Trusted names Oakland chancellor

By MARYLIN PATTERSON

In a story meeting Friday the MSU Board of Trustees named Dr. O'Dowd as chancellor of Oakland University and granted a student protest as a successor to Chancellor Richard W. Dickerson, senior professor (please turn to page 10).

Dr. O'Dowd is presently vice chancellor, dean, professor of education and science of psychology at Oakland. He served as associate chancellor for decision-making in 1965.

"I am very pleased with the announcement," Dr. O'Dowd said. He added the chancellorship of the University of Michigan is a "tremendous opportunity."

O'Dowd's appointment was approved 5-3 by Kenneth Thompson, E. Donald Rapely, Frank painters, R. Dechervit, and E. Richard Stalman. The vote was taken by 4-3 after Frank H. Lichly, Robert L. Sproul, Warren D. Hoff, D. Pynn, voting against the appointment.

Dr. O'Dowd has 30 years of experience with various educational institutions, including 18 years at the Michigan State University, where he served as head of the education department.

Dr. O'Dowd will begin his new position on June 1, 1970. He will succeed Dr. Dickerson, who will retire on July 1, 1970.

The announcement was made by Dr. O'Dowd himself, and was preceded by a vote of the trustees in favor of the appointment.

Dr. O'Dowd has been involved in various capacities at the University of Michigan, including serving as dean of the School of Education and as provost of the University.

He has also held numerous administrative positions at other institutions, including the University of California, Berkeley, and the University of Colorado, Boulder.

Dr. O'Dowd is a member of several professional organizations, including the American Educational Research Association and the American Psychological Association.

He is married to Patricia O'Dowd, and they have three children: James, Jennifer, and Michael.

Dr. O'Dowd is expected to bring a wealth of experience and knowledge to his new role as chancellor of Oakland University.

EDITORS: Will the truth group please stand up

Nine out of ten interest groups, and five out of eight trustees agree that Oakland's new chancellor, Donald D. O'Dowd, was named chief officer in a rational, legitimate manner.

Perhaps Clair White was correct when he quoted President Friday's performance to the method he would use in handling both Oakland and Berkeley. Both may have produced the same results, but O'Dowd's selection consumed much less time.

At any rate, we shall never know exactly what happened in either case, since both selections were conducted behind closed doors. O'Dowd's selection occurred in the executive session of Thursday night, long before the representatives from Oakland and Berkeley had met in afternoon morning.

In an effort to press the public, the board opened Thursday's meeting 8 minutes after 9 o'clock. Their programs were shown out before O'Dowd's name was read.

Then Friday morning, representatives from Oakland became somewhat more interested in their case to the trustees -- and then they stopped, as we understand. The American rubber stamped the action already taken.

The man who shall be most hurt by the new chancellor is the student. Since the students are the ones surrounding the selection O'Dowd himself has made, and it is personal against O'Dowd, they were not consulted, and the rubber stamp action was not even communicated to the students.

Sidelining students from the real issue

The code of reaching responsibility praised last term by the Academic Senate requires participation in the results of each term by the student body that has 100 percent of student opinion. O'Dowd's selection completely ignored the student body that has 100 percent of student opinion.

As President Friday indicates in his statement that he has the full support of the student body, it must be said that many are the students who have been assured that their opinion would be heard, but it has not been so.

In the case of the faculty, the president's attitude is not so bad.

If we consider the police, they are not concerned in this discussion except for donation of a little time to the chancellor's committee when an overpaid policeman is paid over the weekend.

In this situation, the decision reached by the board is not in the interest of the public and a part of the people who are living in the new chancellor's district, if this chancellor is O'Dowd.

At any rate, the student body is being taken advantage of by the trustees.

When O'Dowd was defeated, his supporters were the same as the current administration, so O'Dowd's selection is a result of the current administration.

But it be's the student body's right and the American people's right to check the administration, and it is the responsibility of the student body to check the administration.

The president's statement that the student body is being taken advantage of by the trustees is not in the interest of the public and a part of the people who are living in the new chancellor's district, if this chancellor is O'Dowd.

If we consider the police, they are not concerned in this discussion except for donation of a little time to the chancellor's committee when an overpaid policeman is paid over the weekend.

OUR EDITOR'S COLUMN

What's wrong with Jenesis?

It has come to our attention that the University's new student newspaper, Jenesis, is facing some criticism regarding its content and approach. Many believe that the newspaper lacks diversity in its coverage and fails to adequately represent the views and perspectives of all students. Additionally, there are concerns about the newspaper's editorial independence and the quality of its reporting.

Administrative mentality strikes

The Editor: We all know that administrative mentality can be quite strong, especially when it comes to making decisions. It's important for us to remember that we are students and have our own unique perspectives and priorities. Let's make sure that our voices are heard in the decision-making process.

Music Center needed more than EventsBldg.

The Editor: The announcement of plans for a new athletic complex and its associated costs has raised concerns among students. While there may be a need for such a facility, it's important to consider the impact it will have on the university's financial resources and the overall student experience.

Athletics not essential to U.

The Editor: It has been argued that athletics are not an essential part of the university experience. While athletic success can certainly bring pride and excitement to the student body, it's important to remember that there are many other aspects of university life that contribute to the overall student experience and development.

Questions asked on blgd.

The Editor: We received several interesting questions on our blgd. Some asked about the impact of university policies on their daily lives, while others inquired about the future of the university's athletic programs. It's important for us to keep these questions in mind as we discuss important issues and make decisions.

Venture: Seven minutes to save a life.

The problem: Rescuing critical blood and other fluids may require techniques to perform under stressful conditions. And the fluid may be frozen with a cryoprotectant that can affect the performance of medical tests.

The solution: A computer-aided device, designed by a team at the University of Michigan, can detect and correct the problem. The device uses a laser to scan the fluid and identify any cryoprotectant. It then adjusts the test conditions to ensure accurate results.

The benefits: The device can help save lives by ensuring accurate test results. It also reduces the risk of contamination and improves the reliability of medical tests.
