Dems vote to overrule veto expected on health, ed. bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats, united in their efforts against President Nixon's 70-cent-a-gallon gas tax, voted Wednesday to override his veto on a $5.9 billion education and health budget. Nixon said the measure cost the government $2.18 billion.

The bill included $2.18 billion for a federal-state matching system and a $3.7 billion surplus backing educational and health programs, including 1971 funds for the Dept. of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

A source of House Democrats' continued opposition was the estimated $11 billion in savings the measure would cost the government. The saving is expected to be the first in a series of related reductions in the federal budget.

Chicago jury returns verdict in Panther trial

CHICAGO (AP) — An anonymous jury returned a verdict of not guilty Wednesday in the trial of two Black Panthers charged with murder but found that the killing they were "merely" a killing against the Panthers because they ordered the weapons "necessary to defend against deadly attacks by police and others." The jury deliberated more than five hours before returning its decision.

After the world of police,bloodshed, hate, anger, revolution that made up the Andrew D. C. book, the world of American hit and run, it was "not w'at we thought it was going to be," said McManus, said. "It was not what we expected."

The jury deliberated more than five hours before returning its decision.

Weathermen serve notice of 'expiration' to Police Ad. Dept.

The Weathermen, a radical splinter faction that has been involved in demonstrations and other activities, disrupted the Police Ad. Dept. of Detroit Wednesday afternoon, releasing 30 demonstrators and arm-bands, and startled the office by stating that "the office of police is the enemy of the people" and calling upon the people to fight the office of police.

The Weathermen then turned to the police office and started to attack it.

They were turned away by police officers who had been stationed outside the building, but they were able to enter the police station.

TheWeathermen adjourned their meeting and left the police station.

Michigan Senate weighs 'U' law school, vote at 20

No action taken on the 20-year-old proposal to introduce a Michigan State law school. The Senate was first proposed in 1938, but shared for three other projects after that time.

The bill, which was introduced in 1938, was the subject of much debate among Michigan politicians. The action follows a move by several state lawmakers to introduce a new law school in Michigan. The proposal was 1938-1939 that be given the state's highest priority.

"The villagers are the worst off," said the Rev. Emerson McBride, on 20th occasion to Geneva.

More than 1,000 tons of food and medicines for Biafra are stored in various locations in the U.S., Bizan said. 2,000 tons more are on Sea-Tone Island and an equal amount is en route by ship, but Bizan may never see any of it.

The United Nations, to which relief agencies involved had helped starting Biafra during the war, blocked them. Logan has reported an explosion of ammunition factory in Biafra.

James Francis Cardinal McIntyre, KS, who won acclaim as a builder of churches and schools but was criticized in an archconservative on social issues, retired Wednesday on grounds of age. He was succeeded extravesionally as head of the Los Angeles Roman Catholic Priests by Archbishop Timothy J. Manning, 60, described by fellow clergymen as more moderate. Pope Paul announced the retirement in Vatican City, ending an era in the two-million-member archdiocese marked by tremendous brick-and-mortar expansion and rank — splitting funds on social affairs.

As a step toward ending pollution, two Atomic Energy Commission scientists offered a new approach Wednesday to the problem of solid waste disposal — a "sodium torch" that would use the power of the hydrogen bomb to vaporize such things as junk cars and her into their basic elements. The basic chemical, lithium, iron and so on, could then be fed back into the nation's economic system.

Senate Democrats, fashioning their own political platform for the congressional campaign year were selected by Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania of trying to spread past shortcomings with a "campaign of good resolutions." Scott ranged over the catalogue of issues facing the nation from inflation to war, and said Republicans had used them first. The new Senate Committee, in a novel venture, is planning to confide with each of the 23 state Democratic leaders to talk about issues in their states and the concerns of their constituents.

Democrats add selves to 18-vote bandwagon

Come back with us to the days of King Arthur, the days of Camelot and the lovely Guinevere, a time for dragons to be slain and fair, young maidens to be won.

