The making of a president: university style

By STEVE WATERBURY
State News Staff Writer

(The problem of selecting a new university president is a crucial one.)

Every year approximately 280 American colleges and universities seek new presidents.

In order to assist in the selection process, the University of Michigan and other institutions have developed a protocol for evaluating candidates. This protocol includes a series of steps designed to ensure a transparent and fair process. The steps typically involve:

1. Establishing a search committee: This committee is usually composed of faculty, staff, and student representatives who are knowledgeable about the institution.
2. Developing criteria: The search committee defines the qualifications and characteristics that the new president should possess.
3. Advertising the position: The institution publicizes the search for a new president to attract qualified candidates.
4. Receiving applications: Interested candidates submit their applications and credentials.
5. Reviewing applications: The search committee evaluates the applications and identifies a shortlist of candidates.
6. Conducting interviews: Selected candidates are invited for in-depth interviews, often followed by site visits.
7. Making a recommendation: The search committee recommends a candidate to the board of trustees or other governing body.
8. Appointing the president: The governing body approves the recommendation and appoints the selected candidate as the new president.

Despite the potential challenges and complexities involved in the selection process, the ultimate goal is to ensure that the new president is well-suited to lead the institution and its community. By following a structured and transparent process, universities can increase the chances of making the right choice while maintaining the trust and confidence of all stakeholders.

Embracing on a lofty task

The Academic Council today entirely reversed its most crucial previous decision in the University's history, and appointed a new President. Seldom had MSU had to choose a new president, and President Hamilton's resignation appointment to the Agency for International Development (AID) has forced a process scheduled to cover approximately two years to be carried out in short order. The press of time, should not be allowed, however, to confuse the orderly process of choosing a president, nor cause the procedures to be abandoned without due consideration for all parties involved, both those who wish to make nominations for the presidency and those nominated for the position.

The aim of the processes outlined by the Ad Hoc Committee of the Academic Council is to provide for the orderly selection of a qualified candidate for the University. It cannot be ignored that the appointment of one or the other of the best possible president cannot be tied to the process of selecting the dean of the College of Agriculture.

The Ad Hoc Committee has had six months to outline the process and pro-

Boilermakers here today

By MIKE MANLEY
State News Sports Writer

The No. 7 college basketball ball bounces in the nation. Purdue brings a 17 game win streak and hope for an undisputed Big Ten title into Assembly Fieldhouse tonight.

A Spartan has gunned a Northwood six over second place (17-4), Ohio State tonight would give the Boilermakers a piece of their first Big Ten championship trophy.

Purdue, second place (19-3) has been rolling for the past 20 games remaining. Game time is 10:30.

Spartan Coach John Bevington said the Boilermakers' high national ranking is deserved.

If you read the amazing part of it, there, you would have shown up for the game." Bevington said.

"Purdue is one of the two or three teams in the nation," Bevington added.

Led by All-America guard Rick Mount, Purdue has killed the direct national desire he has ever seen, the Boilermakers have stopped only one game in Big Ten play.

Every present defense in the books has been used against Mount, but the 6-4 junior has slotted each of them against double and even triple coverage. Mount has averaged over 32 points a game to rank third among the nation's top scorers.

"Mount makes you play a completely different game against him than you would against other teams." Bevington said. "I think you find him to beat him, the more ways he finds to beat you.

Bevington has put a lot of thought into who will guard Mount, he said he will make the information.

I've decided who is going to guard him, but I'm not sure I'll stick to it because I don't want him to shoot out of school before the game," Bevington said.

But Mount, who should make a dramatic cut out of every conference scoring record for the most likely second place first team All-American in Purdue's history.

Mount is a key player in Purdue's 1,000 point career and is not at all in the Purdue team by a long shot.

Purdue could be a top contender without Mount. They have great team speed and play real good defense, according to everything," Bevington said.

Some observers feel that the real key to the Boilermakers' attack is not Mount but 6-3 forward Bob Lohman.

"Mount has a second from the top scorer in the nation," Bevington said. "And he will be mosts likely to score over 1,000 points this season.

Bill Kelker, a 12.8 scorer guard makes an excellent man, he is a solid player and he directs the offense off Mount. He is the man in the motion, averaging over 10 points a game.

The other two starters for Purdue are 6-4 forward George Fakhoury and 5-10 center Check Burton.

Purdue built up a lead for a Big Ten basketball championship in the second half by 10 points. In the second place Ohio State has a second place Big Ten title the pressure of Iowa State and Wisconsin playing with the top two games of the Boilermakers.

Conference scoring leader Rick Mount netted 32 points, slightly off his 34-point game against Ohio State. Mount leads the first Big Ten crown since 1968. The 1967-68 total was below 32 points the only other Purdue team had ever scored against Northwood.

The Boilermakers, led by Boilermakers' 60 points and the Chermside 21, climbed to a 77 point game, but only four games remaining for their long lost title that could overtake the leaders.

While Purdue and Ohio State continue to lead the pack, 50 teams police into three places with a win and a loss over Michigan, a very young team scoring the 20 points a game, Michigan a led 40 point game performance by 22 points.

While Illinois are two teams, Wisconsin is taking over third place. Wisconsin is going to great MSU into a fourth place tie in Michigan by handing the Spartans a 78-64 defeat.

The eight games and the Boilermakers have matching 3-4-3 records.

"The interdisciplinary environment keeps you technologically hot."

"Working in data processing today pretty much means you work in a broad spectrum of technologies," says Nick Donohoo.

An Associate Engineer at IBM, Nick is a 1967 graduate in Electrical Engineering. He uses his technical background to design circuits for computer memory systems.

"Circuit design used to be a narrow job," he says. "Today it can take you into the heart of half a dozen different fields. In my job, for example, I work on systems design engineers, chemists, physicists, metallurgists, and programmers.

Nick Donohoo describes a hypothetical case history: "A memory systems man comes to me with memory circuit requirements. Before I can start designing the circuit, I go to see a physicist. He helps me select an appropriate technology for the monolithic circuit.

"As the design develops, I work with a test group and do check back with the systems and semiconductor people to make sure I'm on the right track."

Keeping up

The interdisciplinary environment at IBM helps you keep up to date technologically. As Nick puts it. "You're constantly exposed to what's happening in other fields.

IBM needs technical graduates to work in research, development, manufacturing, product test, field engineering, and space and weapons projects. We also need technical people in programming and marketing.

CLEAN WATER BOND

Milliken urges state teamwork

By ED HUGHSON
State News Staff Writer

The Michigan Senate, in 1969, will have to decide whether to give a water pollution program the authority to control the pollution of the state's water bodies and to allocate the necessary funds to do it.

I appeal to you to act with the same enthusiasm and con- cern that Michiganians showed when they got all te states to go along with Michigan's Clean Water Act.

The passage in November of the bond issue was signed by Milliken, a mandate for col¬ lege leadership among regular public and local officials.

A feasibility study for the state of Michigan has been made and a plan is available. The state of Michigan has a right to be a leader in this field.
