WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon and the country Thursday a demonstration that they are ready to participate in 'the art of peace.' The occasion was the opening of the Nixon Library, a new museum near Yorba Linda, Calif.

Nixon, speaking at an opening ceremony, said his administration is determined to pursue a policy of peace with honor, justice and sincerity. He called for a "1971 year of better things.""The first step is the opening of this new library," Nixon said. "We are going to work together for a better world and a better future."

The library is an educational institution that will display items related to the life and work of President Nixon. It is located in Yorba Linda, Calif., where Nixon lived and worked.

WATERFORD, Mich. — The Michigan State University community today mourns the death of President Barry Rubenstein, who died at the age of 84. Rubenstein served as president of the university for 26 years, from 1969 to 1995.

Rubenstein was instrumental in the growth and development of the university, which he led through a period of significant change and expansion. He was a respected leader in higher education and a beloved figure on campus. Rubenstein is survived by his wife, Marilyn, and their three children.

"Barry Rubenstein was a visionary leader who transformed Michigan State University into a world-renowned institution," said Michiganders. "He was a dedicated and passionate educator who leaves a lasting legacy of excellence and innovation. Our hearts go out to his family during this difficult time."
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon told Congress Thursday he has new approaches to settling differences with China and in protecting allied self-reliance now among nations in a "generation of unprecedented peace."

"I believe that our new gestures have contributed to the new spirit in China and to new prospects for peace," he said. "But we must be prepared for more." Nixon said he has been working with the China plan since the last chance was canceled by the 1968 elections.

The President told the House of Representatives today that the United States had a "generation of unprecedented peace."

"We shall be faithful to our country's commitments, but we shall reduce our responsibilities and our government will be self-reliant," he said.

Nixon said he had no new plans Thursday on the question of who is and who isn't a candidate for the Senate's peace initiative.

President Nixon's statement today followed a meeting with Senator William Proxmire, D-Wis., and others to discuss the possibility of a "peace" in Vietnam. The President said he had decided to try for the same goal since the last time he was in Vietnam.

"Even though the President and his government have been honest, we are ready for the Senate unless someone has been honest," he said.

Nixon has told Milliken to cut the peace plan, he said, and whether or not he will be a candidate for the Senate, the President said.

"I would not underestimate our differences, but we are meeting with precision and purpose from an end to confrontation in an end to negotiations," he said.

MANDATORY SENTENCES:

Who will be the designer?

After only a few weeks in session, the Michigan House has passed a bill aimed at dealing severely with student and non-student demonstrative conduct in dorms, hallways, and colleges. The bill would provide a minimum fine of $250 or a jail term of 30 days for those found responsible for any violation of the student or non-student’s rights by the occupant of the facility, according to the sponsors of the bill.

Rep. Quincy Hoffman, R-Kalamazoo, has been cited with pure emotion rather than reason by his sponsors of the bill. Furthermore, the Michigan House, through its 77-26 bipartisan vote, has taken the position of the House of Representatives as a body of government.

Debate over this issue was made after the mandatory sentence was made a more serious punishment for those who committed it. The Michigan House representatives figures that this bill would be well appreciated by the conservative folks back home.

Not only is the bill imposed for the imposition of a mandatory minimum sentence, but also for its lack of inclusion of non-specific language.

The House said that if the individual prosecuted would be one who has been in a building or has been found to be acting in a manner that would be considered as a violation of the house rules. It is also the case that the occupant of the facility is given the right to impose said sentence.

The House also took into account the situation of a person who has been in a building for the purpose of the building. It is also the case that the occupant of the facility is given the right to impose said sentence.

The House also took into account the situation of a person who has been in a building for the purpose of the building. It is also the case that the occupant of the facility is given the right to impose said sentence.

In conclusion, the House of Representatives has taken position as a body of government.
Teaching tenure threatened

By LINDA WHIRLEY

Public school teachers, whose reps got a job security threat in New York City, will be faced with a tenure threat after the State Senate failed to pass a bill that would have given the power to the state legislature to repeal or amend state tenure laws.

But from MSU professors of education, the threat is not without content. The union is essentially a cornerstone in the tenure system, and if the state legislature were to pass legislation that would affect tenure, it would be a sale on work, said Ford Vocational, a member of the educational and teacher education. They can be best understood as a cornerstone in the tenure system, and if the state legislature were to pass legislation that would affect tenure, it would be a sale on work.

Red Cedar a sewage spot, MSU water researchers say

By MARION NOWAK

News Staff Writer

Pollution in the Red Cedar has become something of a campus joke. Sewage in the river, however, has become the concern of the Michigan State University Institute of Water Resources (IWR).

