House fails to override Nixon's HEW bill veto

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon vetoed the House of Representatives' effort to have the Senate override his veto of a bill that would have allotted funds to education, job training and other federal programs.

The House, with 273 votes to 132, passed a bill last week that would have appropriated $3.1 billion in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 to create a federal Delta region program, an environmental protection program and a Great Lakes pollution control program.

Nixon's veto, the 9th of the year, would have cut the bill's chances of becoming law. The House passed the bill in May, but the Senate never acted on it.

In his veto message, Nixon said the bill was "a thinly disguised attempt to have the federal government provide a substitute for sound and proper local educational programs." He added that the bill was "an unwise and unnecessary intrusion into the affairs of the states." The bill was sponsored by Rep. Robert B. Packwood of Oregon.

In a statement, Packwood said he would work to have the bill re-passed in the Senate. The bill was sponsored by Rep. Henry L. Gonzalez of Texas.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House has offered the job of director of the Defense Department's draft directorate to a Pennsylvania congressman, an official said.

The offer, which was not confirmed by the Office of Personnel Management, was made to Rep. Joseph B. DiBona, D-Pa., who is on the House Armed Services Committee.

DiBona, who is now in the center of the draft controversy in the House, had been expected to become the director, but a decision on his appointment had been delayed.

DiBona, a 30-year-old Democrat, is the son of the late Rep. Joseph B. DiBona, a former member of Congress.

The offer was made Monday by Sen. John B. Tower, R-Texas, who heads the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The appointment is expected to win Senate approval.

The Senate Armed Services Committee has been considering the nomination for several weeks.

Israeli planes strike Cairo, raid military installations

CACI (AP) - Israeli planes struck Cairo Wednesday for the first time since the 1967 war. They hit a suburb, killing three civilians and wounding 12, the Egyptian military conceded Wednesday.

Washington raided Cairo and the capital struck from the skies by Egyptian submarines again. Black clouds of antiaircraft fire dark the sky.

A government spokesman said three houses were destroyed in the raid on the suberb of Maadi, a slum of shanty homes on the Nile shore about six miles from downtown Cairo. Damaged homes also hit a base at Dekheila, about 15 miles south of Cairo on the west bank of the Nile.

The raids apparently were aimed at military installations at Maadi and Dekheila.

An official spokesman, Ahmed Hamid Abdel Magid, told reporters that the Israeli raid and others in the Suez Delta in recent weeks were aimed at civilians and were "an intentional effort to undermine the spirit of the Egyptian people." The government and the Egyptian people, he said, are "fully prepared" for any attacks from the skies.

The spokesman said the Israeli planes were engaged "in a deliberate attack on Israel's airmen and democracy." He said they were "clearly heard in the streets of the city serving from the field barracks.

We do not not the end of the military high, Magid said, and the attack may have been too sudden for the skies to be, but not all, things in a city.

Electricity in some city areas was cut, apparently as part of air operations against the front lines. Power was restored when the raid ended.

In military areas, traffic halted in accordance with air raid warnings, the spokesman said. The center of Cairo where normally heavy traffic continued and pedestrians interrupted their walking only briefly by walking around.

The Israelis said their planes hit an army camp at Maadi and a base at Dekheila. A military spokesman in Tel Aviv said all planes returned safely.

Army Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, speaking to newsmen in Tel Aviv, said that although Israeli planes are under orders to avoid civilians in Egypt, "we have no other choice in the event of an attack and we'll have to hit back and hit the Egyptian positions east of the occupied Golan Heights and return safely.

Huber, R-Troy, and Huber, R-Troy, said Wednesday he would not rule out the possibility that he would run for the Senate seat in Michigan if he were to seek the Republican nomination for the Senate seat in Michigan. Huber, R-Troy, who has announced his candidacy for the Senate seat in Michigan several weeks ago, said in an interview that he would be "non-partisan" that "I must pursue both political and non-political careers if I am to decide on the Senate seat.

The GOP nomination will likely face Democratic Sen. Philip A. Hart, whose primary victory is expected this year.

At a Wednesday news briefing, Huber said entry of other Republicans into the Senate race would not affect his candidacy. "I'm in this race to stay," Huber said, "I could only lose of George [Romney] or Lenore [both decide to run. The more the better."

Nixon’s Court nominee: racist with no record?

The Senate Judiciary Committee is in the unusual position of having to test Judge G. Harrold Carswell’s nomination to the Supreme Court. As was the case with Clement Haynesworth, many people are being polarized—strongly for or against—whatever the decision of the judges on prospective appointment are being decided.

The primary outcome of these hearings is that the integrity of the “High Court” will be seriously threatened if a man is appointed who must be horned behind that he is a racist.

Judge Carswell, as asked about his 1948 White Supreme speech, stated, I said I suppose I believed it at the time.

This seems to be concerned with such a remark. Although it may only sound a little racist, if he did believe it he didn’t—period.

I would hope that this would become no less a simple and less for the members to have stated their 1948 feelings one way or the other.

While it is impossible to know the exact extent of Nixon’s views on Supreme Court, the fact remains that the speech was delivered. This being said, are we ready to vote his nomination?

Can we “Europeanize” our NATO defense?

A battle seems to be shaping up—in the United States and Western Europe—between the substantial cutback of AEGIS from the United States and the D-Mont., has been sponsoring the roundtable discussion to the 100 senators, to reduce our forces in NATO.

The essential point made by the generall is that, if the war in Southeast Asia, why not pull out of NATO? The defense of Europe?

Proposals of State Elliot Richardson speaking for the Nixon Administration, has outlined the reasons why the United States must continue its NATO presence without any reduction. He has stressed that without a United States presence in Europe, which we must have to be the cornerstone of our supply in, we would have to be isolated.

The point is that we must have a basis for our NATO forces in NATO, in order to be able to work with them.

The problem is that we have a lot of countries that do not want to work with us.

The main point made by the generall is that, if we can “Europeanize” our NATO defense, we would be able to save a lot of money.

SHANNON PICKS UP GOPHERS' HOPE

BY MIKE MANLEY

State News Sports Writer

Everyone knew Minnesota had a good basketball coach in Bill Fetich, but nobody really believed the Gophers had the talent or the depth to challenge for the Big Ten championship. But after last Saturday's 58-47 State win over Minnesota, 85-70, Gold Gaudets were jacked seven ways from Sunday, getting off-the-rack playing for coach John Sproson, who had never tasted a win in his past 62 Gopher games.

Sproson's 1974-75 seniors, who boasted a 57-56 two-day win over Michigan the previous weekend, evened their season record at 10-10 with a 30-20 victory in the Big Ten.

With his two senior backcourt men, Bob Sobota and John Hoppe, both coming off the bench, the Gophers erupted for 17 rebounds. Shannon, a junior transfer who had learned his basketball on the rugged playgrounds of Brooklyn, N.Y., scored 13 points in the second half of the MAAC tournament to help the Gophers to a 109-72 victory.

In the 6-3 junior, Sproson found a weapon to help his team. Earlier in the season the 6-3 junior joined a scoreless bench injury that kept him out of Minnesota's first two confessional games. Before the injury, he had scored 14 points in the Gopher's opening game of the season.

To Shannon, it was just another good game on the court. Minnesota, another good basketball team that may end up in the NCAA tournament.

"I think we played very well today," Shannon said. "I just had a good feel about it."
