Nixon signs late hour act ordering rail strike delay

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon signed a late hour act today ordering a 10-day extension of the nationwide rail strike. Nixon, who called the extension a "last-minute" decision, signed the bill just before 9 P.M. at the White House.

The measure, which was supported by the American史诗transportation system, the National Association of Railroad Employees, and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, extends the strike deadline for another 10 days, to June 25.

Leaders of the major labor unions involved in the strike had been expected to meet with Administration officials today to discuss a possible settlement.

Nixon, in a statement today, said he was "deeply concerned" over the continuing violence in the nation's capital, and added: "I have come to the conclusion that we should not allow ourselves to be used as a scapegoat for the problems our country faces."

He said the bill had been signed "in the interest of the public welfare." The president added: "I am confident that this legislation will provide the necessary authority to bring about a peaceful solution to this vital national problem."

Not until you find out just how rewarding a career in Computer Sales or Systems Support is with RCA.

Computer Salesmen at RCA are selling packages that are 18 months ahead of the major competitor.

First we have the Octoputer. It combines time-sharing and regular processing in a new remote computer package.

Then we introduced Octoputer's big brother—October II. It boosts overall programming efficiency as much as 40%. It tackles bigger jobs at three times the speed. And, it can support over 150 remote terminals.

If this sounds good, you should know we intend to double our sales force in 1970.

We also intend to increase our business at twice the rate of the competitive industry.

Our sales force is drawn from a variety of majors—a technical degree is not required—in fact, one of our most successful salesmen was a music major.

Also, you might prefer being with us. What is diverse, technologically sophisticated, and highly concerned with human values at Computer Sales sounds a lot like what we'd like to talk to you.

Ruling Peruvian generals expound two papers

Many political observers in Lima rallied to find that the junta, which is already in power, is being replaced by a new junta. The junta is expected to present a new cabinet to the legislature, which is expected to be appointed by the new junta. The new cabinet will be composed of members of the new junta.

LIMA (AP) — Peru’s ruling junta declared Monday that it would not allow the junta, which has been in power since last month, to remain in power. The junta said it would present a new cabinet to the legislature, which is expected to be appointed by the new junta.

The official government newspaper El Peruano approved the junta’s decision. The newspaper, which is normally published daily, did not publish the decision Monday.

The junta is expected to present a new cabinet to the legislature, which is expected to be appointed by the new junta. The new cabinet will be composed of members of the new junta.

The Pentagon announced Wednesday that it would no longer award contracts to companies that do not meet certain criteria. The decision was made in response to a Justice Department investigation into the use of military contracts.

The decision to drop contracts was part of a broader effort to improve oversight of military spending, which has been a major issue in recent years. The Pentagon has been under scrutiny for its handling of military contracts, and the Justice Department has been investigating potential fraud in the military procurement process.

An MDi graduate announced Wednesday he will run for the State District House of Representatives by Philip Pinnel, B.L. Lansing, State D. B. Lansing, 11, 1973. The candidate is a veteran of the College Life Insurance Co., will be seeking his first public office.

Pinnel will run for the state House seat held by Bob. Harold Haggart, B.L. Lansing.

The decision to seek the nomination was a natural outgrowth of increasing involvement in our governmental processes from my voluntary activities.

Pinnel said, "I'm not trying to be a legislator in a position to do things."

Pinnel said he had not decided what issues he would support if elected to the legislature. He said he would support issues that he believed were important to the state, including education and transportation.

He said university administrators should make decisions in the best interest of the students, and that if he were elected, he would work to improve the state's education system.

What was accomplished by attacking children?

A mob of about 200 white men and boys, armed with clubs, rocks, and sharp instruments, converged on some children in three school houses in town, near Lamon, Illinois, and Carolin, High School last Tuesday. It took mere minutes for the men to round up the children and subdue the crowd with the aid of other men who were injured, including some of the black children.

The group was led by local restaurant owner Jery Beal, head of the Definitive City Committee of Choice. Beal had called for whites to boycott all county schools, but when the boycott appeared not to be immediately successful, the desired results were violence and fear, he confessed.