This is the time when the ambition of every young man is to be a knight. Upon reaching the age of 21, there is no doubt that the 18-year-old is destined to be defeated. The long, sullen years of apprenticeship they have undergone are at an end. Some young men have long argued over whether the age of 21 was chosen. Matthew, who has been known to 21 before, will say no, because the 21st birthday is still the legal voting age in all but four states.

Now there is to be seen in the making a precedent to correct the situation. Saturday the Michigan Democratic Campaign Committee sponsored a campaign to give 18-year-olds the vote.

This decision should be approved by all. Any movement to get 18-year-olds to the polls is to be welcomed. But the history of all past approaches to the problem can only induce a solemn attitude.

The Democrats voted just to begin a petition drive to put the 18-year-old vote question on the ballot in November. Only four years ago a similar motion lost by 500,000 votes at the polls.

This seems a strange move to some of the contributors. They are only in favor of a referendum and needlessly in favor of the question at hand.

The move is of obvious political advantage to the Democrats. They have the "knowing" that 18-year-olds want the right to vote, under 21-year-olds are not likely to move. The 18-year-old comes back to the fold indelibly stained.

Political parties have always seized upon every opportunity to appeal to their young people. And to do so in a way that suggests they have been overlooking the 18-year-old.

People pollution and populated pollution. Lack of part, social realism. And all that.

Further, in attempting to determine the barrenness of oral contraceptives, the subcommittee seems primarily concerned with whether there has been proper dissemination of the facts on possible side effects to users of the Pill.

If important effects are found in the Pill, then we would favor stricter controls on its prescription, as such more thorough physical examinations than is now the case. Further, we agree that information be given to all knowledge and that the risks involved should be widely circulated.

We do feel, however, that unless those who are interested in properly ascertaining, the data necessary to a truly reliable study of oral contraception is available. This body of knowledge is not yet available. It would then be impossible to determine whether the risks involved should be widely circulated.

To the Editor:

I would like to share with others who are interested in oral contraception, the data necessary to a truly reliable study of this method. I am currently working on a study of the oral contraceptives. This study includes the evaluation of the effects of the oral contraceptives on the menstrual cycle, ovulation, and pregnancy. The study has been designed to be as complete as possible. It will be conducted in a hospital setting and will be followed for at least 1 year. I would be interested in hearing from others who are conducting similar studies so that we may share results and methodology.

Democrats add selves to 18-vote bandwagon

Avoid panic-mongers in consideration of ‘pill’

There was very little public clamor when the Food and Drug Administration took a stand against the market at unsafe. It should be very interesting, however, to see what the popular reaction will be if they try to put the same thing with these kinds of oral contraceptives exposed in their advertising.

There is a lot of concern in the scientific community over the possibility that the effects alleged to be caused by the Pill—such as increased breast cancer, and the like—are just the result of some relatively dense evidence or a variation in the way the data are gathered. These two—procreative preparations do have a certain link to breast cancer, blood clots, and other serious ailments.

We feel, however, that there is a need of points that need to be clarified. For example, how widespread is the incidence of undesirable effects? (The incidence is one in 1000 as opposed to 1 in 10000 as suggested by medical reports). That such kinds of notices should be carried out by the state medical associations. Furthermore, it should be determined whether all women taking these medications should be at risk of danger of breast cancer and the like, or that some women are more susceptible than others, more so to those people having a physiological variant.

Students, legislator team up to fight pollution

By RANDY SMITH

Eight MSU students are among 175 Michigan college students who have been designated "Emerald Ambassadors" in a campaign to keep the earth "clean, green and beautiful." The program, sponsored by the Michigan Association of Student Councils, is expected to result in the college students' involvement in a variety of pollution control activities.

Tracy Stiles, one of the students designated, said pollution control is a problem both on and off campus. "I think pollution is a big problem on campus. I've seen a lot of litter around here," she said. "I think the students can do a lot to make our campus cleaner." Stiles said the program is a good opportunity for the students to become involved in pollution control activities.

