SATURDAY’S GAMES

Indiana at MSU
Wisconsin at Michigan
Ohio State at Northwestern
Purdue at Illinois
Minnesota at Iowa

They’ll be chasing him Saturday too.

This is who the Spartans will be chasing Saturday; probably much like they have the last two years. He’s quarterback Harry Gonso (16) and that’s Gonso’s favorite receiver Dale Butler ready to throw a block on MSU’s No. 50 is Spartan linebacker Coli Fox. Action came in last year’s game which Indiana won in the closing minutes, 24-22.

On the other hand the Spartan defense-led by Rich Saul, Ron Carroll, Tom Daugherty and Mike Hogan-ranks second in the conference in rushing defense. The 15th-ranked crew has surrendered an average of 152 yards a game. Only Ohio State has a better mark.

That defense, which held surprising Iowa to only 19 points (and a majority of those were set up by offensive mistakes by the Spartans) has been hurt somewhat by injuries and illness to key starters.

Brad McLeer will not play because of an ankle injury and Jay Brelin will start in his place at safety. Defensive end Will Martin, starter all season, has been sick all week and it is still questionable whether he will be ready. If not, he will be replaced by junior Gary Nowak.

Indiana’s injuries, however, have healed remarkably well. Keneenigh and safety Jay Mathias, both listed doubtful during the week are reported ready for Saturday.

SPARTAN NOTES—If the law of averages holds up, IU should be in pretty good shape Saturday. They’re 2-2 in each of the last four weeks, in the Big Ten four of the five home teams have been victorious.

Don Duffy was talking about the one extra point kicked against Iowa by soccer kicker Hank Sodar.

“The ball took so long to get over the crossbar, I thought it had been shot. These things are a mortar. I told that to my players but they didn’t seem to understand. I guess kids today aren’t too hip on the military.”

FACE BOBCATS TODAY

'S' booters in season's finale

By PAM ROYCE
State News Sports Writer

Only one regular season game remains on the schedule for the MSU soccer team, and that contest will be decided this afternoon when the Spartans battle Ohio University in Athens. The Spartans, 6-1-1 this season, hope to bounce back from their first loss in 14 games, a 2-0 loss to St. Louis last weekend. The team will be anxious to bring home a decisive win in order to assure themselves a spot in the NCAA tournament scheduled for late in November.

Gene Kenney's booters maintain a 9-0 all-time record over Ohio, shutting out the Bobcats in six games and outscoring them 51-3. In last year's contest, the Spartans whitewashed Ohio, 5-0, in MSU's final game of the 1968 season.

The Bobcats, 7-3-1 last season, currently hold a 5-2-2 record with four overtime games. In their initial meet of the season, they tied Indiana University, 1-1, the other tie coming at the hands of Miami of Ohio, also 1-1.

Ohio has lost to Akron, 3-2, in overtime, and was also beaten by Bowling Green, 1-0 in overtime. The school's wins have been over Marietta (11-0), Toledo (2-0), Pittsburgh (2-1 in two overtimes), Wright State University (3-0) and Denison (5-3). Ohio and MSU have two opponents in common - Toledo and Akron - with the Spartans topping Akron, 1-0, after dropping Toledo, 8-0.

Leading scorers for the Bobcats are inside right John Thompson, with seven goals and one assist, center forward Peter Martelli with five goals to his credit, and halfbacks Armando Insignares and Howard Fiedelman, tied with four points apiece.

Kenney has several changes planned in his team's tactics this week, including moving defensive star Buzz Demling to offense. Kenney said he may put freshman Nigel Goodison in Demling's left halfback spot. Goodison, a 6-3, 180-pound freshman, has looked impressive in several performances this season.

Other choices open to Kenney include placing Rudy Mayer, Chicago sophomore, in Demling's spot, or else switching sophomore Steve Twellman from his right halfback spot and moving him to Demling's place.

This would leave room for St. Louis senior Nick Archer in the line-up at Twellman's fullback spot.

JANSON LEADS GOLFERs IN FALL TOURNAMENT

It came as no particular surprise when next year's captain Lynn Janson topped the field with a 72 hole total of 503. Janson had consistent rounds with the exception of the final two times out when he shot 76 and 74 respectively. Before those final two rounds, the East Lansing senior scores of 71, 72, 70, and 69. Janson finished third in the Big Ten last year as a junior.

Janson's 503 was a record at the 126 hole distance as was his 90 hole score of 353 (3 under par). Janson's 72 hole total of 284 (even par) was not only a record for this regulation distance, but the best tournament score on record for an MSU varsity player. The highlight of the play was a hole-in-one on the sixth hole with a six iron in the fourth round of play.