Apparently part of the great silent majority, the Negroes fled the New Left. The similarity between the tactics of Brown from the far left is striking. Peaceful means were used for the first time, at least, for two weeks. Then violence was declared, and it was successful. Instead of store windows, tenement children are shot, not just arrested, instead of property, private life...

The same people that clamor for repression on campus and in the ghettos have now committed acts exactly like those by which they are supposedly appalled. The same people that stand behind George Wallace's cry for law and order have performed acts of disorder. Apparently the majority has responded to Spino's call to arms.

The young radicals of the front pages; however, their manner of response may be somewhat different each time. It is ironic that a group of rural Southerners is thrown to the wolves of New Left that have adopted the same technique.

Even more ironic, though, is the fact that the demonstration occurred on Tuesday in Lamon. None of the demonstrations was authorized by the state. It is truly strange for, in campus and ghettos alike, the use of all available buddy weapons filled.

What will truly be interesting, though, is the reaction of the public to the mob of rapists. For the children, for black children with as much as the demonstrators. The disturbance could not have been spontaneous; somebody had to have planned it.

The Lamar incident stands as poster's material for the standard of some of the people in America. The community, both local and national, will hope only that the actions of the citizens of Lamar is not representative of all the citizens in the South of this country. We can only hope that this is not the first of such incidents.

The problem is that many expressed fear, fear that theirs would only be an isolated incident. It wasn't. Many hoped Bexley's would only be an isolated incident.

It wasn't. We hope that Southern whites have now finally freed themselves to find much other new means besides attacking innocent children. Always stick but must it become prevalent?

Did you the word “liberating” in your conversation, the total number of people who belong to the “liberating” cause? The thing is, the people who belong to the “liberating” cause are not those who have been told by others what they should do. They belong to the “liberating” cause because they have been told by others what they should do. They are people who believe in the idea of liberation, and who have been working hard to achieve it.

The history of property ownership, women have been set apart by society in which values assigned to the “female principalities” (marriage, company, respect) are not assigned to the “female” human being. Women have been set apart by society in this way since they were forced to be property owners. Today, the idea of liberation is gaining strength among women. The idea of liberation is that women should be able to live as they choose, to make their own decisions, to be equal to men.

Parochial controversy: Nixon to seek govt aid?

President Nixon has just come out with an indication of his position on the issue of federal aid for parochial schools. The President's statement is significant because it appears to have been shaped by the thinking of some of the conservative leaders in the country who believe that the use of federal funds for parochial schools would be a violation of the Constitution, whereas the President's statement suggests that it would not.

The President's position on this issue is important because it suggests that the possibility of federal aid for parochial schools is no longer a matter of pure speculation. It appears that the President is prepared to support the use of federal funds for parochial schools if they are used to provide educational services that are not available in other schools.

These leaders have been very active in recent months in opposing federal aid for parochial schools, and their influence appears to have been felt by the President in shaping his position on this issue.

Perrin seeks student voice in new 'U' post

By MARTHYB PATTERTON

In his new position as vice president for University relations, Robert Perrin will look toward creating a two-way communication network on the campus. Perrin, who took over Monday, will be responsible for internal and external communications and federal relations, a position that also includes efforts to improve relations with the media, students and parents. "I've been given the job of encouraging the media and keeping them on track, and keeping the University informed as well as informing the University," he said.

Perrin said that while he has no formal role in the day-to-day administration, his performance will be tied to the success of the University. He added that he will work with the administration to ensure that the University is communicating with the students and parents.

PARENTS' DILEMMA

Identity lost in divorce

By ALAN MALONE

The Rev. Carl Staser, pastor at St. Paul's William Street Congregational Church in Lansing, and leader of a group which advises parents going through a divorce is frustrated by the parents' lack of communication.

"The parent who knows the problem, he said, is no longer able to give support, and the other parent faced with the children's problems has to deal with a parent who has been frustrated and overwhelmed.

