'U' Academic Council Oks report amendment

DEBORAH MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

Sex, the Academic Council says it is in favor of it and has approved the report that there is no need for discrimination in the school. The university has been called "soft on the battle of discrimination in the community today."

The council unanimously approved to amend Act II of the report to include sex and the prohibition of discrimination on the sex of the person. This amendment is an amendment to the act that is the battle of discrimination in the community today. This amendment is an amendment to the act that is the battle of discrimination in the community today.

Overall approval and agreement in principal was the consensus of the council. University Assistant Lawmaker Cecilia K. Risch, head of the report's subcommittee, and other council members agreed with the recommendation. Miller said he was "highly supportive" of the recommendation and said that the establishment of such a committee was necessary in an institution such as the University of Michigan because of sex discrimination.

The recommendation that a permanent committee against discrimination be established and that it have at least one non-white faculty member and at least one non-white student member.

The non-member committee would be comprised of 2 faculty members, administrative and professional personnel, labor employees and students.

The council will be instructed to identify policies, practices or patterns of behavior which may reflect discrimination and, if they do reflect discrimination, to take appropriate action for a hearing before the establishment of such a committee.

However, the report also provides for appeal to the student faculty judiciary, and if the appeal is sustained, the student faculty judiciary is requested to report its findings to the Academic Council for action.

Other action included amended the faculty before opening the Academic Senate to the public.

Sills cites tax incentives to curb births

He blames the economic conditions and competing priorities on the decrease in birth rates in the state. He said that the income tax decrease in the state is an incentive for people to have fewer children.

He said the greatest success the people working on the population problem to deal with is the social isolation for not having children. Sills cited tax incentives for less children and granting of tax benefits to those who have fewer children. He suggested the methods of cutting population growth.

Sills: humans are racing to bed in one area, Sills observed. The activity is not necessarily a sign of the times, he added.

Sills lay the ax on the population's title "Men: The Endangered Species."

Sills said this no reason why a "race" exists in the area, he added. He said that at this time, the population problem is not a problem, he added.

Sills: "One Earth, One Chance" but the Heaven for the Nadra people.

Sills in Heaven for the Nadra people. The Nadra people are working on the population problem, he added.

"But these are better problems, he proclaimed, and the number of people are getting in the way of the Nadra people, she said.

Biafra relief hampered; Nigerian troops move in

Nigerian troops move in

British officials, sharply criticized by those who regard as inside responsibility in the relief efforts, said they had not been too helpful, but the problem was getting the relief to the people. The government's efforts at rehabilitation are lauded for the willingness of the Nigerian Red Cross. They are responsible for providing relief efforts but they are doing it in an environment that is not conducive to the work.

The Nigerian troops moved into the area to assist the relief efforts. The Nigerian troops are working side by side to help the people. They are working with the Nigerian Red Cross and other organizations to help the people.

Syllabus ends

Ashley Mottinger, internationally recognized anthropologist and social scientist, was chosen by the Academic Council for the fourth annual University College Symposium today.

Meetings will speak of "The Endangered Species" at 4 p.m. in the classrooms.

BLACK PANTHER PARTY
Justice Dept. joins probe

SAFETY FIRST—A team of Justice Dept. lawyers operating under a new federal court order issued by Judge G.T. Nicholls last month has entered a federal grand jury investigation of the Illinois Black Panther party.

The order was issued in U.S. District Court in Chicago after a federal district judge there ruled that the BPP was not a political group as defined by the U.S. Dept. of Justice but was a group engaged in public law violations.

The order was issued after a federal grand jury had been convened by federal authorities in Chicago in May, according to government sources, who would not allow names of their source. They said the basis for the order was the report of the Justice Dept.'s security division and the Justice Dept. would be allowed to continue its investigation of the BPP.

Montgomery's odyssey: heavy gov't betting

Ten Michigan state legislators are contemplating a trip to the races in what appears to be an attempt to recoup the $20,000 of the taxpayers' money.

Are the legislators anticipating heavy losses? It seems unlikely that they will take their bets seriously.