The Spartan cross country team heads for South Bend today and an afternoon dual meet against Notre Dame on the speedily brisk course.

Spartan Coach Jim Gibbard said that the Spartans, 3-1 in dual meets, should be favored in the meet, but he warned that Notre Dame can't be underestimated and could give the Spartans a run for their money.

Check Starkey will be running his first race since Oct. 18, when he placed sixth as the Spartans' third man against Minnesota. He was sidelined for two meets after a minor hand operation.

Gibbard hopes that soph Dave Dieters and senior captain Ken Leonowicz will both be ready for good races, which the duo has to provide the rest of the way if the Spartans are to offset the loss of top man Kim Hartman.

Fresh Warren Krueger, Ralph Zoppa, Randy Kilpatrick and Pete Hottl round out the Spartans' top seven at the present time, and Gibbard would likely pick these seven now if he had to race a team for the Nov. 15 Big Ten meet.

First all-state karate tournament Sunday

Anyone in need of a bodyguard might check the possibilities Sunday when the first Michigan Track-Won Do-Karate Championships will be held in the Lansing Civic Center.

Beginning with the 10 a.m. preliminaries and lasting through the finals, which start a 7:30 p.m., sports enthusiasts will see between 200 and 400 karatekas with almost as many styles compete for championships in free sparring kata or forms, and demonstrations.

Free sparring is competition in which two opponents spar in a ring with the objective to score a point on the target area of your opponent with either hand or foot. Free sparring competition will be divided into three divisions- high school, college and open.

Kata or forms is a type of military combat in a prearranged pattern with imaginary opponents. General admission tickets will be available to the public at the door.

Two years ago, the delightful antics of Indiana's sophomore trio of John Isenbarger, Harry Gonzo and Jade Butcher captured the imagination of the entire country as they took the Hoosiers from ninth in the Big Ten to the Rose Bowl.

It was the story of Cinderella and the New York Mets all wrapped up in one as the sophomore-studded Hoosiers won game after game in the final minutes and earned the nickname of "Cardiac Kids."

Today, as a more poised and mature group of seniors Gonzo and Co. are struggling to earn a second trip to Pasadena - a rare privilege for one group of players because of the Big Ten's non-repeat role for the January first classic.

The Hoosiers appeared to have the inside track to Pasadena because of a soft conference schedule (which excludes Ohio State and Michigan), but an upset at the hands of Wisconsin last week dropped IU back into the middle of the pack fighting for the berth.

Coach John Pont will bring the same kind of team into Spartan Stadium as the ones that edged the Spartans by a total of three points in the last two seasons.

Indiana is erratic, but explosive on offense and often inconsistent on defense.

The Hoosiers who usually run out of the I-formation with a flanker and split end, scored 58 points in their opening win over Kentucky but have managed only 38 points in their next three games combined.

Although time has dulled their image of national heroes, Isenbarger, Gonzo and Butcher are still the Hoosiers biggest offensive threats.

Everything went right for the flashy Isenbarger in that sophomore season, including his daring runs in fourth down situations ("Punt, John, Punt.") but he's been troubled by injuries the past two years.

He tore up his knee against MSU last season and missed a total of four games.

Isenbarger is currently suffering from a hip pointer and is a doubtful starter for Saturday's contest.

The shifty tailback has shown no ill effects from the last year's knee surgery as he was the team's leading rusher with 636 yards on 126 carries this season.

Junior Bob Perrell, who has gained 198 carries in 33 carries, is expected to replace Isenbarger at tailback.

The man who really makes the Hoosier offense move is quarterback Gonzo.

Gonzo has broken almost every Hoosier passing and total offensive marks during his two-and-one-half years as IU's starting signal caller.

Gonzo has gained 794 yards passing, hitting 117 of 176 attempts, and his running has added 118 more yards to the Hoosier offense.

Butcher, the third member of the terrific trio, has been IU's best scoring threat this season, catching seven touchdown passes.

Failing to make the jump into the conference East, he is a shifty receiver who often lines up out of the backfield and has seven receptions covering 127 yards.

It was Stotesberg's leaping catch at the goal line over the back of Spartan halfback Ken Belet that Junior John Andrews has been the top receiver for Gonzo with 21 catches compared to 18 for Butcher.

Another Hoosier wide receiver is Eric Stotesberg who has seven receptions covering 127 yards.

The 6-32, 240-pound back was the scoring threat last year.

He caught 10 touchdowns in the team's last five games.

Spartans--Hoosiers battle for roses?

