Hours' proposals hit snag at Roundtable discussion

By DAVE SHORT

State News Staff Writer

The proposal to eliminate the post of student trustee from the Alumni Board of Michigan State University was unanimously rejected by the Roundtable at the meeting of the Board of Trustees held on Tuesday night. The proposal, which was introduced by Senator Richard G. Yock of the Alumni Board, was defeated on a roll call vote of 14-0.

The Roundtable, which is composed of members of the faculty, administration, and student body, is the principal advisory body to the Board of Trustees. The proposal was introduced in an attempt to strengthen student representation on the Board of Trustees.

Med school earns research gift

By JOHN HASSINGER

With the recent award of the Dr. Hugh Butler grant, the MSU College of Human Medicine has received further national recognition of its high-innovation approach to medical research.

The American Medical Women's Association has granted the MSU College of Human Medicine a $31,000 research grant for the development of a new surgical instrument. The grant, titled "The Development of a New Surgical Instrument," is a joint effort between the College of Human Medicine and the Department of Surgery at MSU.

The grant will fund the development of a new surgical instrument that is designed to improve the accuracy and efficiency of surgical procedures. The instrument is expected to be utilized in a variety of surgical procedures, including open heart surgery, hernia repair, and cerebral aneurysm surgery.

The grant is the latest in a series of research awards received by the MSU College of Human Medicine. In recent years, the College has received several grants from the National Institutes of Health, the National Science Foundation, and other research organizations.

The College's research efforts are focused on improving medical care and advancing medical knowledge. The College's research programs include studies on the molecular basis of disease, the development of new drug therapies, and the improvement of surgical techniques.

The College's research efforts are supported by a dedicated faculty of researchers and a state-of-the-art research facility. The College is committed to fostering a creative and collaborative research environment that will allow researchers to make significant contributions to medical science.

The College's research efforts are also supported by a strong network of research collaborators. The College maintains relationships with research institutions and organizations around the world, and is recognized as a leader in medical research.

The College's research efforts are also supported by a strong commitment to the advancement of medical knowledge. The College is dedicated to sharing its research findings with the medical community and the public.

The College's research efforts are also supported by a strong commitment to the education of medical students. The College's research programs provide students with opportunities to gain valuable research experience and to contribute to medical knowledge.

The College's research efforts are also supported by a strong commitment to the advancement of medical care. The College's research programs provide new insights into the prevention and treatment of disease, and are helping to improve the quality of medical care.

The College's research efforts are also supported by a strong commitment to the advancement of medical education. The College's research programs are helping to prepare the next generation of medical professionals to provide high-quality care to patients.

The enigma of McCarthy

In the wake of a landslide of criticism, the Michigan Daily, through Editor Robert E. McCarvey, has chosen to take one giant step backward. Map backward, leaving no reason or reason behind for what seems to be a great disarray of minds that have perhaps “found the good fight,” and now wants only to reject the prominence and respect bestowed on him by his supporters.

In fact, moves leave further doubt in one’s mind about just what is happening. Map backward, leaving no reason for what seems to be a great disarray of minds that have perhaps “found the good fight,” and now wants only to reject the prominence and respect bestowed on him by his supporters.

“Practical reasons for his moves” if any exist they are vague on the subject, anyway. There seems no real reason behind it, seems no real reason behind it.

McCarrvan’s defeat at the Chicago convention last summer, it has appeared to the great disarray of minds that have perhaps “found the good fight,” and now wants only to reject the prominence and respect bestowed on him by his supporters.

Blacks change strategy to solve racial problems by ED BURCHELL

The days of the great civil rights marches are over, but the spirit of the people who used to march to bring about the change still exists. The National Congress of Black Students is now a reality.

The group represents the black student voice across the country. It is a federation of black student groups, from the largest to the smallest.

The N.C.B.S. was organized last summer at the annual conference of the United States Student Association. The group is based on the idea that black students have a unique problem that can only be dealt with by black students.

The group's goals are to provide a national forum for the exchange of ideas and to encourage black students to participate in the political process.

Recent events, such as the race riots in Detroit and the murder of civil rights leader Malcolm X, have caused the group to re-evaluate its goals.

The group has decided to focus on issues that affect black students, such as the lack of funding for black colleges and the high rate of unemployment among black workers.

The group's leaders are currently working on a new strategy to increase black students' involvement in the political process.