This is the kind of trip that legislators are considering. They are looking to recoup the money they lost at the racetrack.

The rationale behind the trip to Australia is that it is a trip for legislators to get involved in the Australian government and to learn about the country. It is a trip that is intended to bring the government closer to the people.

The trip to Australia is not only a way for legislators to learn about the Australian government, but it is also a way for them to recoup the money they lost at the racetrack.

The trip to Australia is not only a way for legislators to learn about the Australian government, but it is also a way for them to recoup the money they lost at the racetrack.

What are the consequences for the legislators who lose money on the trip? They may be censured by their colleagues or even kicked out of the legislature.

The important thing to remember is that the legislators are not only representing themselves, but also the taxpayers.

The legislators should be held accountable for their actions and should be transparent about where the money is going and what the outcome of the trip will be.

It is important to hold the legislators accountable for their actions and to ensure that the taxpayers' money is being used wisely and effectively.

Students must support themselves by finding summer jobs, side jobs, or relatives' views on every step of the way in order to get a good education and to acquire the necessary skills to enter the workforce. It is essential for students to have opportunities to earn money and to gain experience outside of the classroom. In addition, students should be encouraged to continue their education beyond high school and to pursue higher education in order to increase their chances of finding gainful employment.
Environment commitment vital, Nelson warns

By Ken Skell, Editor of the Daily Tribune

The keynote speaker at the University of Minnesota, College of Agriculture, Forestry and Home Economics, Monday night was Commissioner of the Department of Agriculture, William O. Nelson. He was the major feature of an event sponsored by the Student Council of the University of Minnesota.

Nelson began his address by emphasizing the importance of the environment in all aspects of our lives. He referred to the need for environmental protection and the importance of sustainability. He also discussed the role of technology in addressing environmental issues.

"The environment is not just a matter of concern for conservationists," he said. "It is a matter of concern for everyone. The health of the environment affects our health and well-being."

Nelson went on to discuss the importance of education in environmental conservation. He mentioned the need for education at all levels, from primary schools to universities. He also emphasized the importance of public awareness and involvement in environmental issues.

He concluded his address by outlining the actions that individuals can take to protect the environment. He encouraged everyone to make small changes in their daily lives, such as reducing waste and conserving resources.

"We must all work together to protect the environment," he said. "It is a shared responsibility that affects us all. Together, we can make a difference."

Nelson's speech was well-received by the audience, who appreciated his insights and his passion for environmental conservation. The event concluded with a question-and-answer session, where Nelson answered questions from the audience and discussed the importance of environmental issues in more detail.

Nelson's address was a call to action, urging everyone to take responsibility for the environment and work towards a sustainable future. His message was clear: the environment is vital, and we must all work together to protect it.
Filth plugs state waterways

By MARNIE SCHULTENBURG

The population, industrial and agricultural growth in Michigan will bring increasing numbers of people to the state and, with it, a need for better water treatment facilities throughout the state and an increasing strain on those already in existence.

State officials are considering the amount of funds that will be necessary to cope with the growing demand for water treatment facilities. They find that the state's current facilities for sewage treatment are inadequate to meet the growing demand.

The state's current facilities are designed to handle only a fraction of the sewage that is generated. As a result, the state is facing a serious problem in terms of water pollution.

In recent years, there have been an increasing number of violations of the state's water pollution laws. This is due in part to the growth of industries in the state and the increased demand for water treatment facilities.

The state is now considering the need for new facilities to meet the growing demand for water treatment. The state is also looking at ways to reduce the amount of sewage that is generated.

The state is working on a plan to increase the capacity of its water treatment facilities. This plan includes the construction of new facilities and the expansion of existing facilities.

The state is also looking at ways to reduce the amount of sewage that is generated. This includes efforts to reduce the use of water and to improve the efficiency of water treatment facilities.

The state is determined to do everything possible to protect the state's waterways from the effects of pollution. The state is confident that it can meet the challenge and provide clean, safe water for all of its citizens.

Sights 'n Sounds to air campus community

By SHIRLEY JOHNSON
State News Staff Writer

"You're going to enjoy the next hour," said the speaker, to the group of people gathered in the auditorium. "We have a special program planned for you today, which will begin in just a few minutes."