"Parents don't know who they are," the Rev. Mr. Staser said. "They project no image as a child who can relate, and consequently the children are left to adjust on their own.

He added children without a home are more self oriented, and without the guidance of a parent, they are more likely to feel a sense of worth.

"Children want to see that for mother is loved by a man - that both father is loved by woman," he said.

The Rev. Mr. Staser said the children of divorce are "in a very unhealthy place. They are going to be in a bad state for a long time.

It is the children adjusting, he said, are most upset because they have no place to turn. They should have that relationship with either of their parents.

The Rev. Mr. Staser said he has been studying the divorce problem for the last few years and realizes there are instances and situations where the children will be able to adjust.

"As long as they have a parent who is supportive of them, they will be able to adjust," he said.

He added he hopes the children will be able to find some way to deal with their problems.

"I'll be asking questions and I hope people will bring ideas to me," he said. "This will be a continuing operation with me and they'll be able to set out on educating myself," headded.

"It's easy to say that people come to ask me to solve things, but it's not easy to set up the machinery for this," he said. "I'm looking for a means of communication for students, faculty and administration."

Perrin said that an external communication includes direction of information services and "acquiring the community and other people with what's going on on campus - on campus that might affect the community."

He takes over responsibility for information services from Gordon Barker, vice president for special projects. Barker had been temporary head of University Relations since September when James H. Denison died in an automobile accident. Barker will step down after 22 years in the post.

At the head of federal relations, Perrin will try to keep up with all the goings on in Washington as far as general education goes. "I will not be in Washington," he said. "The position is not a position he or she will take time to educate me."
Charlie Brown fans face disappointment in musical

Once upon a time, a musical, "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," was to be performed by a group of kids at a local high school. They would eventually bring their creation fans and family and seat a firm place for themselves in the hearts of audiences around the country.

The cast of the musical included students, as well as professional actors, who had been part of the original Broadway production.

The show was directed by Mark Anderson, former director of the Michigan State University Department of Theatre and Dance.

The musical is set in the fictional town of Sunnydale, and follows the life of Charlie Brown as he navigates his daily struggles and triumphs.

The opening night of the musical was scheduled for next Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the school's auditorium. Tickets were $10 for adults and $5 for students and seniors.

However, due to unforeseen circumstances, the show was postponed until the following week.

The school's administration was disappointed but remained hopeful that the show would go on as scheduled.

In the meantime, the students are working hard to bring the musical to life, practicing every day after school and during weekends.

The show promises to be a heartwarming tale of friendship, love, and triumph over adversity, just like the original Broadway production.

The cast and crew are excited to share their passion and talent with the audience, and hope to bring a smile to everyone's face.

Stay tuned for updates on the status of the musical production, and don't miss your chance to see "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown."

Hoyt Axton comes on soft and strong in new album

The album cover tells it all. There is nothing all that new about Hoyt Axton. "Mr. Gruff, Mr. Grump," as he has been called, revisits the same old chugging sound, complete with an album of old songs and a new one of his own. "I Don't Wanna Be Here, I Don't Wanna Be You," is a song that seems to have been written for Hoyt. It is a slow, mournful tune, with languid, melancholy lyrics that perfectly capture his mood. The song is accompanied by a beautiful acoustic guitar, and Hoyt's voice is as rich and deep as ever. The album is a testament to his skill as a singer and songwriter, and it is sure to please his many fans.

AIDS TO SLUMBER

Sleep: tranquilizer of the mind

By Valerie Restivo

If you have trouble sleeping, you might want to consider the effects of Aurora 15, a new tranquilizer that has been shown to improve sleep quality. This medication has been found to be more effective than other existing sleep aids, such as barbiturates and benzodiazepines. Aurora 15 is a relatively new drug, but it has already gained popularity among those who struggle with insomnia. It works by calming the mind and encouraging deep, restful sleep. If you are looking for a natural alternative to prescription sleep medications, Aurora 15 could be a good option for you.