Homecoming, an undefeated record at home and the slimmest of slim hopes still exists for a trip to the Rose Bowl.

All of these are incentives which should spark the Spartans for a victory Saturday over Indiana. But don't count on any help from the Hoosiers. They've done it two years in a row and would like nothing better than to make it three straight homecoming wins over Duffy Daugherty and Co.

Head Coach John Pont and his now mature young men are on the way to the Rose Bowl, or so they think. The past two weeks we've seen teams with plans to make the westward bound trip get knocked off.

Two weeks ago everybody was talking about Michigan standing the best chance, despite the black spot at the end of their schedule which read: Nov. 22-Ohio State-II. After MSU knocked the Wolverines off, the talk generated around good odds for the Spartans. But Iowa put a crimp in that thought with a disputed one-point triumph over the Spartans last week.

So the Hoosiers are no town now in the same position that Michigan and MSU were in the last two weeks. According to the books, the men from Bloomington will get knocked off. But then when were the books ever right?

Indiana will hope to bounce back from a costly defeat at the hands of Wisconsin, a feat which only one other team has had to face in the past three years. (The other being Iowa, who bounced back pretty well last week.) Coach Pont said his team just played inconsistent ball against the Badgers, with a lot of chances to win, "but we just didn't cash in on them.

"I feel that a team that is sharp will take advantage of its breaks and won't give them to the other other team," Pont said after the game.

That could very well describe the Spartans' season thus far. The few times the Spartans have received a break like the blocked punt in the Iowa game or Don Law's interception in the SMU game, have had scored soon afterwards. The only thing wrong is that the Spartans offense has given the opposition too many breaks resulting in too many scores. All but the final touchdown that Iowa scored last week came after an MSU mistake. (And even if it wasn't a penalty, the Spartans' mistake of having a lineman a little too far downfield cost them six points.)

The Spartans have a good team, offensively and defensively. The offense showed it can move the ball effectively if it can avoid the mistakes of big penalties, fumbles and interceptions. The defense has proven itself time and time again, holding the opponent when they must.

Saturday's game could be a battle of give-away if the teams play according to the statistics. The Hoosiers have fumbled the ball 11 times: two less than the slippery-fingered Spartans. Indiana can score and will score, they're averaging 20 points a game in conference play. Iowa had approximately the same average but the Spartans' defense held them pretty much in check. The only trouble was that there was little punch on the offensive ledger.

Triplett, Higsmith, Smith, Foreman, Kough and Kuleza and the front five will have to show a little more punch if the Spartans are to make it a happy Homecoming weekend for students, faculty and alumni.

Club boxing gains interest

By RICHARD GOSELIN

When first assigned to write an article on boxing, this writer was completely lost in the prospect of never having heard of the sport as an intercollegiate one. Maybe it was because the Big Ten doesn't sanction it through intercollegiate competition. But boxing as a club sport was there, and it was an assignment.

As I walked in the side door at Jenison Fieldhouse, the question arose: who had ever come out of MSU as a boxer? One walk down the long picture-cluttered corridor leading to the main lobby, and that question was answered. Amongst the many photos paying homage to the great football teams past, stood a regal painting of Chuck Davey, NCAA champion of the late 1940's. A boxer from MSU. It was a start.

The men enrolled in the club are three through their own solution, working at their own pace and working hard. After all, “conditioning is from 50 per cent to 90 per cent of boxing,” as the club's secretary-treasurer, Gary Freestone, was quick to relate. With interval training (three minutes of work, one minute of rest, and so on) as the conditioning standard, each member feels he has a both mentally and physically.

THE THE defensless bag

It's a defenseless bag that stands there, but to this MSU boxing club member it's a goodsparring partner to quicken up his jabs and punches. The club, which numbers 18, is seeking more members, especially lightweights.

The three most prominent members (president Bob Vanhoostenhauw, Bob Kugelmeier, a former trainer of boxing at the US Naval Academy; and club-founder Donnelly) set more or less as “sparring partners.” They are not there strictly for their own personal satisfaction, but also in aid of the younger members as well. The rights, wrongs and misconceptions of boxing procedure are simply illustrated by these experienced instructors.

TITLE-BOUND

All-Stars in finale; meet Flint here

By DAVE WEST
State News Sports Writer

Flint is setting the look of a winner this year as the All-Stars appear to be running away with the Midwest Football League.

The last hurdle for the All-Stars to pass before they find themselves in their first championship game since 1963, is their home game this Saturday night with the Flint Wildcats, at the Lansing Everett football field.

Flint is 2-11, on the season, but they still have a chance to be the spoiler for Lansing.

