HANNAH'S SUCCESSOR
Legislator urges board to name black president

By CHRISS NICAD

Henry Stewart, Rep. David S. Robinson, Jr., Detroit, and Rep. Ray L. Williams, Grand Rapids, Monday, Feb. 16, 1963, said the University should name a black man as a successor to President Thomas H. Weis at the end of his term to assume directorship of the University and its academic programs.

On the heels of the proposal suggested by the Michigan Board of Trustees urging them to consider a black man as a successor to Weis, Stewart, Robinson and Williams have written the regents calling for a black man as a successor to the presidency of the University.

A similar letter was written to the regents by Dr. Louis B. Stone, president of the University of Wisconsin. The letter was signed by the regents and was in response to a recent request by the Michigan Board of Trustees urging them to consider a black man as a successor to Weis.

The regents have not yet responded to the letter from the University of Wisconsin.

Hickel names lobbyist to fill undefined job

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former lobbyist was named executive director of a section of the legal services program by Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, who named a lobbyist to fill an undefined job at the Justice Department.

James E. Hickel, named executive director of a section of the legal services program, said the appointment was an attempt to fill an undefined job at the Justice Department.

The Justice Department had been looking for a lobbyist to fill an undefined job at the department, but Hickel said it was not clear what the job would entail.

Hickel said he was named executive director of the section of the legal services program by Lyndon B. Johnson, who named him to a similar job in 1965.

Hickel has been a lobbyist for several years, and has worked on various legal cases for the Department of Justice.

The Justice Department said it was looking for a lobbyist to fill an undefined job at the department, and that Hickel had been hired to fill that role.

The Justice Department did not provide any details about the undefined job.

A fight that has to be made

Take a base of sincerity and idealism, pour in curiosity and some thirst for extemity amidst a large portion of boredom and frustration, and you’ll have something like what pushed its way into the Administration Bldg. Monday afternoon.

So far, most of our work has been in the area of research and organization. All of us are reading books to be able to discuss the problems, not only as a matter of system. We are generally planning a summer session of the Administration Bldg. Members’ session.

Neglect and white blindness

It was a big happening at the new Administration Bldg. Bert Garskof was there, along with Rosell, and Zippa Zegarl, author of "The Coming of the Public Safety." There was also a grand opening of the new edition of "The Earth of Terrors." There was a ceremony of the four floor landing of the new edition of "The Earth of Terrors." It was a celebration of the activities of Bert Garskof. The ceremony of the four floor landing of the new edition of "The Earth of Terrors." It was a celebration of the activities of Bert Garskof.

March of mourning and honor

The University was not left without Black students, and mourning and honor marched through the campus and met with President Hannah at the Administration Bldg. Demands were stated. It had become fully clear that the University was moving too slowly in implementing programs for black recruitment andRetention in the University.

Seemed to be a lingering moral in the land.

The Poor Peoples Campaign revealed the sham. The planning for the Campaign had been the major preoccupations of Dr. King before his violent death. And was called on his associates in the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC). But when the marches reached Washington, the great gulf and sorrow which drove the country internationally after the death of Dr. King seemed to have already abated.

The Campaigns succeeded in obtaining only a few half-hearted promises from Washington, and no real action.

After the rain and mud had forced them out of the city, the marchers returned to their poverty and degradation, and in mourning which they hoped they would leave forever.

In theory, we presently see the Senators and Representatives responding to a recent call from the President on hunger in the U.S. with astonishment. Where were they seven months ago?

Another chapter in this history of black achievement has been enacted. Unfortunately, it has been too meagrely populated by white citizens, to the extent that the new edition of "The Earth of Terrors." It was a celebration of the activities of Bert Garskof.

More black professors, coaches, administrators and residence hall personnel will be hired and that all black students will be admitted to the University.

The committee's efforts were supported by the Black Students Alliance (BSA) formed earlier, which had been in part a response to the betterment of the University’s stance toward blacks in key areas. Then came that fatal Tuesday. April 4. Martin Luther King was slain in Memphis.

The University was not left without Black students, and mourning and honor marched through the campus and met with President Hannah at the Administration Bldg. Demands were stated. It had become fully clear that the University was moving too slowly in implementing programs for black recruitment and Retention in the University.

Poor facilities mar ‘Lamp’

The Tyrone Guthrie production of Barrie’s play, Lamp At Midnight” suffered from unfavorable staging, from a disappointing musical score, from the actor’s performance managed to achieve a certain humor and the editor’s attempts, all of which offer poor audiences, irreparable damage to the second and third acts.

Stalin’s dialogue is good, and sometimes excellent. The greatest problem is that Lamp is a lanky play with a real action-moving words and keeping it. The structure, like the actor’s voices, was much analyzed and simulated.

Problems in blocking were exaggerated (perhaps created by the fact that the stage didn’t quite accommodate the set). Lighting was generally in adequate in the second of the only one scene was well constructed, but the opening of the first and second scenes, usually well executed in light, was obscured by smoke. The cast was excellent.

The final curtain is expected.

Returning servicemen carry infectious disease

By GREG SCHROEDER

State News Staff Writer

The possibility of soldiers returning from Vietnam carrying infectious diseases is discussed in Dr. Norman Midgley’s (Department of Preventive Medicine) Thursday talk.

McCallough spoke in an assembly of doctors at U. of Alaska Hospital. The meeting addressed the possibility of diseases from Southeast Asia spreading in the United States.

“Reservoirs such as rodents, prairie dogs, and mosquitos are currently brought back by servicemen, but they aren’t new to the United States,” McCallough said.

The possibility of infectious diseases is currently enhanced because of the great need for servicemen. In Vietnam, McCallough said they need servicemen to have to be taken overseas to a year of service in the U.S.

The incubation period of many infectious diseases in Vietnam is one to two weeks. McCallough said. He added that returning G.I.’s could easily bring these diseases.

“Not only must doctors be on alert, but the public must be too,” McCallough said.

Returning servicemen are not detected and treated. With treatment, the death rate will be 100 times lower. said McCallough, but of complications such as meningitis, lower rates die, the death rate will certainly be lower. McCallough said there had been instances of mononucleosis, which is not treatable. He said he had seen two cases in the U.S.

When infected, the chances of returning servicemen becoming carriers of meningitis are 1 in 100. McCallough said. Because of the war, the chances of returningMinimalists from Southeast Asia

If returned, the death rate of 100 in 100,000 of American personnel and of pneumococcal meningitis 33 per 100,000, and the death rate of meningitis 90 per 100,000