Student's plays to take spotlight

Hoyt Axton has many students at MSU, and their life experiences have contributed to the many songs that have appeared on his albums. Axton's music is known for its strong, honest, and personal lyrics, which often reflect his own struggles and triumphs. His songs have a way of speaking directly to the listener, and his voice has a unique quality that makes him one of the most distinctive singers of his generation.
Ron Gutkowski: guts on defense

By MIKE MANLEY
Sports Writer

Running down court, arm flailing and leg pumping, looking exactly like the way he is listed, Mark Gutkowski would not alter the outcome of the Wisconsin game. The 6-foot-11 senior, who is one of the top 10 players in the Big Ten, was in his third game in a row without scoring. Gutkowski was playing against the nation’s top offensive threat, Michigan’s 6-foot-11 center and national player of the year, Dwayne Wayne. Gutkowski’s frustration mounted as Michigan’s 6-foot-6 guard, Donnie Marshall, picked on Gutkowski’s shortcoming and turned the game into a 110-95 rout for the Wolverines.

"It's not easy to see your defense going through something like this," said coach Jerry Tarkanian. "We're going to have to work on it a little more." Gutkowski, who scored 10 points in the first half, went scoreless after halftime, finishing with three points and five rebounds.

"I might not think he can make it in the pros," he said, "not even in the NBA — he’s only 6-11 and 240 pounds." Gutkowski insisted he had felt good in the first half, but he said he had to get his head straightened out.

"I know I have to go out and do it every night," he said. "You can’t just expected that the team will take care of you. I have to do it myself."

The season began in December, when Gutkowski had been the team’s best defensive player, and when the team was up to 20-5. The team has since dropped to 8-11, and Gutkowski’s latest effort was his worst.

"I think he’s a very good player," said Michigan’s coach, Jerry Tarkanian. "He’s got a lot of potential, but he has to work on his defense." Gutkowski, who said he has had a sore ankle all season, said he was feeling better now.

In addition to the usual tasks for the week's Big Ten meet, the next Florida State team will be completing just as soon as it will be able— preparations for a championship match. At least four returning Florida State runners, the meet would be the third to enter the 1950 meet after the championship.

The team is a part of the competition in each event and the chances of the Spartan competitors. Defending 121 champ Gary Gillette (1:55.9) has had only one 2:00 race this season, but finished the season strong and was a strong contender in Florida State's meet. Bob Holtzer (1:53.2) of Ohio State is a returning champion, as is another athlete, Hellickson (1:54.5).

Others returning: Mike Anderson, Ohio State. This would be one of the most competitive meets in the matching strong events.

For the unexpected reason of who came to coach the Michigan State basketball team for the last six games, the University of Michigan and Wisconsin were expected to be the most competitive series in the match. The Badger goalie stopped 39 shots to tie the game, as well as his team's scoring, 3-2.

The series opener against the university of Wisconsin last Saturday was for the first time in a row, Michigan and Wisconsin are scheduled to meet. The Michigan Defense has scored three goals in the last three games, including a 3-0 win over Wisconsin in the first round.

The Badgers have scored three goals in a row, with the University of Wisconsin scoring 11 goals to date.

The Badgers are a tough team to beat. They have scored three goals in the first game of the season with the Michigan State hockey team scoring 10 goals in that game.

When the end is near, it is always best to go out fighting, and that is exactly what the Michigan State gymnastics team was doing when they won the Big Ten championship Friday. The injury-plagued Spartans could make up for lost time by competing in the Big Ten championships on Saturday.

Graduation plans are not yet final, but sources in Lansing indicate that Michigan State University will probably move to a 3-year degree program, with the master's degree non-degree oriented. This move would most likely be aimed at increasing the enrollment of students who are interested in the arts and humanities.

The move would also be expected to increase the number of students who are interested in graduate work, as the master's degree program would be more flexible and would allow students to work on a project of their own choosing. This would be in line with the university's goal of providing a more personalized educational experience for its students.

The decision to move to a 3-year degree program is expected to be made in the next few weeks, and the university is expected to announce its decision in the next few months.
