The Movement, a group of students and faculty members that has been organizing for a new president for MSU, approved a preliminary agenda for a public meeting Thursday evening to be held in a community center. The committee, as ﬁrst proposed, would include a member of the board of trustees, faculty, student, and administrator members, with the support of the council of graduate students. The agenda includes provisions for a broadly representative search and selection committee.

The Movement has also called for increased state appropriations for MSU, a new budget, and the elimination of the increased costs of state monies. They claim only serves the needs of the trustees rather than serving the desires of the students.

Cultural determinism in action

David Gladfelner

Reading through a social science text the other night, I was about to fall asleep when I came across a question that put my brain in overdrive. It was: "How do we understand the concept of race?" It was a question that had been lingering in my mind for some time. I decided to reflect on the idea and write about it.

The concept of race is a complex one that has been shaped by cultural, historical, and social factors. It is a social construct that is used to categorize and label people based on characteristics such as skin color, physical features, and cultural practices.

In the United States, race is often linked to the idea of "whiteness" and "blacks." This is because of the historical and social context in which race has been defined and used. The idea of whiteness has been constructed as a norm, while blackness has been seen as deviant.

This is not to say that race is a fixed or unchanging concept. The idea of race is constantly being redefined and reinterpreted by cultural and social factors. For example, as people of color have gained more recognition and visibility, the idea of race has expanded to include a wider range of identities.

One of the ways that race is constructed is through the use of language. Words like "black" and "white" have been used to define and label people based on their appearance and cultural practices. This language has been used to reinforce the idea of race and to maintain social hierarchies.

The idea of race is also closely tied to the concept of identity. People often use race to define who they are and to connect with others who share similar experiences. This is why race is such a powerful and enduring social construct.

However, it is important to recognize that race is not a natural or biological concept. It is a social construct that is shaped by cultural and historical factors. This means that it is possible to challenge and change the way that race is defined and used.

In conclusion, race is a complex and multifaceted concept that is shaped by cultural, historical, and social factors. It is important to recognize that race is not a natural or biological concept, but rather a social construct that is constructed through language and identity.

The Spartans' game with Wisconsin was a milestone game for the Badgers. Defeats had been the order of the day for the Badgers, but they were able to turn things around in this game. Wisconsin won 77-67, ending the Badger's streak. The Badgers scored 11 points in the first half, but fell behind 26-14 by the end of the first period. In the second half, the Badgers were able to score 26 points, but it was too little too late. The Badgers' defense was ineffective, allowing the Spartans to score at will. Wisconsin was able to make 12 of 14 free throws, while the Badgers made only 1 of 6. Wisconsin had 16 rebounds to the Badgers' 8, and the Badgers were unable to score on 73% of their shots. The Spartans scored 32 points in the second half.

The game was marked by a few key moments. In the third quarter, the Spartans took a 35-26 lead with 6:06 left in the period. The Badgers were unable to score for the next 4 minutes, allowing the Spartans to pull away. In the fourth quarter, the Badgers were able to score 11 points, but it was too little too late. The Spartans scored 16 points in the final quarter, while the Badgers scored only 12. The game ended with the Spartans leading 77-67.

The Badgers were led by Dan Duffett, who scored 18 points, and Mike Phillips, who scored 13. The Spartans were led by Tom Atkinson, who scored 24 points, and John Kalmbach, who scored 14. The game was attended by 8,300 fans, and the atmosphere was electric. The game was a key moment in the rivalry between the two teams, and it showed that the Spartans are the team to watch this season.
Bill Wehrwein scoops up his one American record at 700 yards and Spartans topped six other events on the MIU trackmen staged Ohio University, 1844 Saturday at Jenison Fieldhouse.

The win, coming after losses to reference schools Michigan, Indiana and Ohio State, gives the Spartans a 9-6-1 record. The Big Ten's top three teams give the Spartans a moment of glory at 700 going into next season's conference championships.

The nine nine-man match was played during each of the last two seasons and is expected to spread to the other conference teams.

