Scott airs possibilities of U.S. withdrawal plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said Tuesday that he would no longer seek new troop redeployments in Vietnam by waiving U.S. troop limitations.

During a speech before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, South said new policies would not increase American forces in Vietnam, but only act to improve the situation in Vietnam.

South added, however, that in some cases U.S. troops may remain in Vietnam for a "brief period."

South's speech was key to the United States making a decision on the Vietnam issue.

Cleveland police chief William E. Ellington, saying he was under a cloud, tendered his resignation Tuesday night after he was charged with televising a public relations officer to the TV set of his residence.

Ellington, 50, categorically denied the false charges made by a Demon attorney. He said he resigned because the allegations would cast a spotlight on how his police force is run.

Nixon allots anti-pollution funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has ordered federal agencies to spend $30 million in the next two years and $350 million to stop polluting the air and water of the United States.

The president's order was issued in response to a report by the government's pollution control agencies which found existing air and water quality standards not up to par.

"The action is not only needed," Secretary of the Interior James R. Watt said, "but it is justifiable in terms of our national economic well-being, poverty, and overall quality of life." Watt added that the order would also "take the edge off" the expected increase in federal gasoline taxes.

The order requires federal agencies to spend $30 million in the next two years and $350 million thereafter to reduce pollution.

Nixon's order was welcomed by environmentalists, who called it a "major step forward" in the fight against pollution.

Some critics, however, said the order was "insufficient" and called for even more drastic action.

ACADEMIC COUNCIL

U' delays city tax stand

By MARYLIN PATTERSON

The Academic Council of the University of Michigan is delaying a vote on the city tax stand for two years.

The council's decision was reached at a meeting Thursday night.

"The council feels that the city tax stand is not in the best interest of the university," said council President Robert W. Dearborn.

The council had been considering a vote on the city tax stand for the past two years.

The city of Ann Arbor has been asking the university to agree to the city tax stand, which would provide the city with an additional $1 million annually.

"The council feels that the university should not be forced to agree to the city tax stand," said Dearborn.

The council had been divided on the issue, with some members favoring the city tax stand and others opposing it.

The council's decision was delayed for two years, giving the university time to consider other options.

The council's decision was praised by some, who said it was a "wise" decision.

However, others said the decision was "unsurprising" and "predictable."
Repression: the death knell for democracy?

A running battle of repression is taking place across the land, engineered in the tradition of law and order, to maintain a great white majority. The repression is, in fact, the means by which the ruling class, by breaching the fear of all that is foreign to the majority, fear of blacks, fear of individuality, fear of nationalism among minorities.

In the past, the movement was limited to ecumenical politicians, backwoods Americans, and occasional politicians. But the situation has changed: the various political parties are now all involved. The fear of blacks, fear of individuality, fear of nationalism among minorities.

The Democrats have, as a rule, avoided so-called repressive measures, as they determine their candidates. Not in recent years

Honors College plans to revise admission policy

By ROSEANNE BAUME
State News Staff Writer

In the next few years the Honors College will attempt to make its admission policy more stringent and more fair than that of other Michigan universities. The college foresees a 10 to 25 percent increase in the number of students who will be accepted each year. Honors College Director Frank R. Blackington said, "In the past we've always admitted, if not desired, professional recommendations of students. We've always had a flexible admission policy." Honors College foresees only those students with a 3.0 GPA from Blackington, and this rule was always flexible enough to accept students with a high skill, but a slightly lower academic score. He said he foresees a shift in attitudes of the admissions college away from the "numeral" system. These opinions prove to be a more adequate judgment of abilities. They can take into account the differences in college courses and they are not seen automatically as an "average" or "average" student.

The Honors College was established by the faculty in 1956 in response to the pressure that individual departmental programs had received. Its goal is to encourage the development and advancement of undergraduate students of superior academic ability by helping to establish special honors courses and allowing students to plan their own curricula.

If this happens, he said, the college will make a greater effort to obtain "numeral" recommendations in the future, rather than to get them on a 9:0 and 9:9 basis.

Triangular priority tops 'U' needs

BY STEPHANIE LONG

The planning and financing of buildings on campus is a difficult and complex task of determining priorities. No one person is responsible for the initial stages of planning, but the various campus-building projects can be identified. The long-range planning projects are listed. All MICHIGAN admissions and department or college needs are involved.

MICHIGAN's capital needs are through 1975 are now before the legislature. These plans, which are not yet final, indicate a need for new construction, renovation and new facilities. The capital needs are divided into those that are immediate and those that are long-range.

The immediate needs are those that are necessary for the current school year. These needs include repairs and maintenance of existing buildings, as well as the construction of new buildings.

The long-range needs are those that are not immediately necessary, but are important for the future of the university. These needs include the construction of new buildings, the renovation of existing buildings, and the purchase of land for future development.

The planning and financing of these projects is a complex process, and involves many different departments and agencies. It is important to ensure that the priorities of these projects are accurately reflected in the capital needs of the university.

New state law to control rabies

By CAROL CORRINE
State News Staff Writer

A new state law to control rabies became effective Jan. 1 and signed by the governor last year. The law, which was prompted by the growing threat of rabies to public health and safety, is intended to reduce the incidence of rabies in Michigan.

Rabies is a deadly disease that infects the central nervous system of animals and humans. It is caused by a virus that is transmitted to humans and animals through the saliva of an infected animal. The virus is typically transmitted through a bite or scratch from an infected animal, which can include dogs, cats, bats, and other wild animals.

The new law requires that all dogs and cats over the age of six months be vaccinated against rabies. The state now has a program providing low-cost rabies vaccinations to help control the spread of the disease.

"The new law is a significant step in protecting the health and safety of Michigan residents," said Dr. John Schmitt, Michigan's state veterinarian. "It's important that all pet owners ensure their pets are vaccinated against rabies to help prevent the spread of this deadly disease."

With now only a month left before MSU defended its Big Ten wrestling title, Spartan Coach Randy Peck has begun thinking of the progress his team has made.

"The team has been gradually improving in every facet, and I think we're performing well in all three areas," Peck said.

"Overall, I think we've been progressing fairly well," Peck said. "We've made some progress, but there's still plenty of hard work ahead."

Just like the wrestlers, Michigan State has also been piecing together its season by gradual improvement.

"Overall, we've made some progress," Peck said. "We've made some improvements, but we still have plenty of hard work ahead."

Board approves changes proposed by U-M Union

The Union Board at the University of Michigan's most recent meeting was approving some changes in the Michigan Regent's proposal for a Student Union (USU). The most significant element of student activity was the approval of the Student Union, which provided the only student facilities available in the Ann Arbor area. This has about 150 members for games, as well as numerous music and food service facilities.

However, with the extensive growth of other housing and food service facilities, this impact has been lessened. In a case that the Michigan Union have also supported the USU for the past couple of years, such as being waged for employees and a decline in business. These problems are the result of changes within the University. The union will continue to provide services and facilities to the University. The union has been working in cooperation with the Student Union to provide services and facilities to the University.
