ice and fighting for a win.

Road rally lead see-saws

MONTE CARLO (AP) - Bob Nordmann and Steve Black of Lansing, Michigan, set aside their soccer game this weekend to try and break the six-day-old record for the longest road trip in a car. They have already traveled over 5,000 miles and plan to continue their journey through the western United States.

The trip began in Lansing on September 10th, and the pair has been averaging about 600 miles per day. They plan to continue their journey through California and Arizona before returning to Michigan.

This is not the first time Nordmann and Black have attempted a long-distance road trip. They have previously traveled across the country in a van and a pickup truck, but this time they wanted to try something different.

The trip has been a mixed bag so far. Nordmann says that he has been able to get some work done during the journey, but Black has struggled to find time to study.

Despite the challenges, the pair is enjoying the opportunity to explore new places and meet new people.

Famecho stops Legra for title

LONDON, LONDON - Johnny Famecho of Australia was brilliantly behind a clean-up nael attack Tuesday night in the first round of the World Cup soccer tournament. Famecho, who is the captain of the national team, was outstanding in a 2-0 win over the United States.

Famecho was able to lead the team to victory with a goal in the first half and another assist in the second. He also had several key saves to keep the United States from scoring.

The win was important for Famecho and the team, who are trying to qualify for the World Cup final. They will now face their next challenge in the semi-finals on Wednesday, where they will play against Spain.

De Stevens, chairman of WAC's Board of Trustees since March 1959, died on Jan. 16 after a two-year term as chair of the governing group.

The Okemos Democrat, who has been on the board since 1955, has seen the school change in character from a medium-sized state college to one of the largest, most important universities in the nation.

In an interview with State News Editorial Reporter Ralph Handley, Stevens urged that the university and the board on the course may take in the future.

"If we overhaul one inch, and delegate any of this power to the legislature or anyone else, then we are endangering the existence of the university...r. The governor and the legislature should get out of the way..."

U' pros reflect diversity in concern for cities

BY AJAX HUNTER

Base News Staff Writer

Wichita is a diverse city, with numerous and diverse fields that are deeply concerned about the problems of the American city. Representing a cross-section of the multiplicity approach to the problems of the city, members of the community have expressed interest in this topic on campus, including concerns over the economic, social, and cultural trade variations among the students.

Dr. Bryan Davis, assistant professor of sociology, said that urban problems require a cross-disciplinary approach. "The necessity for solutions to the urban problem is not obtainable from within the central cities," Davis said. Because of the enormity of the task that this has involved, it is not surprising that various colleges and universities are turning to the students.

Davis has founded a seminar program to reflect diversity in concern for the problems affecting cities. The seminar is open to all students interested in the urban problem, whether they are from sociology, economics, or history and social studies. The seminar meets twice a week and is led by Dr. Davis and other faculty members who are concerned with urban problems.

The seminar is designed to provide a forum for the discussion of urban problems from various perspectives. Through this approach, students are encouraged to think critically about the complex issues facing cities and to develop a deeper understanding of the challenges that cities face.

The seminar is an opportunity for students to engage with the pressing issues of our time, and to develop the skills necessary to address these challenges. By reflecting diversity in concern for cities, the seminar aims to foster a more inclusive and collaborative approach to urban problem-solving, emphasizing the importance of multidisciplinary perspectives and collaborative efforts in finding solutions.