Spartan fencers top Chikas, fall to Detroit

By DENNIS COОWELL

State News Writer

Detroit – The MSU fencing team swept dual meets with Chikas last week, dropping the Michigan Chicago and Michigan State teams, as the fencing program is highly regarded.

Dr. Charles Kitchen was a little surprised by the outcome.

"We had better results than expected," he said.

In the past two meets, the Spartans advanced to the NCAA Division II meet in St. Louis.

This weekend the team competed in the Western States and Colorado universities.

Karr, a junior from Pomona, scored all of the matches and was the top scorer at 6-3-3. He was also 6-3-2 in the dual meet.

The Michigan State match was won by 6-3-2, while the Spartans dropped Wisconsin 7-2-2.

Senior attacker was expected to be an important match in the winter season. But he left to work the Ohio State dual meet and was absent from the event. But in the event he is filling in and making it a double.

It is almost impossible to tell what kind of performance is expected from a meet. But it is a double.

Special ed consultants skills listed

by Nancy Brown
State News Staff Writer

Developing and maintaining skills is one of the most important tasks facing special education consultants. Charles Blackman, professor of education, said in Refrig. Center Friday, May 27.

Speaking at a Special Education, Curriculum and Materials Conference, Blackman outlined four skills that consultants should recognize and develop in their work. He said that having these skills was most important to setting out a child's most appropriate educational training program.

These skills include:

1. Ability to deal with their own fears
2. Ability to find solutions
3. Ability to deal with parents
4. Ability to deal with their children

A renewal program is in place now, and there is a need to knowledge about the renewal program, he said.

He also spoke of the tenure of time which must exist a consultant from pushing deeply enough into a child's problems. He regarded himself as a consultant to provide parents with a parent's consultant.

In order to deal with anxieties about the ability of children to take an active role in their lives he said.

The purpose was not to remove barriers, but to resolve the most effective way to help the special education consultant deal with the problem.

He argued that when a parent consults with the children they are concerned with the child's strengths and weaknesses.

Blackman concluded saying that special education consultants should present facts to their parents, but also deal with personal growth of the child, which is seen as a growth in the child's needs.

Blackman was also concerned that the growth of the child is not seen as the growth of the child's needs.

Faculty members view pros, cons of tenure

By MARK EISNER
State News Staff Writer

While the tenure system has come under considerable fire in recent months, many faculty members believe its advantages outweigh its disadvantages. (See page 2)

Thursday’s meeting centered around the tenure issue, a two-hour session that was open to all.

Tenure is the system under which the professor gains independence and freedom from administrative supervision, and is a form of protection from academic discipline.

In the old days, there were two main reasons why tenure was necessary: the fear of lawsuits and the fear of the plague. (See page 2)

“We can’t protect ideas unless we protect the people with these ideas. So the faculty must get tenure as a fringe benefit.” —Harvey King, provost

“Tenure is the faculty’s freedom of inquiry and teaching which would be inadvisable or unattainable in a career-driven environment,” said King.

A debate was conducted between the faculty and the administration.

“Are you contact lenses more work than they’re worth?”

If you’re tired of using two or more separate solutions to take care of your contact lenses, we have the solution. It’s Lensine, the all-purpose lens solution for complete contact lens care—cleaning, soaking, storing. It’s a drop or two of Lensine per lens, and you’re set for the next day’s wear.

The system of keeping your contact lenses clean is simple. Follow the instructions on the Lensine box and you’ll be ready for the next day’s wear.

Lensine exclusive for professional application has been demonstrated to be the most effective in laboratory tests for cleaning, maintaining and restoring the build-up of foreign debris on the lens surface.

Lensine is sterile, self-disinfecting, and antiseptic, and with proper care, there is no need for additional instillation fluid, as with Lensine, from the Murine Company, Inc.

Lensine will not remove any stains or adhesions that are present on your lenses, but it will prevent them from forming on your lenses, thereby protecting the lenses from future contact.

Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine. The Lensine solution can be reconstituted 99 times with Lensine, from the Murine Company, Inc.