Rock band to mix music, religion in dorm concerts

"Like It Is" is the label used by The Enhancers to describe their combination of rock and gospel that they hope will blend the two on the basis of love for music. The group sings about the things they are passionate about, such as alcoholism, and their music is a blend of rock and gospel. The Enhancers are a band of four members, including a guitarist, a bassist, a drummer, and a vocalist. They have performed at various venues, including churches and community centers, and have gained a following through their catchy tunes and powerful performances. Their music is a reflection of their desire to spread love and unity through their music and their message of hope and encouragement to their listeners.

Inauguration gets top TV billing

The nation's eyes will be on Washington Monday night as President-elect Nixon is inaugurated. The event will be broadcast live from the Capitol, and the coverage will include interviews with political and entertainment figures. The event will also feature a concert with performers such as Bette Midler, who will sing "Wind Beneath My Wings." The ceremony will begin at 12:30 p.m. and is expected to last until about 3 p.m.

Revolution course offered to students

By BARBARA FARNER

School News Reporter

Weaver College students who want to learn more about the black liberation movement can register for a course designed to increase their knowledge of the movement.

The three-course "Black Revolution" offered for the first time at Weaver College will cover the history of black liberation movements. The courses are required for all students enrolled in the "Revolution" program.

The course is intended at least in part to prepare students for careers in the Washington, D.C., area or other major cities. Weaver College's Department of Education, led by its dean, Weaver, has been in planning for the program, which is a "very significant" part of the school's mission. The program is designed to provide students with a solid understanding of the black liberation movement and to help them develop the skills necessary to succeed in careers in the field.

The program will begin in the fall and will continue through the spring. The courses are required for all students enrolled in the "Revolution" program, which is designed to prepare students for careers in the field. Cagers sneak up on contenders

BY MIKE MANLEY

State News Sports Writer

It's hard to imagine only one player responsible for sparking MSU's drive to the first division of the Big Ten, because the Spartans have come up with an abundance of them this season.

Before the conference schedule opened, the Spartans were picked to finish somewhere between fifth and tenth. Things were so bad that when "Sports Illustrated" did a story on the Big Ten teams considered "the up and coming," Michigan State wasn't mentioned.

Now MSU is starting to put it all together as they prepare to face Indiana Saturday. And the preseason picks are beginning to look quite impressive.

Coach John Beeman says the key to the guard study Benjamin is the four conference games. Benjamin has been scoring at a 2-to-1 ratio to his points. It is the difference that has brought MSU to the Big Ten.

Beeman also said that the team's defense is something that they are working on. This year's defense is a lot stronger than in the past. The team is working on the new 2-3 zone that they are using now. This system gives them more freedom in the backcourt.

But with the new defense, Beeman is hoping that Benjamin will be able to continue his scoring. He will be given the opportunity to shine as he has in the past.

Beeman also said that the team is working on their free-throw shooting. They are currently shooting over 75%.

In conclusion, the Spartans are posing a real threat to the Big Ten. They are starting to play their best basketball and are on the way to becoming a major force in the conference.

Green Spartan swordsmen open Friday in Minnesota

By DENNIS COUGHLIN

Entering his 30th season as MSU fencing coach, Charles Schmitter enters another season as the coach of Michigan State with the Spartan fencing squad well managed and talented. In early minutes, Schmitter administers the 1969 campaign which will be a riveting year for the fencing squad. A lot depends on how fast and how effectively the spring season progresses. "I think some of them have the potential to develop into real champions," Schmitter said.

Schmitter signed three fresh State freshman and returning students for the spring season which will probably be equal to or better than last year's team.

"It's obvious now that Michigan State has a powerful force in Minnesota because it is about to release a lot of the high school fencing talent in the Chicago area. It's kind of a hard to define team, but Schmitter said.

Michigan State fencing team consists of the Freshman class in the Big Ten last year and six or seven of its former championship teams. Schmitter said.

The fencing meets begin on March 25 at 6 p.m. in the Ojibway gym. The first meet will be against the Big Ten teams. Michigan State will also have a home meet at the Athletic Center on May 12 and 13.

The Spartan fencing team will also participate in the Midwest regional meet in Chicago on March 25, and the meet against the best of the Big Ten teams will be held in the Ojibway gym on March 25 at 6 p.m.
