Academic Council OKs anti-discrimination report

By DELCRES MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

The Academic Council approved an amendment to the University's Anti-Discrimination Policy at its meeting last week that will be presented to the University and the Senate by the Council's Committee on the Status of the University.

The amendment, which was passed on a voice vote, will establish a new committee to oversee the implementation of the anti-discrimination policy. The committee will be charged with ensuring that the policy is enforced fairly and effectively, and will be responsible for investigating allegations of discrimination.

The amendment will also require that all faculty and staff be trained in the policy, and that a pamphlet explaining the policy be distributed to all students.

In addition, the amendment will provide for a review of the policy every five years, with the opportunity for the University and the Senate to make changes as needed.

The Academic Council will discuss the amendment during its next meeting, which is scheduled for February 9.
Coed dorm floor of social activists proposed

By DAVID BABBETT
State News Staff Writer

Democrat residents of the dormitory, Michigan dormitory residents of the four-story residence hall have requested a coed dorm floor, which is seen as an opportunity to explore the possibility of living with others of different and equal sex. Various social activists and groups have expressed their motivations and concerns regarding this change. The dormitory residents, many of whom have lived in single-sex dorms, have raised concerns about the impact of this proposed change. They have discussed the potential benefits and drawbacks of a coed dorm floor, including concerns about privacy, safety, and the overall social dynamic.

The New University Conference (NUC) will sponsor a speech at 7 tonight byex-student chair by Barbara C. Garske. "Garske was a former anti-University of Michigan group,沙滩头."

Garske said that in the past, the group has focused on student life and the issues that affect students. She explained that the speech will provide students with an opportunity to hear from someone who has been a part of the University of Michigan community and to discuss the challenges and opportunities that students face today. The speech will be held in the Student Union at 7 tonight.

Garske will discuss the history of the group and its role in the University of Michigan community. She will also provide her perspective on the current state of student life and the future of the University of Michigan. The speech is open to all students, faculty, and staff and is free of charge. Cheer director accused of racism

By JEANNE S. FULTON

An investigational force of the Black Liberation Front (BLF) raised new questions about black leadership procedures on campus.

In a surprise attack, the BLF took action against Miss HAGDORN, a black cheerleader, on Tuesday. The BLF, which is known for its radical activities, has frequently drawn attention to its causes. Tuesday's action was a full investigation of theBLF, which has a policy of pressuring black leaders and defining the situations and their meanings.

"We feel that we can no longer tolerate the black leadership's silence and the apparent lack of black leadership. We have therefore decided to take action against Miss HAGDORN," the BLF statement read.

In response, the university administration announced that it would investigate the charges. "We will take all necessary steps to ensure that fair procedures are followed," the statement said.

The investigation will involve students, faculty, and staff. The administration will also consult with federal authorities.

The BLF has a history of engaging in confrontational activities, often targeting individuals and institutions perceived to be associated with police brutality and systemic racism. Their actions are often characterized by slogans, disruptions, and other forms of protest. The BLF's targets have included educational institutions, law enforcement agencies, and private businesses.

The investigation will be closely monitored by the campus community and civil rights organizations. The administration has committed to transparency in the process and has pledged to take any necessary steps to ensure the safety and well-being of all individuals involved.

As the investigation unfolds, the university will continue to provide updates and ensure that the rights of all individuals are respected. The administration remains committed to fostering an inclusive and equitable campus environment where all voices are heard and valued.

The BLF's action against Miss HAGDORN is part of a broader campaign to challenge institutional power and to highlight systemic racism within the university. The student body, faculty, and staff are encouraged to engage in discussions and take part in the investigation to ensure that the process is fair and just.

The administration is dedicated to upholding the values of inclusivity, diversity, and equity. The university remains committed to providing a safe and welcoming environment for all students, faculty, and staff. The investigation will be conducted in accordance with the university's policies and procedures, and the results will be made public as soon as possible.

The BLF's actions are a reminder of the ongoing struggle for racial justice, and the university is committed to working towards a more equitable and inclusive campus community.

North Vietnam charged Tuesday that when U.S. forces attacked a populated area in its east coast province of Quang Ngai, it made no request for a council meeting. The letter was sent among council members, Israel charged armed forces with over 60 attacks on the border in January.

A military official in Thailand has denied reports that U.S. troops have been withdrawn from the country. "We have not withdrawn any troops," the official said. "We are maintaining a strong presence in Thailand for the security of the region." The Thai government has been under pressure to expel U.S. forces in recent weeks due to protests against U.S. military operations in the region.

The United Nations Security Council today called for an international meeting on the issue of U.S. military bases in the region. "We must find a solution to this issue," said the head of the council.

This was the third meeting in a row that the council has called for an international meeting on the issue. The previous two meetings failed to produce any concrete results.

The UN Security Council is scheduled to meet again next week to discuss the issue further. The council has been under pressure to take action on the issue of U.S. military bases in the region, which has been a source of tension between the United States and several countries in the region.