The speaker, a well-known local journalist, went on to explain that the program was part of a series of events aimed at bringing the community together through the power of music. "We believe that music has the ability to unite us in a way that nothing else can," he said. "Today's program is no exception."

The auditorium was filled to capacity, with people of all ages and backgrounds sitting together, eager to hear what was in store for them.

The program began with a performance by the State University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Maestro James Brown. The orchestra played a selection of classical pieces, their music filling the auditorium with a sense of peace and tranquility.

Following the orchestra, a group of local performers took the stage, each one showcasing their talent in a variety of genres. The performers included singers, dancers, and musicians, and their talent was truly impressive.

The highlight of the program was a performance by the State University Chorale, directed by Dr. John Williams. The chorale performed a selection of songs, their voices harmonizing beautifully.

After the performance, the speaker returned to the stage, thanking everyone for their participation and promising more exciting programs in the future.

"We hope you enjoyed today's program," he said. "We look forward to bringing you more events like this in the future. Until then, we hope you will continue to support the arts in our community."
Gables -- symbol of rock muzak syndrome

By DAVID BARRETT
State News Staff Writer

STATE -- Staff writer David Barrett offers his opinion on why rock music is such a phenomenon and whether it is a positive or negative influence on society.

In his opinion piece, Barrett discusses the popularity of rock music and the reasons behind its widespread appeal. He points out that rock music has become a symbol of rebellion and individualism, appealing to a diverse audience. Barrett also explores the cultural and social influences that have contributed to the rise of rock music, including the impact of television and the music industry.

Barrett concludes by suggesting that while rock music may have a negative impact on some individuals, it can also be a source of personal expression and unity. He encourages people to embrace the diversity of rock music and find their own unique way to connect with it.

Bond formula strikes again

In the first scene of "On Her Majesty's Secret Service," George Lazenby, the new James Bond, is shown dressed as a ski instructor, and it quickly becomes obvious that he is not an ordinary instructor. He has been preparing for this role for several years, and his performance is both believable and entertaining. The film opens with a breathtaking scene of Bond skiing down a mountain, showing his skill and grace. The audience is immediately drawn into the world of James Bond and his adventures.

The film is directed by Lewis Gilbert, who has a proven track record in the film industry. The cinematography is stunning, with beautiful landscapes and thrilling action scenes. The music is composed by John Barry, who has won several awards for his work in the film industry. The score is both exciting and beautiful, adding to the overall experience of the film.

The story follows Bond as he investigates a plot by a terrorist organization to destroy a nuclear weapon. The plot is well-paced, with twists and turns that keep the audience engaged. The film also includes scenes of Bond's personal life, showing that he is not just a无所不能的特工, but also a complex and human character.

The film's success is due in part to the performances of the cast. George Lazenby brings a new energy to the role of James Bond, and his chemistry with the other actors is excellent. Diana Rigg, who plays the character of Tilly Masterson, is equally impressive. The supporting cast is also strong, with notable performances from Robert Shaw, Jane Seymour, and Burt Kwouk.

In conclusion, "On Her Majesty's Secret Service" is a film that should not be missed. It is a thrilling and entertaining adventure that will keep audiences on the edge of their seats. The film is a testament to the enduring appeal of the James Bond franchise and is a must-watch for any fan of the series.

Gibbons tightens tough pivot

By NICK MANLEY
State News Sports Writer

When Lee Beardsley graduated last spring, taking his tremendous rushing with him, and with no outstanding RB ready to take over from him, the Spartans were left with a gaping hole at center.

After playing several with the idea of recruiting a big junior college center, the coaching staff decided to move Ed forward from tackle to center and keep the hole open. Beardsley was one of the smallest centers in the conference, and with no other center of his size ready, the move had to be made.

MU ticket manager Bill Buell has encouraged the students to purchase tickets for the home games, as he feels that Gibbons is still a part of the Spartans, and the team is in need of the finances. He said that the team is in need of support, and the students are urged to purchase tickets for the games.