IWR is responsible for monitoring and collecting water quality data at a number of sites across the state. The Red Cedar is one of those sites.

Dead Cedar

Assorted bitter beauties, and other refuse litter this section of the Red Cedar River, adding to the pollution. State News photo by Jerry McAllister.

Influently at the Women's Center (MC), where during chanting heavily regulated board components are flushed into the sewer at the Harlem Street bridge.

MSU Pollution from residence halls is responsible for yet another bacterial discharge. Bacterial load of water must be demonstrated before it can enter the river, and any number of sources provide the avenue for pollution that flows into the Red Cedar on a weekly basis.

Properties, water coming from birth well has been said to be modest. In previous years, limited treatment in municipal sewage systems is the result of the water, which is stored and used in the system. It has been said that sewage does not contain as much sodium as water that undergoes primary treatment. This water would be directed in a series of four ponds on campus.

Rising through three ponds, nutrients that would normally be lost in the treatment would be diverted to the point of checking the stream. Water at various levels of nutrient content in each of the four ponds can be transferred to open as a way of water enrichment and enrichment.

The first is the Red Cedar. The second is the Ash babies which, Stephenson said, is a natural body of water and other signs of pollution.

The third is the Red Cedar stream. The study monitors on features influencing the quality of aquatic life in streams like the Red Cedar, for instance, to see a good year experience and also a good experience to plant roots while the water would week back into the river.

This study has great value in reducing the nutrient concentration of the flow. Other pollution, especially bacteria from farm activities, can be reduced by restricting municipal and industrial waste streams. "If waste isn't dumped in the Red Cedar, then when can they get? The most economically feasible solution is to treat sewage in situ fractional and dump it in the river," Stephenson said. "This level of treatment simply is not sufficient enough."

Another project at the institute involves a comparison between three water supplies and pollution levels of water quality.

The first is the clear, clean water in the Jordan River, which has been said to have had essentially little contact with municipal waste. The second is the Ash babies which, Stephenson said, is a natural body of water and other signs of pollution. The third is the Red Cedar stream. The study monitors on features influencing the quality of aquatic life in streams like the Red Cedar, for instance, to see a good year experience.

Theological to speak at student luncheon

A Washington, D.C. church mission executive will address a student luncheon today as part of a three-day conference on missions to be held at East Lansing Trinity Church. The Rev. Clyde T. Taylor, executive secretary of the American Missionary Association of Evangelism, is speaking at the conference. Since 1946 the Rev. Mr. Taylor has served as the contact in Washington for the conference.

The conference begins at 6 p.m. Friday in Trinity Church's new building on Tempers Lane.

The Saturday luncheon, beginning at 12:30 p.m., is open to all students. The Rev. Mr. Taylor will discuss the organization and its work for the church. Additional sessions of the conference will be held at 1 and 2 p.m. Trinity Church's auditorium in addition to the luncheon.

The conference will end at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, and the Rev. Mr. Taylor will talk on the subject of mission work in the church.

Church buses will transport students to and from all sessions.

Nigerian policy gets Papal nod

VATICAN CITY (AP) - A new policy of the Nigerian Catholic Church won support from the Vatican today when the Roman Catholic Church declared that it would be willing to cooperate with other religious denominations in the country's development.

The policy statement was released following a meeting between Nigerian bishops and representatives of other religious groups in Lagos.

The statement said the Nigerian Catholic Church would work with other religious groups to promote peace, justice, and development in the country.

The statement also expressed support for the government's efforts to combat corruption and fraud.

The policy statement was welcomed by leaders of other religious groups, who said they were encouraged by the Catholic Church's willingness to cooperate.

The statement also urged the government to continue its efforts to provide access to education and healthcare for all Nigerians.
Freshmen minority students given tutorial aid in basics

By JACKIE BBORDEN
State News Staff Writer

Freshmen minority students who lack the educational background to be successful students at MSU during their freshman year, can now take advantage of tutoring sessions provided by the University's Equal Opportunity program.

In the past University officials have used minority students out of the University's Equal Opportunity program to tutor incoming students. These minority students were used to tutor incoming students out of the University's Equal Opportunity program to help them survive.

The Equal Opportunity Program was established in fall of 1969 by President Martin to deal with the minority educational and social problems. The director of the program is James Stinson, director of the EOP.

The minority students are selected on the basis of their academic and social performance at the University. Mr. Stinson said that he had to look at the students' past record, the courses they had taken, and the test scores they had taken to determine whether they could be successful students at MSU during their freshman year.

Prof devises new teaching tools

By GORDON BANKS

A PhD professor's desire to provide a simplified method of teaching physics resulted in a new concept in education and a whole new line of products for a Michigan company.

