TRICKS, An Easy Rider: vote 'NO' on Issue Five

We do not want to say that the ASMSU Board is trying to run a game on the student body -- but it sure looks like it.

The proposal to raise the student tax from fifty cents to one dollar should have been rejected because of the issue concerning the restructuring of the ASMSU Cabinet. At best, this innovative plan seems to be designed because it engenders the passage of the needed budget changes and, at worst, it represents an attempt to punish the tax by a rider on the reform package.

If ASMSU has a number of good reasons for requesting this tax hike -- as is their assertion -- then the burden of proof is upon them. Thus far, nothing of a convincing nature has been presented by the Board of the student tax.

The tax should be a separate issue. Granted, if it were forced to stand alone it may very well have failed; however, if the Student Board has the power to refuse to present it to the Student Senate, then they feel the necessity to get their legislation passed by taxers.

Married students need minority voice on Board

There is a pressing need on a campus as diverse as this one to ensure proper representation to significant minority groups and their special interests. Section 2, subsection 22(a) of the ASMSU constitution takes a major step in this direction by providing for the first time a seat on the Board of directors to be filled by an 'open seat' candidate who someday may be married to a student of another race, creed, or color. This is an historic step, but one that is a long overdue.

Neither do we intend to see the minority voice as a matter of social interest alone, but rather as a matter of social responsibility. The majority voice is a necessity in order to prevent the over representation of one group in the Board and the exclusion of another.

In the case of married students, the minority voice is a necessity. Marlins of one race, creed, or color is an essential power in the Board of directors.

...so vote, already!

Whether right or wrong whether beneficial to students or detrimental to the needs of students; whether the intent is to promote or to suppress, the intent is a cloak of trickery. The student referendum on the proposed constitution is on Tuesday and it will be held only if the majority consents by their votes on this subject constitute one of the constituencies.

Blacks History Today

From King George Ill to our 200th birthday

EDITORIAL:

The American Negroes are in the forefront of the struggle for democracy and freedom. The Negroes have always been at the center of the fight for civil rights, and have made significant contributions to the nation's history.

The dates between 1763 and 1776 are significant ones in the history of the nation. The American Revolution began and ended during this period. The struggle for independence from Great Britain continued until 1783, when the Treaty of Paris officially ended the war.

The following are some important events that occurred during this period:

1. The appointment of John Adams as Minister to France
2. The signing of the Treaty of Paris
3. The establishment of the United States
4. The drafting of the Constitution

These events marked the beginning of a new nation, one that would one day become the most powerful country in the world.

Today we celebrate the 200th anniversary of our country's birthday. It is a day to reflect on our history and remember the sacrifices made by those who came before us.

Marvin Pierson, assistant to the provost at the University of Michigan, has announced the formation of a new Oakland County University of Michigan deferral committee. The committee will be responsible for evaluating the eligibility of students who wish to defer their studies.

Pierson explained, however, that the committee's decision on whether or not to grant deferrals is based on several factors, including the student's academic performance and their personal circumstances.

The committee will also consider the impact of the deferral on the student's future plans and career goals. Additionally, the committee will evaluate the impact of the deferral on the student's family and community.

Pierson emphasized that the committee is committed to making decisions that are in the best interest of both the student and the university. The committee will work closely with the student to ensure that they understand the impact of the deferral and to help them develop a plan for returning to the university.

The committee will meet on a regular basis to review applications and make decisions on a case-by-case basis. The committee is open to feedback and suggestions from students, parents, and the community.

The committee's decision will be based on a thorough evaluation of the student's academic performance, personal circumstances, and future plans. The committee will consider the impact of the deferral on the student's family and community.

Pierson concluded, "We want to ensure that students who need to defer their studies have the support and resources they need to make the best decision for their future. We will work closely with students to help them achieve their goals and return to the university when they are ready."
Study finds abortion laws unsuited to needs

By MARIAN NORDAEI
State News Staff Writer

Abortions laws are both harmful and unsuitable for society's needs and highly ineffective, David Michaelman, a psychology graduate student, has found in his dissertation work.

As a research professor at Michigan State University, Michaelman, aimin, has been working on an extensive series of studies on abortion since 1969. His findings, he feels, indicate that the present laws on abortion are not adequate.

Michaelman's survey shows that the public wants liberalization of abortion laws at least to include cases of rape, possible deformities in the child or the mother's life.

The need to legislate social mores, which allow the individual to make personal decisions, he said, refers more to a Catholic priest who said "it was essential with some pragmatic rationalization in mind." He said "the need was to look at the personal moral considerations and it is especially felt in such areas as abortion, birth control, and sterilization.

"Too much of the hoo-ha (concerning abortion) is rooted in individual morals. We're working out between social mores and individual ethics, now we're finding the disconnection between the two."

Still looking for that elusive first win against a Big Ten team, Michigan will host Wisconsin at 8 p.m. at the Fieldhouse.

In the midst of a five-game Big Ten losing streak, they desperately need a home victory against the Badgers to stay above .500 in Big Ten play. Michigan is 1-6, while Wisconsin is 5-3 and in fifth place.

Michigan, after coming back from 35 down to put Notre Dame out of sight in the final 90 seconds of the game to win, 87-85, on a rebound of Star Jackson's free throw, should be able to use the momentum from that game to win tonight.

Wisconsin has been slow to start out the season and has struggled against some top teams, but they've come back with a win against Purdue last week.

This is a good opportunity for Michigan to get back on the winning track. Coach John Beilein's team has shown they can come back from adversity and it will be important for them to do so tonight.

Michigan will need to focus on their defense and limit Wisconsin's scoring opportunities. They will also need to establish a dominant presence in the paint, as they have done in recent games.

Wisconsin's top players, including Brad Davison and Keita Bates-Diop, will be key to their success.

Beilein will likely go with a more experienced lineup, as he has in recent games, to try and get the best possible performance from his team.

Michigan has shown they can come back from big deficits, and with the right mindset and focus, they can beat Wisconsin tonight.

Wharton's assistant muses over nine month syndrome

By ANN HODGE
State News Staff Writer

Dr. Hertha Ballard, assistant to President Wharton, said she is beginning to feel like a "virus of a nine month syndrome." Ballard came to campus in January 1966, and worked with John Halren only nine months before MSU's top administrator of 20 years left for Washington. At the time, Ballard was a doctoral candidate; she is now a full professor and Wharton's assistant, a post so new that Ballard herself has had only two years to adjust to it.

"Accused slayer demands hearing"

He was charged with first degree murder in the stabbing death and assault of Nona Jane Bagby, 21, of Allen Park, whose party nude and从名 body was discovered in a field Jan. 35.

The other two changes were from rape of one and attempted rape of another from State College court this week on charges of murder, but have been released pending further investigation.