Treasury Secretary David Kennedy gave the stock market a powerful shot in the arm Tuesday with a speech that offered a brighter picture of the economy than many investors had been expecting. "This is a new day," Kennedy declared. "We have a path forward that leads to stability and growth." The speech helped to boost the stock market by a gain of 1.3 points to a gain of 13.1.

The Federal Reserve announced that it would keep interest rates near zero for the foreseeable future. "We will continue to monitor the economy closely and take additional steps as needed," said the chairman of the Federal Reserve.

The Federal Reserve's decision is likely to provide a boost to the economy, as it will make it easier for businesses and consumers to borrow money. The decision is also a sign that the Federal Reserve is committed to supporting the economy.

Cheerleading controversy

The University of Michigan has launched an investigation into allegations of misconduct by a former cheerleader. "We take these allegations very seriously," said the university's president. "We will conduct a thorough and fair investigation to determine the facts." The university has not released any details about the allegations.

The investigation will be conducted by an independent third party. The university has also committed to cooperating fully with any authorities who request information.

The Look of 1970

The Look of 1970 was characterized by a focus on simplicity and functionality. Women's fashion featured A-line dresses, loose-fitting jumpers, and casual separates. Men's fashion included bell-bottomed jeans, platform shoes, and leisure suits. The era was also marked by a rise in the popularity of disco music and social movements such as the Women's Liberation Movement and the anti-war movement. The Look of 1970 was a time of change and transformation, with people seeking to express their individuality and challenge societal norms. The era was marked by a spirit of experimentation and a desire for freedom.

Peace Corps gets culture test

By STEPHANIE LOWE

Better understanding between nations in Africa is the most important objective of the Peace Corps in French-speaking Africa, D. Du Bois, member of the American Information Field Staff (AIFS).

Du Bois, speaking recently to Delta Phi Epsilon, foreign service honorary society, emphasized that the present adjustment Peace Corps makes in its programs in Africa involves the environment.

The transition from a predominantly white society to a predominantly black one causes certain problems in cultural adjustment, he said. A critical period lasting from three months to a year after arrival involves the Peace Corps volunteer in his environment.

Some of the major problems which Peace Corps people have seen the adjustment to understand comes with adoption of the environment in which they find themselves.

Other problems include adjusting political involvements and some association with local American contact groups and adjusting to a different set of social norms.

"After seeing some of the most beautiful capitals in the world, many Peace Corps volunteers have an adjustment to understand in the country something of a shock," Du Bois said. "The first highways and buildings cities of the country look like the city and suddenly you see the bus country. Housing is much less developed, economic conditions much poorer and the people less prosperous."

Peace Corps volunteers are trained in French-speaking Africa to speak to teachers, community development leaders, and other local leaders, Du Bois said.

"The Peace Corps volunteer is taught to speak to teachers, community leaders and other local leaders," Du Bois said.

Apprehension and arrest of drug users is a problem, Seidler said. Spanish speakers younger who want to sell and don’t take chances, he said. Even when police arrest suspects on drug charges, there are many legal loopholes that allow the police to break down the barriers.

Drugs used to escape from life

By LINDA KNISBE State News Staff Writer

Amidst a talk of regulated use of drugs--from within to be seen as the solution to problems--an East Lansing attorney Monday night said that drug laws may cause more problems than solutions.

"Excessive law problems in the county in 1960," he said. "Excessive law problems led to the law being ineffective. The law was not written to deal with the drug problem."

In 1950, only four warrants were issued for marijuana charges, but by 1960 there were 15 warrants issued, Seidler said. The increase is obviously due to the social acceptance of the drug's use among a large number of high school students who have been stabilized in the drug culture.

In 1980, the marijuana problem is mixed with other offenses in the 'white collar' and child welfare cases, Seidler said.

Seidler estimated that nearly 50 per cent of MSU students use marijuana once or twice.

"I attended a meeting of the National Police Officers Association, and they are putting a lot of emphasis on the drug problem," Seidler said. The increase is probably due to the social acceptance of the drug by college, high school, and other students, Seidler said.

Winged Spartans teach members to fly airplanes

Perhaps you are a part of the more than 50 per cent of the adult population in the United States who have never experienced the excitement and thrill of an airplane flight. Since 1946, however, over 2,000 students, faculty and staff have learned to fly while at MSU. The promotion of aviation is the chief goal of the MSU Flying Club, Winged Spartans, Inc., which is one of the University’s few student organized and operated corporations. The Winged Spartans Flying Club was founded originally in 1946 by a group of coeds who shared a common interest in flying. The club is set up and run to facilitate the member who is learning to fly. The membership consists of several husband and wife pilot teams, plus eight active women pilots. Most of the club’s instructors are MSU students, ranging in age from 19 to 35.

The Winged Spartans Cessnas have been all over the United States, to Canada, Mexico and the Bahamas. Members wanting an airplane for long periods of time may enter a written bid at least two weeks in advance of their desired flight.

Many club members enjoy taking their dates for a flight over the campus, and some even fly on ski-weekends. club members are also involved in participating in flying meets, and occasionally holding an inter-club meet of its own. The club has participated in such worthwhile activities as cooperating with the MSU Volunteers to take over 100 grade children for airplane rides.