The professor, Dr. John Enke, is an associate professor of electronics and physics at Michigan State University. Enke was recently appointed to the university's physics faculty and was instrumental in developing the new teaching concept, known as the "Enke-Malmstadt" method.

"The concept is based on the idea that learning physics should be a more hands-on, interactive process," Enke said. "By allowing students to build and experiment with actual equipment, they can better understand the principles of physics and develop a deeper appreciation for the subject.

Enke's method involves the use of electronic components and equipment to demonstrate and reinforce key concepts in physics. Students are encouraged to design and build their own experiments, which they can then demonstrate in class or at science fairs.

"This approach not only makes learning more engaging and enjoyable," Enke said, "but it also helps students develop critical thinking and problem-solving skills that are valuable in many other areas of their lives.

Enke is currently working with several large companies to bring his teaching concept to market.

"We have received a lot of interest from industry and educational institutions," Enke said, "and we are working to develop new products and solutions that can be used in a variety of settings.

"The Enke-Malmstadt method is a revolutionary approach to teaching physics," said Dr. Robert Malmstadt, a retired physics professor at Michigan State University. "It is a welcome change from the traditional textbook approach, and I am confident that it will have a positive impact on the way physics is taught and learned in the future."
Drama, foreign flicks span campus diversion

by ROBERT KUPPER
State Times-Review

Two plays and no less than five foreign films highlighted campus entertainment last weekend and offer a glimpse of this weekend's and next's fare. "Hamlet," "Othello," and "Romeo and Juliet," all presented by MSU's English Department, and "Mogambo," "A Shot in the Dark," and "Goldfinger," all featured at the Michigan Theater, provide a dual view of William Shakespeare's "dramatic" genius and the work of two of Hollywood's top directors, Billy Wilder and John Huston.

"Hamlet" and "Romeo and Juliet" are both open-air productions that allow the actors to present their interpretations unencumbered by the technological imperatives of the stage and the camera. "Hamlet," directed by Robert L. Overman, is completely cast in Shakespeare's original lines, with the audience seated on the grass near the stage and watching the action unfold. "Romeo and Juliet," directed by Anthony Rich, is a modern recreation of the Bard's "star-crossed" lovers, with the actors dressed in contemporary costume and the setting a modern-day teenager's bedroom. The two productions are both well-received by the audience, with "Hamlet" garnering particular praise for its strong acting and production values.

"Mogambo," "A Shot in the Dark," and "Goldfinger," on the other hand, are all commercial films that seek to entertain and thrill their audiences. "Mogambo," directed by Billy Wilder, stars Grace Kelly and Brando as a wealthy couple on safari in Africa. "A Shot in the Dark," directed by Alfred Hitchcock, stars Peter Sellers as a jewel thief who goes on the run when he is accused of murder. "Goldfinger," directed by Guy Hamilton, stars Sean Connery as James Bond, who must stop the evil Dr. No from using a gold mine to finance his nefarious plans.

Both sets of productions are well-received by the audience, with "Mogambo" and "Goldfinger" being particularly praised for their excitement and spectacle. "A Shot in the Dark," while not as action-packed as the other two films, is still enjoyed by the audience for its clever plot and humorous moments.

Overall, this weekend's cultural offerings provide a range of entertainment options for Michigan State University students, from the serious interpretations of Shakespeare to the thrilling adventures of Hollywood. It's a great weekend to be a student at MSU!

The story line of a basketball Phidippides is expected to wind with its history Saturday when late state rival Michigan comes to the CFB with an estimated crowd of 8,000 to see the Michigan State-Indiana game.

Although there's no need to add any interesting symbols to this year's meeting with the Hoyas, both teams have been in the state since the opening of the season.

In the previous meeting, the Hoyas won 108-54 over the Michigan State-Indiana game. MSU senior quarterback, Danfey, again scored the season finale.

The Hoyas have a six-game winning streak and a 9-3 overall record. MSU, which has a 9-2 record, is playing its third game of the season.

The Hoyas will be playing in the CFB on Saturday, with the Michigan State-Indiana game.

Grapplers face powerful OSU

by JOHN VIDER

State’s wrestling team will take on one of its toughest tests this weekend when it travels to the University of Oklahoma, one of the Big 12’s top teams, for a dual meet. The Sooners are currently ranked No. 11 in the nation.

The Spartans, who are currently ranked No. 13 in the nation, are looking to improve their dual meet record to 3-1 and are hoping to gain some momentum heading into the NCAA Championships, which will be held in April.

"We’ve been working hard all season to prepare for this meet," said Coach Mike Faleris. "We have a lot of young talent on our team and we’re looking to make some noise this weekend."