The program, which is sponsored by the Michigan Association of Student Councils, is designed to encourage college students to become involved in pollution control activities. The students are expected to participate in a variety of activities, such as cleaning up litter on campus, planting trees, and participating in environmental education programs.

Hoopes recounts cold war mania

By ANN HODGIE
State News Staff Writer

A cold war mentality gripped the nation after World War II and eventually led to U.S. involvement in Vietnam, Governor Johnson, former governor of the Air Force, and Monday en passant. Hoopes was not acting, he was using national security during the Kennedy administration and later held the Air Force post under Donald Johnson.

"The goal was to make a little bit of a difference. Our speeches were intended to bring attention to the war," Hoopes said. "I was not seeking to prevent the war, but to focus attention on it." Hoopes said that the entire country supported the Vietnam War because of the perception of national security.

"This theory of intervention became the basis of the cold war," he said. "The principal aim of the foreign and defense committees was to prevent the war." Hoopes criticized Richard Nixon, former national security advisor, for not calling for a basic reappraisal of policy.

As the White House was one of the few to support the war, Hoopes said. "I did not support the war," Hoopes said. "It was a mistake." Hoopes accused the administration of "little or no regional safeguards for their policies.

It would seem logical to call this year's Michigan women's basketball team a dynasty. Since Gus Evans' exit, the program's stability and success has been steady. The team has a long history of success under the leadership of Gus Evans, and this year's team is no exception. The team has won numerous championships and continues to be a formidable force in college basketball. Gus Evans' influence is evident in the team's success.

Johnson quits 'S' icers

The MSU hockey team has had its share of coaching changes over the years, but the change that has had the biggest impact on the team's success has been the one made in 1993. Coach Mark Johnson has been the head coach of the team since then, and under his leadership, the team has become one of the most successful in the country. This year, the team is off to a strong start, with a record of 6-2-0. Johnson's guidance has been instrumental in the team's success.

Gymnastic meet stars top women

The Michigan women's gymnastics team has been a force to be reckoned with in recent years. This year, the team is aiming for another successful season, with a strong group of athletes leading the way. The team's success can be attributed to the hard work and dedication of the athletes, as well as the support of the coaching staff.

Manager of Union Barber Shop to retire

By JACQUES MILLER

After 39 years of service to MSU clients, Louis Whipple is retiring from his position as manager of the Union Barber Shop. Whipple came to the Union Barber Shop in 1933 and worked there for 39 years, becoming a partner in 1945.

The Barber Shop was opened on the north side of the Union in 1933 and was later moved to its present location. Since then, it has been owned and operated by various men, including Whipple.

Whipple said that he enjoyed working with the students and other customers who came to the shop.

Some need mental care

LONDON (AP) — Nearly one of every 10 British men and women will suffer from mental illness, and two-thirds of those will require treatment, the government said in a major new study released Monday.

The study found that nearly 1 in 10 adults in Britain, or about 17 million people, will suffer from a mental illness during their lifetime. The highest rates were for depression, anxiety disorders, alcohol and drug dependence.

The government has launched a major effort to improve mental health care in Britain, and the study is expected to provide important insights into the needs of people with mental illnesses.

'U' student convicted for using flag as belt

An MSU student was convicted Monday in East Lansing Municipal Court of charges of distorting and defiling the American flag.

Devin J. Mccon, 21, of MSU, was convicted of one count of armedoons violation of state law and one count of assault with intent to commit a high crime.

Mccon was convicted of using the American flag as a belt on May 25, 1969, as an effigy of the U.S. Dept. of Public Safety for violating the U.S. flag. The flag was brought to his dormitory room by a fellow student.

Judge William E. Harmon ruled that the statute covering contempt of the flag was intended to be broad enough to cover persons who obstruct the flag in any way.

Mccon was sentenced to a fine of $100 and 30 days in jail.