Travel club hopes to break barriers between cultures

By JACKIE BORDEN
State News Staff Writer

Glarus AC/ARZIV, a newly formed club at MSU, has a different approach to student life. The goal of the club is to break recycled barriers by investigating foreign cultures on a firsthand basis. It was formed for entry by seven students, including Terry Bouch, a former student who has seen others abroad.

And the club offers “WORLD BREAD” for the first time. “I would urge students to break down barriers,” says senior Anthony Cline.

The transportation includes a flight from Kalamazoo to the Mexican border. The remaining part of the trip is a bus equipped with huts and other equipment needed to represent the geography of the New Land. As a part of the trip, the participants are expected to read the literature on the journey and to report on the experiences of the trip. Members of the Travel Club also are expected to provide a written account of their travel experiences.

The club expects to conduct an open forum on the topic of the trip. Members include those who have participated in the trip or members who have had the opportunity to participate in similar experiences.

 complacency with Allen as a consultant. I am consequently less than impressed with “Take the Money and Run.”

The film, even to Allen fans, must appear more successful to project the subject than the character himself. It is extremely funny and deeply satisfying when it operates with an equally offbeat display ofRoute me in a car. The already-stated budgets are inadequate and the tone which Virgil and the few other comedians who talk as though they were brothers is not worth mentioning. This is an attempt to bring off a comedic feature in which the characters have no depth. It is a mixture of Virgil’s parents who wear mustaches and big round glasses to protect their faces.

'U' construction history: money and the state

By STEPHANIE LOWE and the addition to Power Plant B, has been the subject of heated debate. The proposal for an addition to the State Capitol was first discussed in 1968, when Governor George Romney announced that a new addition would be constructed. The proposal was met with resistance from some officials who believed that the state should focus on other projects.

The proposed addition to the State Capitol was designed by the firm of Skidmore, Owings and Merrill. The design featured a modernist style with glass and steel structures.

The construction of the addition began in 1969 and was completed in 1971. The addition included a new wing for the State House, a new wing for the Senate, and a new wing for the Governor's Office.

The addition was funded through a combination of state bonding and federal funding. The state provided $20 million for the project, while the federal government provided $30 million.

The addition was completed in 1971, and the State Capitol was officially opened later that year.

The addition was controversial at the time, with some critics arguing that it was too modern and not in keeping with the historical architecture of the State Capitol. However, the addition has since become an important part of the State Capitol complex and is considered an important example of modernist architecture.

AWS CONCEPT

The addition to the State Capitol has been used as an experiment in urban planning, with a focus on creating a more open and accessible state government. The addition includes a new rotunda, a new public space for the Capitol, and a new connection between the old and new sections of the Capitol.

The addition has also been used as a test for new construction techniques, with a focus on sustainability and energy efficiency. The addition includes features such as solar panels, wind turbines, and geothermal systems.

The addition to the State Capitol has been a significant landmark in the history of urban planning and construction in the United States. It has served as a model for similar projects around the country and is considered an important achievement in the field of architecture.

NOMINATIONS

teacher-scholar awards
and excellence-in-teaching citations
for
graduate teaching assistants

The undersigned committee solicits nominations for Teacher-Scholar Awards and Excellence-In-Teaching Citations from faculty and students. Teacher-Scholar Awards are given to faculty drawn from the ranks of instructor and assistant professor who have earned the respect of students and colleagues for their dedication to and skill in undergraduate teaching. To be considered for the award, the candidate must have served on the faculty for at least three years, but no more than five academic years. Excellence-In-Teaching Citations are awarded to outstanding graduate teaching assistants who have distinguished themselves by the care they have given and the skill they have shown in meeting their classroom responsibilities. To be considered for the citation, the candidate must have held a half-time graduate teaching assistantship for at least one academic year. Nominees must meet the standard of distinction which is an accurate measurement of responsibility for the conduct of the undergraduate course.

Nominations should be submitted to the Committee on their behalf by the Department Chair, faculty advisor, student, or any other interested party.

The deadline for nominations is March 31, 2023.

Applications can be found on the Office of the Provost's website.

Nominations must be submitted by the end of the academic year.

The committee will meet in April to review all nominations.

The committee will meet in June to announce the recipients of the Teacher-Scholar Awards and Excellence-In-Teaching Citations.

For more information, please contact the Committee Chair at provost@msu.edu.

"I' Cabinet seeks opinions from public"

By CYNTHIA NEAL

The Cabinet is soliciting public comments to help determine the course for the upcoming school year.

Grundfald added that he would like the cabinet to "be a public hearing type of thing." He also mentioned that he would like to hear from the public regarding their desires and concerns about the upcoming school year.

Grundfald emphasized the importance of including the public in the decision-making process and that it is essential to have a wider range of opinions and perspectives to ensure that the final decisions are well-reasoned and effective.

The public is invited to submit their comments in writing or by sending an email to cabinet@msu.edu. The comments will be reviewed and discussed by the cabinet during their meetings.

The cabinet meeting will be a meeting of the public to discuss and consider various proposals and ideas. Grundfald stated that he would like to hear from the public regarding their desires and concerns about the upcoming school year.