Last year Lackawanna looked championship bound when they ran into a weak Wildcat squad, and suddenly their title hopes were ended.

The All-Stars met Flint twice earlier this season, and came out on top both times. In a pre-season contest Lansing squeaked by the Wildcats, 17-13. Lansing picked up some new personnel in the early stages of the season, and then proceeded to romp by Flint, 33-6.

“They looked very impressive in the first half in Flint,” All-Star Coach Turf Kauffman said. “But their lack of depth caused them to fold.”

“We’ll go into the game with basically the same personnel as we have been using all season long,” Kauffman said. “We may work Bob Super in at quarterback some, in case we run into trouble next week,” he added.

Looking ahead to a possible championship game with Lackawanna, Kaufman is expecting, “a good hard football game.”

Lackawanna topped the All-Stars in their first encounter in Lansing, 53-6. But when Lansing traveled into Lackawanna country, the story was reversed, 18-5.

“Lackawanna has as fast, strong, well conditioned team, Kaufman said, “and they really love to hit.”

“Lackawanna has never won the championship, and they’ll come down here with every intention of winning it,” he said. “But we’re going to do our best not to ablige them.”

All-Star injuries from last week’s victory over Dayton are healing well. Charlie Wedemyer dislocated his thumb, but he should be back calling signals this week, Gerdie Herick will also be back in his defensive safety position after re-injuring his arm against the Colts.

The only major injury was sustained by Roger Peltier. Peltier is lost for the remainder of the season with a broken leg.

In preparation for the possible title game in November 8, WMSB-TV,” channel 10, will present a half-hour special on the Lansing All-Stars at 7 p.m., Friday.

finished 10 strokes in back of Janzen with a 513. His 72 held total of 291 broke the old varsity record of 292.

This is the first year that freshmen have been able to compete for a long time and Tom Murphy of Wheeling, West Virginia made an impact by scoring 534 and finishing 8th in the competition.

Ron English of Lansing and Everett High School played superb golf, finishing third. His finishing rounds of 70-71 were a great effort according to head coach Bruce Fossen.

English won the Coach’s award for the MOST IMPROVED PLAYER. Tom Murphy won the OUTSTANDING FRESHMAN AWARD. These awards are given annually for play in the Fall Tournament.

The defending Big Ten champs will open their 1970 season with the “Red Fox Intercollegiate” in Tryon, North Carolina on March 26-28 followed by the Cape Coral Inter. (Fla.) on April 1-4.

With the cold weather rapidly approaching, golf enthusiasts are being forced to store their clubs for the winter months or head South.

But before the cold weather sets in, MSU’s golf team held their annual Varsity Golf Fall Tournament over a span of three weeks.

The top 8 players were:

2. Edmundson, Lew
3. English, Ron
4. VanderMeiden, John

Hayes feels that because he has the No. 1 ranked team in the nation and that this being football's 100th year of existence, that the Big Ten should send the most qualified team--his Buckeyes.

The popular OSU coach and his fine team won't be able to make the trip however because of the conference ruling that no team may make a repeat trip.

Spartan coach Duffy Daugherty is in agreement with the present ruling.

Golden Gloves, with Fenske winning the district middleweight championship. Freshman Chip Krommen found a spot on the Detroit agenda. As a result, a team of Spartans in tentatively planning on entering Lansing's Golden Gloves competition in January if enough members display interest.

Generally speaking the club's basic training should be finished by the end of this term. President Fenske, confidentially stated, "We should be ready for competition by this winter.

All sparring is done at the Caravan Club in Lansing. Two years ago, the MSU boxing club journeyed down to the University of Michigan for some intra-school competition. This year's club hopes to repeat the trip. Invitations are also out from Western and Central Michigan Universities for a Spartan showing.

The club hopes to have all seven weight classes represented from the light to the heavy's. But with only two of the members listed as under 155 pounds, complications will arise.

Freestone only weighs 130 pounds, and can't seem to find anyone in his weight class. Once again, new members are cordially invited to attend--especially the lighter ones.

Precision in footwork, punches, and wind are the ultimate goals of the organization. Defense is also a vital key in comprehending the sport. And with only 18 members, one can imagine how close knit the club is. Each member knows every other member. Help is always at the end of one's 13 ounce glove. And as probably already noted, experience is not a requirement.

With the abbreviations fewer than it ever was before, the MSU sport of boxing is trying to establish its footwork as an existent organization in Spartanland. Every Monday and Wednesday, from 6 to 7:15 p.m., the 18 man circle meets. And as Freestone knowingly puts it, "Everyone goes home tired."
